TEA, BUTTER AND MARGARINE LIKE DIAMONDS IN ENGLAND

Almost Impossible to Purchase Them in Many Districts.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The demand made by the Labour Convention that the Government secure a more equitable distribution of foodstuffs arose from the constantly-growing difficulty experienced, especially by the poorer classes, in obtaining a few staple articles.

No difficulty has yet been experienced in obtaining bread, which, under the Government subsidy system, is the cheapest food on the market. Potatoes and fresh vegetables are also plentiful, and comparatively cheap, while meat, although less plentiful than formerly, still is in fair supply and at prices ranging below those of a few months ago.

This is due also to Government control. Fruits fresh and dried, for which the country is dependent upon imported supplies, are still obtainable, but at higher prices and in limited amounts. The articles most difficult to obtain, and which have caused quite a scandal, are tea, butter, lard, and margarine. It is almost impossible to purchase butter. Scarcity of milk is noticeable only in the poorer districts of the big towns.

The lack of milk is due to reduced imports of concentrating feeding stuffs and the ploughing up of pasture land for the growing of cereals. The shortage in milk is being partly met by the prohibition to use milk or cream in the manufacture of sweet stuffs, and the stoppage of the sale of milk as a beverage in restaurants and other places.

The price of these, however, is high, and the Government is being urged to take steps to secure a cheaper rate to poor nursing mothers and children.

The tea scarcity showed itself very suddenly and many persons suspected that this was a trade dodge to divert the people to coffee of which it is believed there are ample supplies in the country especially as it is noticeable that there never is any difficulty in obtaining tea as a beverage in the restaurants, luncheon rooms and tea rooms. The British however are not a coffee-drinking nation and the government has been able to fix the price of coffee at the nearest approach to the pre war standard of any article of food, namely 18 pence per pound.

MARIE CORELLI FINED FOR HOARDING.

London, Jan. 2. — Marie Corelli novelist, and Lady Mabel Gore Langton, sister of Earl Temple, were among to-day's victims of the Food Controller's regulations against hoarding food, the former being fined 50 pounds and 20 pounds costs, while Lady Langton was fined 80 pounds.

Miss Corelli was charged with having purchased excessive quantities of sugar. In her defence she said that the sugar was to be used in making jam. Lady Langton was accused of having purchased excessive quantities of tea, coffee, sugar and other provisions.

Provision For Appeals By The Farmers

OTTAWA, Jan. 2.—Hon. J. D. Reid, Acting Minister of Agriculture, was asked to-day about complaints said to have been made in some counties that the Government is not administering the provisions of the order-in-Council passed on the 3rd day of December, which authorized the Minister of Agriculture to protect the national interest in connection with the production of foodstuffs by appointing a representative to attend the sittings of Local Tribunals on behalf of farmers' sons and farm help, and to enter appeals from the decision of such Tribunals where she considered such action necessary in the public interest. The Acting Minister stated that the complaints in question, if made, were quite unfounded.

Representatives of the Department of Agriculture were promptly appointed in each county to investigate individual cases and report to the Tribunals as to whether the services of the particular men drafted were urgently needed on the farm for the increased production of foodstuffs. Such representatives were also authorized to appeal in cases where they considered such action necessary and to appear in person before the Appeal Tribunals. Further, should the representatives of the Department of Agriculture consider that the decision of the local Appeal Tribunal was not in accordance with the facts submitted, he was empowered to take a further appeal to the Hon. Mr. Justice Duff, the Central Appeal Judge.

Apart from the above, it is pointed out, the Military Service Act permits any person refused exemption by the Local Tribunal to appeal personally against the decision, and, even if the time for appealing under the regulations has expired, special leave to appeal can be obtained in all proper cases upon application through the District Registrar.

The recipes for Baked Beans, Brown Bread, and Barley Bread, mentioned above, are as follows:

Brown Bread—

2 cups Graham flour
1 cup white flour
3-4 cup molasses
1 3-4 cups sweet milk
3-4 teaspoon soda
1 1-2 teaspoons salt.

Sift the flour, salt and soda. Add the molasses and the milk. Pour into well greased moulds and steam about three hours.

Barley Bread—

4 2-3 cups wheat flour
2 1-3 cups barley flour
2 cups milk and water, or water
1 cake compressed yeast
2 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons salt.

Soften the yeast in part of the liquid. Combine all the ingredients, and mix into a dough. Knead and let rise to double its bulk. Knead again. Put into the pan, and when double its bulk bake about three-quarters of an hour. This recipe makes two loaves

Baked Beans—

Pick over the beans, cover with cold water and soak over night. In morning drain, cover with fresh water, heat slowly (keeping water below boiling point), and cook until skins burst. Drain beans, throwing out the water. Put into a bean pot a few pieces of salt pork cut into cubes. Cover with the beans, and add 1 tablespoon of salt, 1 tablespoon of molasses, 3 tablespoons of sugar. For every quart of dry beans used, add 1 cup of boiling water, and as they cook add more boiling water to cover. Cover the bean pot, put it in the oven, and bake slowly six or eight hours, or cook in a fireless cooker. Some prefer to add a little mustard.

Captain Tardien Says Six Months Will Decide The Struggle

French High Commissioner Returns With Warning For America—New Sacrifices Are Necessary—Declined Place in the Cabinet.

WORK FOR VICTORY

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Captain Andre Tardieu, French High Commissioner to the United States, arrived yesterday at an Atlantic port from France.

In a statement made later at the Plaza Hotel, he declared the Entente Allies are entering the hardest period of the war, but a period which will prove richest in decisive results. "If we know how to play a good game." The issue will be decided in the next six months, he said.

Captain Tardieu first arrived in this country last May. He returned to France in November, at the time the Inter-Allied War Conference was held in Paris. His official title as High Commissioner will continue for a period of six months. That he might retain his post here he declined a portfolio in Premier Clemenceau's Cabinet, stating as his reasons that "nothing is more urging and necessary than the work to be done through this Commissionership."

"A strong German attack," his statement declared, "is probable, or at least possible, on the western front during this winter. I am absolutely confident that it shall be another Verdun.

New Sacrifices Necessary.

"The battle is not only on the battlefield. I have told to the French, with complete frankness, what America expects from them in the way of restrictions and new sacrifices. I am coming back to explain here the necessary sacrifices that France and her allies are expecting from America for victory.

"Men, wheat, oil, ships and locomotives are the things most needed and which America is able to give."

Captain Tardieu paid high tribute to Colonel E. M. House, who headed the American mission to the conference.

"Thanks to the presence of Colonel House and his associates," the statement adds, "the Inter-Allied Conference has done excellent work. It is necessary that the government of the United States should assert its will and its capacity to take, in Europe, the part which belongs to America in the direction of the war.

"The French army has never been more magnificent, the British army is equally superb and the American army is increasing every day. In regard to the French army, please believe a man who fought during the first two years of the war, who knows well his companions in arms and who has just approached them again. If the enemies attack they will not pass.

Declined Place in Cabinet.

"Those things which you are able to give us will only be possible by restricting yourselves severely. I am sure you will agree to this sacrifice if it is shown clearly to be of an absolute urgency.

"I tell you the facts as I see them. There are people in France who reproach me for speaking too brutally. There will be some here, perhaps, who will make the same criticism. I do not care. The heavy war mission, with which I am trusted, does not consist in telling pleasant things, but in telling useful things. When I am telling them I can add that I speak with full authority, in the name of the chief of the French government, Mr. Clemenceau.

"To be able to come back here I made the most difficult decision which I have had to make during my political career— refusing to remain in Paris as a Minister in Mr. Clemenceau's Cabinet. You know that my good colleague and friend Lord Northcliffe has done the same and has refused to enter the British Cabinet.

Next Six Months To Be Decisive.

"It is because we both believe, in accord with our government, that nothing is more urging and more necessary than what we are doing here, in direct connection with your industrious President and his government. But to do it, and to do it well, above all things, truth must be told, always, everywhere. Rely upon me for not failing in this duty, and remember also that, if the war can last yet a long time, it is, however, during the next six months that its issue will be decided.

"That is why, from the first day, I am anxious to impress upon American opinion the object and the ways.

"Now, let us work for the victory."

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Enlarged Glands.

When children have enlarged glands in the neck or elsewhere they should always be placed under the care of a physician. Very often well meaning mothers make local applications that do more harm than good because they hasten the softening that is so much to be dreaded. What is true of applications is also true of handling or rubbing. All tuberculous processes and glandular swellings should be kept as quiet as possible. For that reason if the swelling occurs on some part of the body where there is much movement, such as the groin, the patient should either remain in bed or the part affected should be made immovable by means of splints and bandages. An open air life and nourishing food are essential, for everything possible must be done to maintain the general health. The enemy as yet has gained only a local footing. The fight must be to prevent the disease from becoming general and constitutional.

Winter and Summer Sun.

The sun is nearer to the earth in winter than it is in summer. It is not distance that determines the amount of heat that we get from the sun, but the length of time the sun is above the horizon and the direction in which its rays strike us. In summer, although much farther from us, the sun is daily above the horizon much longer than when he is nearest, at the winter solstice, and this continued action produces the summer heat. In addition to this is to be reckoned the fact that in summer the force of the sun's rays is more perpendicular to the earth's surface, while in the winter they are oblique. In the case of the perpendicular ray the heat stays, while in that of the oblique ray it "glances off," so to speak.

Cut Glass Is Fragile.

Cut glass probably would break more easily than moon pattern glass. The pattern in cut glass is cut by means of grinding wheels. Most glass patterns are usually molded. The angles in cut glass are better defined and sharper. The cutter also may, in some cases, drive his wheel a little deeper than in other spots. Obviously the glass at such points would be thinner and more fragile.

His Excuse.

"Why did you snatch this lady's purse?"

"My wife told me when I left home in the morning to get her a recipe for a new salad dressing, and I thought sure I'd find one in her pocketbook, judge."

ONLY A VOLUNTEER.

I am only a volunteer, I know,
I don't amount to much,
But I'm one of the men who shouldered the gun
To conquer the German Dutch.
When the bugle sounded the call to arms,
I took my place at the rear,
And was glad of the chance to serve my King,
Though I'm only a volunteer.

You have catered to leaders of social fame,
You have boasted of U.E. birth,
You have sung that Britannia must rule the waves
And her armies encircle the earth.
You have nestled securely beneath the flag,
For which you've given many a cheer,
Forgetting the while it is kept aloft
By the Canadian volunteers.

I'm only a volunteer, I know,
I wear no decoration,
But I'm one of the men who made victory sure
For the arms of the Allied nations.
I know I'm not a Jellicoe,
A Joffre, a Cadorna, or a French—
I'm only one of the humble lads
Who fought like h—l in the trench.

You have told your friends what you could do
If you had a million men;
You'd drive the Germans to h—l and back,
And end the war right then.
You could fill the place of the cleverest man
Already in the fray;
But you wisely planned to stay at home,
Three thousand miles away.

Yes, I'm only a volunteer, that's all,
I have nothing of which to boast,
But I'm proud of the men with whom I stood,
Each willing to die at his post.
I do not look for applause of the world,
My duty seems mighty clear;
It's honour enough for me to know
That I'm only a volunteer.

You have sat on your cushioned seat in the church,
And prayed to the crucified Son
For the lives of men who are fighting
To be spared from sword of the Hun;
But your loyalty fled with each Amen,
And selfishness dimmed your eye;
Your neighbour's son could go to the Front—
Your own was too good to die.

I'm only a volunteer, I know,
But I have a mother, too;
She loves her son as you love yours,
But her heart is good and true.
"Off to the war, my lad," she said,
"Of the future have no fear;
God's blessing will always follow the trail
Of the Canadian volunteer."

You growled at those who were doing their best
To save the Empire's fall;
You could see no good in any one
Because you could do it all;
But you strutted around in muffti,
Forgetting the nation's plight,
And you shared in the profits secured through blood;
Now, d—n it, come on and fight.

Yes, I'm only a volunteer, that's all,
My reward may come early or late;
But my conscience is clear and my heart is gay,
And I'm satisfied to wait.
It matters not if my old bones
Rest above or under the sod,
I will know I have done my duty
And will be ready to meet my God.

You have sounded the praises of statesmen
And exalted the men of finance;
You have played to the kings and lords and dukes
Of Britain, Russia and France.
You have shouted for members of Parliament,
For departed friends shed a tear;
But it seems to me you have overlooked
The Canadian volunteer.

A Ready Witted Parson.

The evening lesson was from the book of Job, and the minister had just read, "Yea, the light of the wicked shall be put out," when immediately the church was in total darkness.

"Brethren," said the minister, with scarcely a moment's pause, "in view of the sudden and startling fulfillment of this prophecy, we will spend a few minutes in silent prayer for the electric lighting company."

PAMPERED BERLIN.

Capital of Germany Better Treated Than Other Cities.

If there is a revolt against the Kaiser, it will not have its origin in Berlin. Rarely are the harrowing phases of the war revealed to the people of the metropolis. Berlin is coddled, pampered. The burden that is imposed on her is not as heavy as that borne by other municipalities. Her food supply is greater, and the restrictions are not as tightly drawn. The cities in the extreme North are lifeless. Unable to contribute their share to the great conflict, they are neglected, a greater toll of man-power being exacted from them. Photographs were shown in private circles of the 'longshore women of Cuxhaven being driven like sheep to load the ships with supplies for mother ships or submarine bases: mere shapeless snags of women—flat-chested and devoid of feminine grace, slouching along with unwomanly disregard of their appearance. And yet, three years ago these coarse, frowsy creatures were noted for the sturdiness of their carriage and a certain rugged voluptuousness. The government considered these photographs of sufficient importance to make a house-to-house search in the district for copies of them and to arrest the holder of the negative.

The bitter discontent of the Southern cities is not apparent in Berlin. The poverty is more successfully hidden. Fewer bread and fuel riots have been reported in this city than in other places, where the factories have turned blank fronts for the past two years. Now and then there is an attempt by the authorities to force things, 'whoop her up,' as one hears at the camp-meetings; to make people forget their troubles. Shortly after Mr. Gerard's departure a slight military gain, which had been magnified by the Government into a great victory, was seized upon as an occasion to enhearten the burghers. Berlin broke into bunting, and there was a great deal of handshaking and a mighty chorus of 'Hochs' in the neighborhood of Wilhelmstrasse, with a feebler echo from the people. Restrictions were removed for the day, and an attempt was made to revive the old street-dancing. 'Berlin wachelt (foxtrots) in the face of her enemies,' was the way the papers described it next day. Yes, the city was gay; but it was like a re-dyed carpet, brilliant in spots, with the worn and faded portion painfully visible at the seams and edges.—Atlantic Monthly.

History Repeats Itself.

"Can't say that the world is getting a bit smarter," asserted grandpa. "My grandson asks me the same silly questions that his father asked at his age."

But He Did.

Teacher—Bobby, give an example of the double negative.

Bobby—I don't know none.

The love of country is more powerful than reason itself.

Historic Macao.

For many years the Portuguese, through their rulership of Macao, held control of the foreign trade of China, for this was the only safe, friendly port where foreign ships could anchor. Here the merchantmen of the Honorable East India company, the tea clipper ships from Boston and Salem and the Dutch ships on their way to Nagasaki stopped for supplies, repairs and the news of the world. St. Francis Xavier lived here and from here made his ineffectual efforts to reach the mainland of China. He is buried on a nearby island. Here the first treaty between the United States and China was signed, and here American diplomatic officials lived before they were allowed on Chinese soil. It was here that the first Chinese firecrackers were purchased by American skippers and brought home to start a custom which has enlivened and endangered a century of Fourths of July.—Argonaut.

Dixie's Land.

The term "Dixie's Land" originated in New York in the early part of the past century. It is said to have come into general use when Texas joined the Union, and the negroes sang of it as "Dixie."

In the popular mythology of New York city Dixie was the negro's paradise on earth in times when slavery and the slave trade were flourishing in that quarter. Dixie owned a tract of land on Manhattan Island, and also a large number of slaves, and his slaves increased faster than his land, an emigration ensued and naturally negroes who left it for distant parts looked to it as a place of unalloyed happiness, and it was the "old Virginny" of the negroes of that day; hence Dixie became synonymous with an ideal locality combining ineffable happiness and every imaginable requisite of earthly beatitude.

Panama.

The first permanent settlement in the new world was established at Panama on Aug. 15, 1519, by Pedrarias, the Spanish governor. In exploring the Pacific coast along the isthmus a Spanish adventurer found a small fishing village called Panama, and on the date given above the governor established his capital there. Two years later, by royal decree, Panama was made a city and the seat of a bishop.

In France there is an idea that if a fisherman counts the fish he has caught he will catch no more from that time on during that day.

WHILE AT WAR
Women Suffer at Home

Toronto, Ont.—"I consider Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription the very best of woman's tonics. I suffered a severe nervous breakdown. I could not sleep, was weak and tired all the time. I took the 'Prescription' and just a few bottles completely built me up and relieved me of my nervous condition. It is a good medicine and I am glad to recommend it.—Mrs. Alfred Sheppard, 250 Seaton St.

Niagara Falls, Ont.—"I can safely say that 'Favorite Prescription' did me a lot of good. I at one time developed woman's trouble; my nerves were completely shattered, and I became weak. I had severe backache and pains in my side, extending down into my limbs. I doctored, but did not get relieved of my ailment and was down and out when I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and it so completely cured me and restored me to health and strength and others besides. I do recommend 'Favorite Prescription' to weak and ailing women; they cannot get a better medicine."—Mrs. John Lockwart, 28 Terrace Ave.

Favorite Prescription is an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and strengthening nervine and a positive remedy for the chronic weaknesses peculiar to women.

This old prescription of Dr. Pierce's is extracted from roots and herbs by means of pure glycerine and is a temperance remedy of 50 years' good standing. Send 10c for trial pkg. of tablets to Dr. V. M. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., or Bridgeburg, Ont.

Her First Journey.

Margaret, five years old, was traveling for the first time. She sat as if entranced by the view from the car window.

Her father, noticing the rapt expression on her face as the train sped along, said:

"What do you think of it, Margaret?"

She replied: "Oh, father, it is just like a picture book, only you don't have to turn the pages."

Dehydrating.

Dehydrating is simply what was formerly known as drying fruits and vegetables. The old method of paring and slicing apples, stringing the slices and hanging them up to dry, although called drying, was really dehydrating.

Took It to Herself.

"She's a vain girl. There is no mirror handy, so now she is looking at the barometer."

"How will the barometer cater to her vanity?"

"It says, 'Fair.'"

Keeping Your Friends.

It is almost impossible to be genuinely friendly with a person who insists on being too close to you, on knowing all your thoughts, feelings and affairs and on claiming your time and attention on the excuse of affection alone.

The bonds of true friendship must be easy, and its demands must be for something real and vital. The woman who calls on you perpetually because she has taken a sudden fancy to you is a blind and selfish egotist in a mild way. Her calls may interrupt your work and bore you intensely, but if you are a polite and courteous person you bear with her until she directs her attention elsewhere. She will probably tell the new friend that you are "very unresponsive." Some women clutch at every new acquaintance and then complain that they have so few friends. The reason is that friendship is not built on trivialities and whims, but by giving such valuable things as true consideration, real interest and manifesting a decent reserve as to the other person's confidences and noncon fidings.

To Tell a Fish's Age.

Could you tell the age of a fish if asked to do so?

It has been found that the age of a fish may be read from its scales. These increase in size by annular growths, two rings being formed each year. The "otoliths," or ear stones, which lie in two sacs on either side of the base of the cranial cavity, afford another means of determination.

Like the scales, the otoliths increase by two rings annually. Each spring a white ring is formed and each autumn a black one. Thus the number of either white or black rings in an otolith gives the age of the fish in years. In the case of flatfish the latter method has been found more reliable, whereas in the case of the cod the scales give a better result. Although varying much in size and shape in different species, the otoliths show a remarkable constancy in the same species; hence they are of considerable value in the diagnosis of a species.

A Voiceless Auctioneer.

At the regular trade auctions held in the Netherlands instead of having an auctioneer call for bids there is a large dial provided with an index hand. The face of the dial is marked with prices, increasing in clockwise fashion. The hand is set at a price above that which the goods offered will probably bring, then is slowly moved to lower and lower figures until some trader indicates his willingness to buy.

Electric push buttons are connected with the dial, which the traders press when a price satisfactory to them is shown by the dial. As the trader presses his button his number appears on the face of the dial and the lot of goods is sold to him at the price indicated by the index hand. There is no noise or confusion, and the auctions are finished in a remarkably short space of time.

Accurate Grinding Wheels.

Grinding wheels have fine work to do, writes Ellwood Hendrick in the Scientific American. Limits of irregularity as low as 0.0005 inches and 0.00024 inches are often given. And it should be remembered that when 0.00025 of an inch is being ground the heavy slide that carries the wheel and wheel spindles moves forward only half that distance. If a piece of tissue paper were split twelve times consecutively it would have the thickness under which these machines have constantly to work. And yet when we consider the forces present in a wheel weighing 200 pounds rotating at a speed of 1,200 revolutions per minute we are not reminded of a watchmaker's lathe despite the exquisite precision of the operation.

Ready, Go!

An old farmer lay dying. The minister was sent for and prayed at the bedside. Then, at the last minute, the sick man rallied.

"Ah, my dear," he said to his better half, "it may be I'll be spared to you yet."

The old wife frowned and said grimly: "No, no, George. You're prepared and I'm resigned. Die now.

In His Class.

"Is this liniment a fraud or will it really ease the pain in my ankle?" demanded the pompous and aggressive customer in the drug store.

"Well, you stand a chance, anyhow," responded the polite attendant. "The label declares it 'good for man or beast.'"

Sea Lions.

The fur seals are not closely allied to the hair seals, but find their nearest relatives in the sea lions, whose skill in water and whose remarkable acrobatic performances in zoological gardens and even on the stage.

Never Despair.

He who despairs wants love, wants faith, for faith, hope and love are three torches which bleed their light together, nor does the one shine without the other.

What He Wanted.

Redd—What was the sensation when you went up in an aeroplane for the first time? Greene—I seemed to want the earth.

Quite Different.

Dentist—Do you want your tooth pulled? Patient—Certainly not, but it has to be pulled just the same.

There is no dependence that can be sure but a dependence upon oneself.

When a man is spoiling for a fight he is usually too fresh.

One quart of liquor is needed to drown a spoonful of trouble.

Save Food

IF you cut down your food by one fifth, how can you still obtain the same amount of nourishment as before? The problem looks impossible, but it is not so in fact, for if you get more nourishment from the food you do eat you will solve it.

Take an instance. If there are 5 units of nourishment in bread when you buy it, you expect to get 5 units when you eat it. As a matter of fact you do not get that, because a good deal of the nourishment is lost, for it is not absorbed by the body.

There is a simple way to reduce this loss, a way tested and approved by the highest scientific authorities. It is to take Bovril.

The "Medical Times" says:

"The addition of a small teaspoonful of Bovril to the diet as a peptogenic before meals leads to more thorough digestion and assimilation and thus saves food.

"The diet may be then cut down from ¼ to ⅓ and the body still be adequately nourished."

The above is an extract from the review by the "Medical Times" of the investigations on Food Economy conducted by Dr. J. Campbell, late Food Expert to the Metropolitan (London, England) Campaign for Food Economy.

Save the Nation's food and keep yourself well fed by taking a cup of Bovril as soup before meals, or by using a little Bovril in your cooking.

Parrots and Water.

"There is a curious superstition existent among parrot keepers," says L. S. Crandall in Pets, "to the effect that these birds not only require no water, but are better off without it. The foundation for this absurd belief is not hard to find. When parrots, particularly young birds, are being brought from the tropics they are customarily fed on boiled corn or bread and milk. What moisture they require is obtained from the food. If such birds are suddenly given access to unlimited water the effect on the digestive organ is dangerous and may result in the death of the bird. On the other hand, if the parrot be given a drink daily and then the water be removed for a short period the bird will gradually become accustomed to it. Once this is accomplished there is nothing to fear from clear water."

Critics Not Infallible.

One of the small Paris theatres has cut about proving that dramatic critics are not infallible. Every evening before the rise of the curtain on an adversely criticised but no less successful play, the irate manager appears, bearing a bundle of newspapers, from which he reads the objectionable condemnatory excerpts. Having thus stated the newspaper view of his play, he leaves the rest to the judgment of the audience, which, in many cases, proves highly favorable to author, actors, and manager.

Pay After Peace.

The London County Council has decided to buy the London part of the London United Tramways Company's lines, a length of about five and a half miles, for £235,000. Payment is to be made not earlier than the declaration of peace."

Danger In Haste.

In a Vermont town they tell of a suitor who, after some years of devotion, finally proposed to the lady of his choice.

"But, Henry," protested the lady, "this is really sudden! You had better give me a week to think it over!"

"Very well, my dear," said Henry. "And," after due reflection, he added, "perhaps it would be as well if I thought it over myself at the same time!"

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A ROMAN SCARFPIN

It Started a Romance

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

My grandfather was a sporty old gentleman and at sixty-three was as marked in his attentions to the ladies as a young man of twenty-five. And there was something about him that drew the fair sex to him. I have seen a girl of twenty gladly leave a young man of twenty-five to chat with the old gentleman, very much to the younger one's dissatisfaction. I liked to hear him tell his escapades, and one day he related the following story:

When I was a young man a railroad train was a very different conveyance from what it is now. There were no sleeping or parlor cars, the coupling was the old method—by means of a pin and link, permitting the cars to swing from side to side—and, as for lights, there were nothing but lanterns. When a train passed through a tunnel these lanterns were left unlighted and the passengers in darkness.

I was traveling one day on one of these loosely bound together trains—I think I was nineteen years old at the time—when I had an adventure which influenced my whole life. On the opposite side of the car, several seats before me, sat a very pretty girl. She had a mouth that can only be described as kissable. I would have defied any one who saw it to refrain from wanting to kiss those vermilion lips.

At any rate, as soon as I saw them I was seized with a desire to kiss them, and the oftener I looked at them the stronger became the inclination. We had traveled in the same coach for several hours when suddenly the train shot into a tunnel.

The moment we were left in darkness an idea popped into my head. It was to go across the aisle and kiss those lips. I knew the tunnel and that a train required several minutes to pass through it. I would have what time I needed. The girl would not know who had kissed her. She might suspect me, but she would not be certain that I was the aggressor, and I had confidence in my ability to look innocent.

I arose from my seat, counted three seats forward by putting my hand on their backs and sought the girl by feeling for her. My hand touched her sleeve. I bent forward, brushed my face against hers till my lips met hers and took what, under the circumstances, might be called a reasonably long kiss.

I expected a shriek, but beyond a not overloud expression of surprise, which was drowned by the rattle of the train, there was no comment on my audacity. As soon as I had gratified my desire—every one knows how sweet is a stolen kiss—I retreated to my seat, and when the train left the tunnel my head was resting on the back of my seat, and I was a picture of innocent slumber.

After a few minutes I opened my eyes, yawned, looked out of the window and then about me. The girl was quietly reading a novel she had been perusing when the train entered the tunnel. I was pleased that she did not appear flustered. Her lips looked more kissable than ever, and I wished the whole journey were in a tunnel and I could repeat what I had done ad infinitum.

A young man is particular as to the set of his neckwear, and I passed my hand over my scarf to make sure that I had not disarranged it while stealing the kiss.

My scarfpin was missing.

Here was something on which I had not counted. The pin was a gift and a valuable one, a mosaic my mother had brought from the Eternal City. I knew that I had lost it while taking the kiss and had probably dropped it on the seat occupied by the girl or on the floor at her feet. But to look for it there would be a dead giveaway. What should I do? Brazen it out by making a search for the pin where I had lost it? I dared not.

In those days at the end of the car were a water cooler and a tin cup. I arose from my seat, walked slowly forward to the cooler, took a drink of water, turned and went back to my seat. As I passed the girl I glanced on the vacant part of the seat on which she sat and on the floor beside her, hoping to see my pin. It was not in sight. On my return trip I cast a momentary glance at the girl. She was reading her novel and did not look up. There was a suspicion of an amused look about those kissable lips.

Of course my examination of the seat and the floor was by no means thorough. I hoped the girl would leave the train before it reached my stopping place. This would give me an opportunity to make a satisfactory search for my pin. But we passed station after station without her making a move. Then came my stopping place. Should I give up my pin or go on till the girl left the train? I concluded to go on.

When the conductor came through the train after it left my stopping place and saw me still sitting there he stood still. This in itself was embarrassing. I bought a ticket to a point about twenty miles ahead. The girl, for some unexplained reason, turned and looked my way. There was the same suspicious look in her eye. The latter might have meant amusement, triumph or tantalization.

We rode on together for another ten miles, when the girl began to gather her belongings. Thank heaven, she was preparing to alight! True enough, when the next station, Talbotsville, was announced by the brakeman the young lady arose from her seat and moved to the door. She had scarcely reached it before I changed my seat for the one she had left and began my search.

I looked on the seat. I looked on the floor. I lit a match to see better while hunting beneath. No pin was to be seen. I examined the aisle between the seat I had occupied and that on which the girl had sat. I was doomed to disappointment.

I now suspected that she had my pin.

I left the train at the next station, took a cab and rode back to Talbotsville. There I visited the two newspaper offices of the place and left an advertisement at each stating that a mosaic scarfpin had been lost on a certain train and the finder would be properly rewarded for its return; no questions asked. Then I went to my home, having left instructions at the offices of the papers to send me any replies that might come for me.

A couple of days later I received a letter signed Julia Waterman stating that she had found a mosaic scarfpin on the train mentioned. As to "no questions asked," the finder of the pin would ask the questions. She would return the pin without reward after the loser had explained how he came to lose it.

My suspicion of an amused smile was now explained. The girl had had my pin all the while I was looking for it. It was evident that I must confess. I wrote Miss Waterman that no girl with such kissable lips should be permitted to travel on any train that passed through a tunnel, for they offered an irresistible temptation. I was quite willing to give my pin, though it was a gift from my dear mother, for the kiss I had taken. It grew sweeter each day in my memory. If she would accept the one in lieu of the other I would consider the account closed.

The next day I recovered my scarfpin by express and a note saying that the writer had no kisses to dispose of in exchange for anything. She reserved the right to give her kisses to whomsoever she might choose. Not another word did she write. There was no demand for an apology or for a confession from me that I had committed a wrong. What I didn't like about it was that it closed the incident.

Now, I did not propose that it should be closed. I wished to form the young lady's acquaintance with a view to getting another kiss. One more? No; a dozen. A dozen? No; a hundred, a thousand, ten thousand. But how regain the matter? I must invent some plan. Almost any plan would do, provided the young lady would be pleased to make my acquaintance. No plan would suffice if she desired that the matter be dropped. In other words, I might be the gainer by pushing on, and if I did not push on I would certainly be a loser.

I wrote her that I would be glad to explate my robbery by giving her my scarfpin, but since she would not accept it in exchange for what I had taken, I would be only too glad to donate it or its value to any charity she might designate. This would not be disposing of the kiss for her own benefit, but for the relief of the needy. With this note I sent the scarfpin. The offer without the pin would have been useless. By sending the pin I forced her to take another step.

When a woman gives way to a persistent admirer, she is apt to do so all to my note in a very different vein than before. She wrote me that I had behaved very well in atoning for my fault. As to what should be done with the pin, perhaps we had better talk the matter over. She would be pleased to have me call upon her for the purpose on a certain evening.

Napoleon at the battle of Wagram, when he saw a certain maneuver of the enemy, closed his fieldglass, considering the battle won. I folded Miss Waterman's note, considering that an acquaintance was effected. No more skirmishing was needed. On the evening designated I went over to the place of her residence on a train and at 8 o'clock in the evening appeared at her home.

Miss Waterman must have regretted her giving way or considered that an acquaintance formed in such manner was beneath her dignity. At any rate, she held me at some distance. This did not trouble me at all. There was plenty of time for it to wear off, and I made no mistake by proceeding too rapidly. She did not remain long on her dignity. She was full of love for adventure, and I had won her good will by my daring. We were soon laughing at the position I had been placed in, and she appeared to enjoy it immensely.

During the kiss in the dark her hand had come in contact with my scarfpin, and she had snatched it out of its place. She had noticed me, as I had noticed her—in fact, as boys and girls notice one another—and had especially admired my Roman scarfpin. When I passed her in the aisle on pretense of getting a glass of water, but really to look for the lost pin, she was brimming over with mischief.

That was half a century ago. That scarfpin never came back to me, but your grandmother gave herself to me in exchange for it. It has descended to your sister, who is the image of Julia Waterman when I stole that kiss in the dark.

But in the days of Pullman cars there are no such episodes as there were in unlighted railway trains and stagecoaches. Even the canalboat in those days furnished its quantum of romances.

German People Responsible.

German liberals are asserting that President Wilson has helped the reactionaries and hurt the reformers by making it appear that criticism of the Government is a form of aid rendered to the enemy. This does not seem very credible or important. These are times for blunt truth rather than for polite evasion. If the German people are willing to assume responsibility for their own affairs, and to take their place in the world with other people who have had enough of war and are willing to live on equal terms with their neighbors, they may read President Wilson's remarks and see how things look to the Allies. Germans ought to be ashamed of having succumbed to the mastery of the elements that have brought such disaster upon the German people and such disgrace to the German name. They must not think that we are not fully aware of the great struggle the social democrats were making a few years ago to save Germany from the very thing that has happened. German domination in the world by force is not going to be tolerated. The people of the Anglo-Saxon world hate war, and they do not hate the German people. Canadians do not wish to see any more German boys killed, nor do they desire any further desolation or bereavement in German homes. They call upon the German people to act responsibly.

Bank of France.

Ever since the commencement of hostilities the Bank of France has always most effectually contributed towards the defense of the nation. By a convention drawn up on November 11, 1911, the maximum of advances authorized by the Bank of France was fixed at 2,900 million francs. Successive conventions raised the figure to 6 milliards, on September 21, 1914; to 9 milliards, on May 4, 1916, and lastly, to 12 milliards, on February 13, 1917. In fact, advances for bills rose on December 31, 29 per cent. Even after setting aside the extra receipts for customs duties these gains still amount to 94,803,600 francs and 20,834,200 francs respectively. The later figures are particularly remarkable, for, in fact, this is the first time since the beginning of hostilities that rates and taxes have, exclusive of customs receipts, realized such a gain in comparison to the usual returns.

Hawaii's Wonders.

Among the many wonders of the island of Hawaii are:

The largest continuously active volcano in the world.

The largest island mountain mass in the world.

Two snow-capped mountains rising nearly 34,000 feet from a tropical sea coast.

Great banks of hot sulphur in process of formation.

Hundreds of marvellous lava caverns extending for unknown distances.

Great forests of koa or native mahogany trees.

The largest forest of tree-ferns in the universe.

Thirty-three heiaus or ancient temples of idol worship.

Extraordinary series of waterfalls in basaltic lava terraces.

Vast lava fields thickly studded with olivines.

A chain of 14 great volcanic craters extending for 20 miles in a straight line.

Many great cinder cones and weird lava formations.

Some of the loveliest tropical scenery in the world.

The famous Cave of Refuge at Kalapana in the heart of the noted Bird of Paradise country.

Unique Japanese fishing sampan harbor in mouth of beautiful river.

Many miles of magnificent coffee plantations and the only plantation in the world where coffee is grown under groves of shade trees.

The largest rubber tree in the western hemisphere.

Georges Clemenceau.

M. Clemenceau is not in the Painlevé Cabinet. Probably a man of his standing and experience could only lead and not enter a government. Then, of course, M. Clemenceau's capacities for construction are said by many not to equal his wonderful savoir-faire in the art of criticism. He is said to shun responsibility himself, while making it difficult for others to carry responsibility. However that may be, his denunciation and exposure of the spies and plotters, who were laying their snares under the nose of a really far too complacent Minister of the Interior, is certainly another feature in his cap.

The future will show if France is once more to be governed by Georges Clemenceau. He would not be exactly popular, but Herve declares that if it came to it, he would rather see the Tiger in power than Albert Thomas. But then, Herve thinks that the Socialist Party is proving itself very thoroughly tarred with the Marxian brush. His attitude is anything, even Clemenceau, rather than a Soviet!

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is musty and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

She Was Sane Enough.

As the doctor was showing some friends through an insane asylum he drew their attention to a stately old woman wearing a paper crown. He explained that she imagined she was the queen of England, and for their amusement he advanced towards her with a courtly bow and said: "Good morning, your majesty." The old woman looked at him and retorted scornfully: "You're a fool, sir." The doctor was greatly astonished, but totally collapsed when one of the party remarked innocently: "Why, doctor, she was sane enough then."

HOLLAND THREATENED.

Germany Has Designs Against This Little Nation.

Fear of German aggression has long prevailed in Holland. It has been stimulated by many German utterances. Holland lies across the mouths of the Rhine and is thus a barrier to German expansion in one obvious direction. There was much discontent among the Dutch when their queen married a German prince; they frankly confessed their suspicion that this was a step toward subjugation by Germany. The war can hardly have made them less apprehensive. Belgium was an object lesson they could not fail to note. Indeed, one potent argument for neutrality was the imminent danger that Holland would be overrun, too, if she entered the war on the side of the Allies. It was, perhaps, a sufficient argument. But in their trade dealings with the Germans the Dutch showed rather a desire to make all the money they could than a just recognition of their duties as neutrals. They are now rewarded by the harsh conditions Germany is imposing upon her shipbuilders and shipowners. Holland gets her iron and steel from Germany. She cannot get them hereafter unless she turns over her mercantile marine to Germany control.

There could not be a better illustration of the utter unscrupulousness of German policy, whether as regards neutrals or belligerents. Holland has clung to her German trade persistently, has exported goods to Germany. No one expected the Dutch, of course, to stop doing business with the Germans. But they have favored their German customers above all others; they have preferred the trade across the border to the trade across the North Sea. Some little gratitude was due to them for their friendship. But that is not the German way. Germany is too devoted to "the freedom of the seas" to permit rivalry at her own doors if she can help it. One reason for submarine attacks on neutral tonnage, especially that of Norway, the fourth maritime nation in the world, is plainly to reduce it so far as possible in order to serve German shipping interests after the war. A less expensive method, but one quite as effective, has been found in the case of Holland. Dutch shipbuilders must make returns to Germany of all the details of their business. Dutch shipowners must sign a five-year contract agreeing not to sell any vessel without German consent or to use any vessel in commerce with Germany's present enemies. Thus cheaply and effectively Germany seeks to increase the mercantile marine at her disposal when peace comes.

It may be too much to hope that such impudent demands will be refused. Holland has so far submitted to every injury done her by Germany. Yet as conditions now are on the western front it seems as if this humiliating disposition of her shipping interests would be a far worse thing than any injury which might be wrought upon her if by refusing to assent to it she were drawn into the war. At all events, she now knows what Germany means by "the freedom of the seas."

White Plague in France.

The French peasant is not fond of fresh air, his cottage has not many windows, and these are not often opened. Moreover, that country has been far behind Great Britain and the United States and Germany in the care and prevention of tuberculosis, so that there were many men in France who had the seeds of the disease in them, and in the stress of the hurried mobilising in August, 1914, there was no time for the proper medical examination to weed these out. With the Germans marching on Paris, who could stop so think if a soldier were tuberculous or no? So they went to the trenches, the damp, cold trenches, a fine breeding ground for disease, or they were billeted in peasant huts; hardly any of them living the hygienic tent life we pictures soldiers as leading.

And thus it has come about that tuberculosis is a problem in this war, as it has never been in any war before. It is estimated that, taking the armies and the soldiers invalided from the army, the prisoners of war living in concentration camps in Germany, and the refugees and residents of invaded districts, crowded together in unsanitary conditions, there are probably 400,000 cases of tuberculosis in France, "and practically no facilities for caring for them."

Walking-Sticks.

At one time the general use of canes or walking-sticks was forbidden in Rome by Imperial edict except to persons of patrician rank, thus making it a privilege which came to be popular among the nobility and eventually a distinction. The women of that time carried them also, their richly and artistically decorated canes serving as a rod for the punishment of their slaves. The cane appeared in England as the badge of aristocracy in about the fifth century, but after serving this purpose for some time came into the hands of the humbler and was dropped by those of higher social standing. It was re-established in its true form by the pilgrims and soldiers returning from the Holy Land during the Crusades, and soon came into popularity again.

THE GERMAN FORCES.

Distribution of Troops During Three Years of War.

A clear idea of the ebb and flow of the tides of German forces on the eastern and western fronts during the various phases of the war from the opening of hostilities in 1914 till the beginning of September, 1917, is obtained from carefully compiled information which the correspondent of The Associated Press is enabled to transmit.

From this it is gathered that when the Germans started the war by invading Belgium they launched 1190 battalions of infantry formed into 96½ divisions of four regiments each on to the Franco-Belgian front, while on the Russian front they employed only 322 battalions formed into 26½ divisions of four regiments each. On September 1 this year they had on the Franco-Belgian-British front, 1,369 battalions formed into 147 divisions, some of which were of three and others of four regiments each, while on the Russo-Roumanian front, 965 battalions formed into 92 divisions were in line. It will thus be seen that the German armies on the fighting fronts have been increased in the three years of war from 1512 battalions to 2334 battalions.

A review of the different periods of the war will show how these troops have been employed at various times, according to whether the principal effort of the Germans has been directed toward the western or the eastern front.

In August 1914 the attention of the German high command was absorbed by the attack on Belgium and France, while the Russian front was regarded as a secondary occupation. At that time the infantry effectives on the western front numbered 1,190 battalions in 96½ divisions, each division consisting of four regiments. On the eastern front, the Germans then had 322 battalions, comprising 26½ divisions.

When the battle of the Yser was fought in November, 1914, the Germans intensified their effort in the west and brought up their effectives to a higher figure and at the same time increased the number of battalions on their eastern front so that they then had 1,293 battalions on the western front and 399 on the eastern front.

Then came the Russian offensive in Galicia, and to check the Russian advance toward the German frontier, Germany was compelled to throw more troops on her eastern front, increasing the number of battalions there in September, 1915, to 780. To do this it was necessary to reduce the number of German battalions on the western front from 1,293 to 1,120.

Many divisions were transferred from the eastern to the western front when the Germans gathered their forces for the beginning of the great battle of Verdun, with the result that in June, 1916, there were 1,376 German battalions on the western front, and those on the eastern front were reduced from 780 to 574.

The German drive against Roumania was made possible by adding more than 300 battalions to their eastern battle-line, bringing the total on the eastern front to 899. This was done without reducing the number of battalions on the western front below 1,300.

When the French and British began their great offensive operations in July, 1917, the Germans were compelled to bring fresh forces to the western front, increasing their battalions there to 1,456 but reducing the number on their eastern front only to 860. Subsequently the German battalions along the Russian battle-line were increased by the addition of more than 100 battalions, bringing the total there to 965 on September 1 of this year. These were divided into 92 divisions of three regiments each. During this movement the battalions on the western front were reduced to 1,369, divided into 147 divisions and that is believed to have been the number on the German western front on September 1. These figures do not include any German troops on garrison duty in the interior of the country nor those maintaining lines of communications.

What the Death Mask Shows.

The value of a plaster cast as a portrait of the dead or living face cannot for a moment be questioned. It must of necessity be absolutely true to nature. It cannot flatter; it cannot caricature. It shows the subject as he was or is, not only as others saw him in the actual flesh, but as he saw himself. And in the case of the death mask particularly it shows the subject often as he permitted no one but himself to see himself. He does not pose; he does not "try to look pleasant." In his mask he is seen, as it were, with his mask off.

Monaghan Elections

Peterborough, Ont.,
Jan. 2nd, 1918.

To the Ratepayers of North Monaghan.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

When I first entered the Municipal field in North Monaghan, I did so fully realising that the Township was the most difficult to handle in the County. It is very hard to get satisfactory results, for both Rural and Urban districts, when you have to work on statutes that are designed entirely for Rural Districts. The Rural part does not see nor understand the requirements of the Urban and neither does the Urban end understand the requirements of the Rural, and so it becomes the business of the Council to "Keep the Peace" between them, and endeavour to administer the affairs fairly and justly, giving to each faction its just dues. I think it can be taken as a fair criterion of the fairness of administration of last year's work, when at last Monday's nominations a ratepayer of the far end of the township publicly makes the statement that "they were well satisfied with the treatment they had received this year; in fact, they had received far more than they expected."

Thanking you, Ladies and Gentlemen, for your confidence and support in the past, and trusting you will be able on January the 7th to voice a continuance of your confidence in me by re-electing me to the office of Reeve of the Township.

I am, respectfully,

H. S. RYE.

To the Ratepayers of the Township of Smith

Ladies and Gentlemen,—Having been asked by a large number of electors of our Township to stand for election for the position of Deputy-Reeve, after careful consideration I have decided to do so, and if elected I will give the very best service I can, and be very careful in the expenditure of money throughout the year.

Wishing you and all a prosperous New Year, I beg to remain,

Yours Faithfully,

THE HOLIDAYS

The holidays—they should be holy days—holy with earnest gratitude, with family reunions, and with the unrestrained joy of the little ones. Christmas first and last and always in the fullest sense for the children.

Christmas! If there be a child in the family how is it possible to have other than a merry Christmas? They begin weeks before hand, gloating over dear old Santa Claus, writing letters to him, planning little gifts, and surprises, their eyes shining with secrets that slip out of the rosy lips all unaware.

Blue eyes is wild about Christmas. God bless her! She has enthusiasm enough to rejuvenate and to glorify a whole regiment of skeptical, commonplace, weary men and women. Santa Claus is as real a person to her as is her own mother. She reverences him, she adores him, her eyes shine when she mentions his name. And Santa Claus is a worthy object of adoration. He is the spirit of thoughtful giving, of the joyous planning of happiness for others, and more than all he is to the children of to-day the messenger and reminder of the Child who was born in a manger so long ago, the Christ child, who glorified childhood, opening the eyes of the world to its importance and teaching men and women to be tenderer and wiser in their relations with the little ones, reverencing the divinity that is breathed into them with the breath of life.

Blue Eyes always has a glorious Christmas. Would that every child were storing up such beautiful memories to brighten the years that are to come. Is there any greater incentive to a pure and useful manhood and womanhood than the memories of a happy childhood? And even though there were no use in it, children have an inalienable right to happiness. It takes so little to make them happy, that a sad child is the most pathetic thing in nature. You are their sunshine, father and mother. Smile and see the light of laughter in their eyes. Frown and the light dies.

Let all our little kindnesses be from a loving heart and not formal acts for the world to see. Let us not wear two faces—the one in Company, the other behind the scenes. But let us be kind, loving and true at home, when the world is not looking on. The home in which love reigns supreme is a heaven on earth. The bosom which does not feel love is cold; the mind which does not conceive it is dull; the philosophy which does not accept it is false." And the only true religion has pure and reciprocal love for its basis: Be kind and affectionate to another. Let it be the greatest pleasure to perform those little loving kindnesses that add so much to the brightness of a home. Meet father with a kiss of love. Be a ray of sunshine in your own home.

Home is many times more than being more than a laundry where they take their clothes to be washed and ironed; to the man a place to eat and sleep, their evenings being largely spent at clubs or billiard halls. The old-fashioned home-keepers have become almost a lost quantity. Societies of various kinds occupy much of their time. The children are sent to school at the age of six and the mothers are at liberty to flit about until they return at noon when the lunch of food, prepared outside the home, is placed before the family, and the duties until high twelve are discharged. The afternoons and evenings are given to society work. Of course this does not apply to all homes but there is a general tendency to neglect the claims of the family for outside pleasures. We have met some women, who are, when asked if they keep house, blushingly reply: "We do light housekeeping, because we dislike hustling."

* * *

Our happiness in this world depends upon the affections we are able to inspire. We need the regard and love of fellowbeings, the sunshine of congenial companship and the warm hand clasp of fellowship. These are sought by all. Some make friends easily and quickly, while others can count their numbers on the fingers of one hand. True and lasting friendship will follow kindly deeds. The man made the beneficiary of some kind act will love the benefactor. Hence deeds that seem to entail sacrifice are often the source of much genuine happiness. Money spent in an effort to benefit individuals less fortunate than ourselves is well spent, and in almost every case will yield interest that can not be computed by the use of figures. The fruit of such deeds is kind words, mothers' blessings, fathers' appreciation, and boys' and girls' admiration.

One hand open in charity is often worth a hundred folded in prayer. People should pray by their actions as well as by their words.

A Many-Tongued Army.

It has been said the most polyglot army the world has ever seen is under General Sarrail, in the Balkans.

There are Frenchmen, Britons, Hindus, Italians, Russians, Serbs, Albanians, and Greeks. There are men of different colors. There is a babel of tongues.

But this Sarrail army will be as nothing compared with the army of Uncle Sam. Here all the races in the world will meet to don the American uniform and fight under the American flag.

Just as a sample, here are names culled at random from a list of those found physically qualified, and who made no exemption claims in district No. 154, New York city.

Guiseppe Vigolella, Edward Delehanty, Ernest Carreras, Emil Lamahann, Richard Tonjes, George Theocharis, Salcolo Alvarez, Aaron Flaxburg, Farner Tabb, Felix Servais, Philip Malek, Tung Yue Chen, James Stokes, Halim Abr.

Others might be added, but here in this brief choice are Americans of Italian, Irish, German, Swedish, Greek, French, Spanish, Russian, Jewish, English, Hungarian, Croatian, Syrian, and even Chinese origin.

Our Electrical Apparatus.

The United States has practically a monopoly of Canada's import trade in electrical apparatus. Out of total imports valued at $6,342,490 in the fiscal year ending March 31, 1917, the United States supplied $6,142,342 worth.

BRITISH LINES ADVANCED AT LENS

Haig Reports Activity On The Cambrai Front

Local Fighting Has Made No Change in the Situation British Commander-in-Chief States To-day --British Lines Have Been Slightly Advanced South of Lens---Artillery is Active in the Bullecourt and Ypres Sectors.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Local fighting took place yesterday afternoon on the Cambrai front, in the neighbourhood of the Canal Du Nord, without producing any material change in the situation, the War Office reports. We advanced our line slightly during the night south of Lens. There was some hostile artillery activity during the night in the Bullecourt sector, and also in the Ypres sector.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Developments in the Russo-German negotiations, the Daily Chronicle says, are likely to cause the Western Powers to give a defacto recognition to the Lenine Government in Russia. A statement of the Entente Allied policy of Democratic character, it adds, will shortly be sent to Russia. M. Litvinoff, who has been appointed Ambassador to London by the Bolsheviki, the Daily Chronicle continues, may receive de facto recognition as Ambassador, while Sir George Buchanan, the British Ambassador to Russia, who is reported on his way home, may be replaced by a diplomat in sympathy with the ideas of revolutionary Russia.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 4.—The Bolsheviki haxe fixed the opening of the Constituent Assembly for January 18th, providing there is present at that time a quorum of four hundred members.

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 4.—The decision to acknowledge the independence of Ukrainia was reached by the Commissiaries Council to-day.

The decision to acknowledge Ukrainia's independence is virtually a victory for the Cossack rebels. The Korniloff-Kaledine revolt, however, did not originate in Ukrainia, but when that section of Russia made its bid for separate unity, it joined forces with the Cossacks. Ukrainia is the so-called "White Russia," comprising sections of the old Polish kingdoms. A movement for independence has been in progress there for more than three months.

GERMAN DRIVE LOOKED FOR

LONDON, Jan. 4.—While the Flanders and Cambrai fronts have been quiet, there has been considerable activity on the French line, where the much-heralded German blow is expected. The Boche artillery has been active impartially all along the front from St. Quentin to Hartmannsweilerkopf, varied by scores of aerial combats.

The violent attacks in the vicinity of Caurieres Wood, north of Verdun, were probably feints, as it is not believed the Germans will risk another Verdun. The important blow, if it comes at all, probably will be further south-east, below Metz, as being nearer to the German bases and well supplied with good communications. Snow has fallen in this region during the week, and a severe Winter would be an effectual bar to military operations.

The Germans seem to be testing out the entire French line in an endeavour to find a weak spot. Economic reasons may also influence their attacks. For instance, the recent assault near Veho, is located near the Lorraine iron region, which is even more important than the coal district of Lens.

The German Metallurgical Association recently memoralized Field Marshal von Hindenburg, declaring that it was necessary to annex these iron deposits to insure industrial supremacy in view of future wars. The French still hold a large part of the district, but the Germans may try to take it away from them in the coming blow, on the usual German theory that whatever they want they have a right to take.

RUSSIAN PEACE PROPOSALS

BERLIN, Jan. 4.—Addressing the Reichstag Main Committee yesterday, Chancellor Von Hertling said in regard to the Russian rejection of peace proposals, dealing with the disposition of the occupied Russian territory: "We can cheerfully await further course of this incident. We rely upon our strong position, our loyal interests, and our just rights." The Chancellor announced that Dr. Von Kuehlmann has been instructed to reject the Russian proposal to transfer the peace negotiations to Stockholm.

GERMAN ATTACKS IN UPPER ALSACE COMPLETELY CHECKED

Huns Suffered Appreciable Losses and Left Prisoners and a Machine Gun in French Hands, Says Official Report

ACTIVITY IN AIR

Canadian Press Despatch:

PARIS, Jan. 4. — Violent artillery fighting on the Champagne and Verdun fronts is reported in to-day's official communication. A German attack in Upper Alsace was repulsed. Eight German airplanes and a captive balloon were brought to earth yesterday.

The statement follows:

"During the night the Germans undertook several raids on small posts in the region of Juvincourt, but obtained no success. In the Champagne and on the high bank of the Meuse, east of Hill 344, "Verdun front," there was violent artillery fighting.

In the Upper Alsace a German attack near Aspach was repulsed completely. The Germans suffered appreciable losses and left prisoners and machine guns in our hands.

"On January three French pilots brought down two German airplanes and a captive balloon. Six other machines fell within the German lines after aerial combats. On the same day French squadrons bombarded factories at Rombach and railway stations at Metz, Sahlons, Conflans and Arnsville. In the course of these expeditions projectiles weighing 7,500 kilograms were dropped."

New Joists Needed At Fire Hall For Heavy Motor Truck

Ald. Dobbin's foresight discovered the timbers under the south bay at the Fire Hall to be unsound, due to dry rot, and Engineer Parsons has been instructed to provide supports for the floor in preparation for the housing of the motor-driven combination chemical engine and hose waggon, which is ready for shipment to Peterborough. Ald. Dobbin asked the Engineer to inspect the under timbers at the Fire Station to ensure preparedness for the reception of the apparatus, which will weigh at least five tons with its load of hose. The joist ends were sunk in cement, and dry rot set in as the result of the absence of air around the wood, according to one explanation.

One method of repairing the substructure was estimated at a cost of $200, but a system of shoring will likely be substituted.

Lieut. Rackham Is Appointed

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The following Canadians are gazetted for duty in the Ministry of Munitions: Captains F. S. Dyke and P. Peterie, Lieuts. A. Richards, E. Marks, F. A. MacFadyen, B. Donald, M. H. Goslett, C. W. Dickson, and O. D. Vaughan. Lieut. G. K. Rackham, cavalry, of Peterborough, Ont., is appointed a Quartermaster.

COL. GOLDSMITH APPOINTED.

Former Peterborough Man Heads New Hospital at Matlock, England.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Col. Perry Goldsmith, of Toronto, is appointed Commandant of the new Officers' Convalescent Hospital at Matlock, Derbyshire, which will accommodate 150 men. The Canadian Medical Service secured a new consumptive sanitarium near Maidstone, Kent. Major Hart, of Winnipeg, will be in command.

400 DRAFTEES FOR THIS CITY

Peterborough Is to Be One of the Headquarters of the Five Areas in No. 3 Military District Under the M. S. A.

LOCAL MEN HERE

Special to The Examiner:

KINGSTON, Jan. 4.—Men called to service under the Military Service Act whose homes are in the neighbourhood of Peterborough, will be sent to that place for training. Arrangements are now being made for the quartering of 400 draftees at Peterborough in the armouries and other buildings.

To date the plans are for this military district to be divided into five areas, with Ottawa, Kingston, Brockville, Belleville and Peterborough as headquarters. Each of the three last will accommodate 400 men.

Peterboro' Soldier Was Held Up In London, England

Pte. Cecil Armstrong Attacked by Two Highwaymen—Now in the Hospital

Mrs. Wes. Armstrong, 157 Hart Avenue, has received a letter from Mrs. J. McCall Wallis, Chelsea, London, England, concerning her son, Pte. Cecil L. Armstrong, of the 93rd Battalion, who was given a pass to London after spending fourteen months in France. While there he was held up and given a blow on the head, which left him unconscious for a time:

December 18, 1917.

My dear Mrs. Armstrong,

My daughter and I have just come from St. Mark's, No. 2 London General Hospital, where your son is, and were chatting with him. He was up, but still feels a bit upset, and his head is very tender where he was struck. He is, however, quite all right, and will go to a convalescent home in a few days, I think. He is such a nice boy, and all the sisters and nurses like him so much. A Toronto nurse told us about him. We used to live in Peterborough, and she knows we are especially interested in all the boys from there, and glad to do anything we can for them. We hope to see him before he goes away. I am giving him my address, and if at any time there is anything we can do, we will be very glad.

As you go to Knox Church, you probably know my sister-in-law, Mrs. Walter Roger. Your son really looks very well, but it was a very trying experience, and he feels very badly about losing his snapshots, etc. It was a desperate thing for two men to attack a boy like that. I hope he will remain in England for a time. You certainly have had a very anxious time. I hope and pray it will be over before long.

If Canada will only wake up. I feel sure if the men there only realised the dire necessity there is for men to relieve those in the trenches, they would not refuse to come. They are so far away they do not seem able to believe how much they are needed. I will enclose my address, and if there is anything you would like me to do for your son, I would be delighted to do all I can. I know he has written to you, but thought you might like to hear from someone who has seen him, and to know he has found a friend in this big and most wonderful city.

With kind regards, I am, very sincerely yours, G. T. Wallis.

LITTLE CHANCE OF EXTENDING LIFE OF THE LEGISLATURE

Matter Was Discussed at Meeting of Liberal Members Yesterday But Majority Favoured General Election at End of the Term

PREPARE FOR "SCRAP"

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Jan. 4.— At the conference of Liberal members of the Legislature yesterday afternoon, consideration was given to the agreement to the extension of the life of the Legislature, which expires in June next. In the event of such a request coming from the Ontario government as the conference was informed is a likelihood in the near future.

The question was considered at considerable length.

The members differed in their views, the majority seeming to favour a general election at the expiry of the present government's term of office.

"Despite the war there have been general elections held in every province at the end of the Legislature's term, and there is no good reason for a delayed election in Ontario," said one member to your correspondent after the conference.

Chas. M. Bowan, the Liberal whip, expressed the opinion that the Legislature would be called in the last week of January, probably Thursday, Jan. 31st.

"What are you preparing for?" asked the reporter.

"We are preparing for a good scrap," Mr. Bowman laughingly replied.

EVIDENCE TAKEN IN THE VARTY CASE

The evidence in the hearing of a charge of perjury against Walter Varty, of Belmont Township, was heard by County Magistrate Langley in Havelock yesterday. The accused is alleged to have made a statement before the Military Tribunal in Havelock, which investigation is said to have proved untrue. Crown Attorney Hatton conducted the prosecution, and Mr. J. A. O'Brien was counsel for the defence.

The argument will be heard by Magistrate Langley in Peterborough.

GUARANTEE NECESSARY

Canadian Press Despatch:

In addressing Congress to-day relative to the recent nationalization of the U. S. railways, President Wilson said: "While present authority of the executive suffices for all purposes of administration and while, of course, all private interests must for the present give way to public necessities, I am sure you will agree with me that it is right and necessary that the owners and creditors of the railways and the holders of their stocks and bonds should receive from the government an unqualified guarantee that their properties will be maintained throughout the period of Federal control in as good repair and as complete equipment as at present, and that several roads will receive, under Federal management, such compensation as is equitable and just alike to their owners and to the general public. I would suggest an average net railway operating income of three years ending June 30th, 1918.

I earnestly recommend that these guarantees be given by appropriate legislation and given as promptly as circumstances permit."

MEETING TO-MORROW.

A full attendance of the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., is called for tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock sharp, in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A., for the appointment of officers for 1918.

GERMAN-RUSSIAN CONFERENCE ENDS WITH A DEADLOCK

Russian Delegates Demanded the Right to Unrestricted Communication With the Socialists Among Central Powers, But Were Refused

THEY THEN WITHDREW

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 4.— The conference here between German and Russian delegates considering the future of the war prisoners on both sides, developed a deadlock to-day. The Russian conferes demanded the right to unrestricted communication with the Socialists in the Central Powers. The German delegates declared they were not authorized to consent. The Russians thereupon withdrew, pending the receipt of further instructions from the Soviet.

That the Czar's government was in communication with German autocracy seeking the formation of an international convention which would lay plans for a world-wide fight against Socialism, was revealed in documents unearthed at the Foreign Office and made public by the Bolsheviki government to-day. The archives showed four parlees had actually been begun at one time with this purpose in view.

Town Planning Expert Coming To Peterboro'

Treat is in Store For Those Interested in Town Planning

Mr. Thomas Adams, of Ottawa, who is Town Planning Adviser to the Commission of Conservation, will give an address in Peterborough on Monday, January 7th. Mr. Adams is being brought here at the instance of the Engineers' Club of Peterborough to discuss town planning problems. An effort will be made to accommodate as many citizens as desire to attend this important meeting.

KEEPING THE HOME FIRES BURNING

Of twenty-one homes visited by P. C. Blade this morning, some of them were actually without coal, and altogether they could not produce two hundredweight.

The Peterborough Fuel and Transfer Co. received three more cars of "run of mine" coal this morning, making a total of thirteen cars, a supply that has helped materially to carry many families through the present fuel crisis.

With the exception of one car, the "run of mine" coal has been entirely satisfactory on the basis that "beggars cannot be choosers."

Mr. Robert Hicks has placed his automobile at the service of the police for the present investigations of the orders placed through the Police Department.

The city has a car of nut coal last reported at Port Hope.

Dramatic Turn of Events in Russia Will Affect the Allied Cause More Than Would the Winning of a Great Battle.

PROOF OF HUNS' AIMS

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Jan. 4. — The dramatic turn of events in Russia to-day will in all likelihood affect the allied cause more than the winning of a great battle.

It may mean, first of all, recognition by the allies of the Russian Bolsheviki government. Certainly it seemed likely to-day to result in another joint effort by the allies to aid Russia in working out her own destiny. As observers saw the situation to-day, the effect of the complete and convincing proof offered at Brest Litovsky of Germany's sinister annexationist plans will be psychological, political and moral, not alone in Russia and Germany, but particularly in America and in neutral nations.

No one in England has much hope that Russia will be able to resume the war in the case of a definite breach. That is practically impossible owing to the condition of the Russian army. Germany may not have to waste many men in her efforts to penetrate Russia in view of this utter disorganization of the Muscovite fighting forces. The Brest Litovsk negotiations, however, have proved this effort at commercial penetration and economic domination is Germany's particular game in Russia. The revelations must inevitably strengthen the allies' resolution to wage war unremittingly to a victory.

A Russia dominated by Germany dwarfs even the Mittel Europa scheme in its vastness. The Liberal newspapers, the Chronicle and the News, both urged practical recognition by the allies of the Bolsheviki in editorial comment to-day.

The News' Petrograd correspondent to-day cabled it was reliably reported that there were two distinct tendencies apparent among the German delegates to the Brest Litovsk conference. One group, under Dr. Hoffman, led the annexationists, and Kuehlmann and Czernin headed the moderates. There were frequent disputes, he asserted, each time the matter being referred to Berlin. Czernin and Kuehlmann, the dispatch asserted, were always upheld.

Dispatches from Germany via Amsterdam to-day stated that the Central Powers delegates are all returning to Brest Litovsky, and coupled with this information is the report that new and more moderate terms were to be offered the Russians. Just what these new "concessions" were to be, was not indicated. The delegates, it was said, included Foreign Minister Kuehlmann, Count Czernin and the full Bulgarian and Turkish delegations.

Prior to the meeting of the Russian Constituent Assembly, it was generally agreed here that it would be impossible for England to grant formal recognition to the Lenin-Trotsky government, or to acknowledge M. Litvinoff as that government's ambassador in London. Meanwhile, however, it was admitted that the present situation necessitates unofficial dealings with the Bolsheviki, which, in the absence of the British Ambassador, Buchanan, will be done through some commissioner holding the confidence of the Russian officials. Sir George Lee, charge d'Affairs of the British Embassy in Petrograd, is now attending to the Embassy routine and will so continue.

THE WEATHER

Twelve degrees below zero was the lowest last night. This is the ninth consecutive day of zero weather. More moderate conditions are now on the way. W. P.

FUNERAL TOOK PLACE YESTERDAY

The funeral of the late Mrs. Martin McFadden, who died on New Year's Eve at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Overend, 215 Princess Street, took place yesterday morning from Mrs. Overend's house to St. Peter's Cathedral, thence to St. Peter's Cemetery. The pallbearers were Messrs. George Bain, Martin McFadden, Thomas Quinlan, J. J. Lynch, W. S. Merrill, and J. W. Fitzgerald.

FRIDAY, JAN. 4, 1918

STAND BY OUR WAR VETERANS.

The citizens are urged, in respect of the appeal being made for funds to furnish the club rooms of the War Veterans, to stand by them as they have stood by us in their work and sacrifices overseas and in the trenches. Peterborough has her credit at stake in this matter. The request made for an adequate sum for furnishings is modest compared with the contributions of other places the size of Peterborough. Some of them, like Brantford and Windsor, have purchased substantial and large buildings as permanent rallying homes for their veterans; and certainly Peterborough, which leads in generosity and public spirit, will not wish to be quoted as coming second to any other place in her expression of gratitude and her hearty recognition of the soldiers, who have made many sacrifices and deserve reward for the services they have given us, Canada and the Empire. We can be sure there will be no overlapping—governments have never done and will never overdo the duty of adequately rewarding the services of the soldiers who have, many of them, given their limbs and made many other sacrifices for the country whose gratitude they have deservedly won.

There is, besides, an importantly practical side to the organisation of the veterans. Their club rooms not only serve by association to keep alive the spirit of military service and maintain the camaraderie of actual service, but are a place of conference in connection with the important work of apportioning and distributing to the needy dependents of soldiers the relief fund the veterans have set aside for this purpose—not for themselves, but for the relief of hardship among he dependents of comrades. It is hoped that the appeal of the Ladies' Auxiliary on behalf of the veterans will be liberally met.

The Kaiser has advertised many giant German drives on the Western front, but somehow doesn't live up to his announcements.

THE SQUARE MAN IN THE SQUARE HOLE.

It is an unfortunate fact that electors, either in political or civic elections, do not always use the ballot as the result of matured judgment, founded upon thought. Voting is too often a haphazard proceeding, without proper reference to political principles or the highest objects of representation.

In the matter of a body like the Board of Education there are obviously special qualifications involved in the most valuable membership. The Board has control of the expenditure of a large amount of public money. It is charged with the provision of a staff of teachers that will give the best educational results. The Board of Education has a much more important responsibility than even a city council. The council's work has only to do with matters that, as a rule, have importance from year to year. The Board of Education has to do with the administration of interests that mould, or should mould, the lives of thousands of children to the end of their days.

The primary object of primary or other education is to fit the child for his future place in active life. In this preparation, in an industrial centre like Peterborough, Technical Education has a very important part, and the establishment of a Technical School is a live question for the Board to deal with.

In this connection it is evident that what should have most influenced the choice of the electors last Tuesday, was the election of men specially justified to deal with such a subject.

This was done in the case of Mr. E. G. Patterson, whose intimate association with one of the largest industries of the country equipped him with special appreciation of the value of technical education as an indispensible element in the equipment of the best class of artizans.

He is well qualified to give sound advice and leading as to the principles; while, without in any sense disparaging the choice of the electors last Tuesday, two or three of the candidates, who were not chosen were well equipped to deal with the details in connection with the establishment of a Technical school.

Mr. Reid Munro, a capable civil engineer, a native son of Peterborough, is known to possess special and expert qualifications.

Mr. W. H. Pretty, another candidate, had evidently especial qualifications. He is a civil engineer, educated in England, where thoroughness is the hall mark of education, and has had a very thorough and varied practical experience, in almost every department of manufacture and engineering. He, too, like Mr. Munro, would have been admirably fitted for considering the details of technical school organization.

Mr. Jos. Wearing was another unchosen candidate. As a lawyer and a university graduate he would meet the demand of education as an equipment for educational administration. As an orator his services would have been useful to the Board, especially in view of the fact that the Trades and Labour Council has decided to ask the members to deliver addresses, in connection with the educational system of the city. This is gratifying, as it is evidence that the representatives of Labour are taking an interest in practical education, which is so important an element in the elevation and increased efficiency of the artizan status of the working man.

These remarks are made without the least idea of disparaging the excellent choice of the electors on Tuesday last, and to point out that, as a principle, the best men to intrust any work to are those specially qualified for that special service.

Canada has a pretty stiff dose of New Year's titles, for a country that is bleeding itself white in the interests of democracy.

PARTISAN OR NON-PARTISAN?

An extract from the Belleville Ontario, appearing on this page, has some slight relation to the oft-repeated, and rather unctuously urged, declaration that under the Union Government we have reached the political millenium; when the lion and the lamb have lain down together in the Dominion Cabinet; and that graft, partisanship, and political patronage are things of the past.

The Porter incident, in which a supporter of the Union Government exercises the most offensive and vulgar sort of patronage tyranny, seems to show that, while the Union Government may be non-partisan, it is hard for some of its supporters (of the old graft and patronage exploiting Government) can't drop the habit. To discharge a man because he had the "cheek" to exercise the rights of a British subject by voting for the candidate he preferred, who happened to be Mr. Porter's opponent, is a touch of political Kaiserism or Bordenism, worthy of the palmy hours of Hon. Bob Rogers days of dominance.

The Union Government will have to either withdraw its non-partisan claim or repudiate Mr. E. Guss Porter, M.P., the petty tyrant of the Hastings sidelines.

Not only Mr. Porter, but the Union Government itself finds it difficult to drop old habits. After it had been planted in office, by the non-partisan votes of Grits and Tories, and had nailed the non-partisan flag to the mast, one of its first published acts was to appoint to the Senate one of the most partisan of the supporters of the Borden Government in the person of Mr. Middlebro, ex-M.P. of South Grey.

This would not have been so notable an example of disregard of non-partisanship, if while he was still head of a partisan government Sir Robert Borden had not crammed the Senate to the rafters with his partisan followers in the last Parliament. He seemed to have done the dishonourable partisan job so thoroughly that it was thought there was not a hole left in the Senate that had not been plugged with a partisan. And it would have been thought that if he had inadvertently omitted to fill one vacancy, he would, after he had become the head of a Union or non-partisan Government, have found some Grit worthy of Senatorial appointment.

The Union Government must show that, if it is not the Borden Government warmed over, that its non-partisanship means something. Its composite following in the present House will not show the partisan subservience of the last Parliament.

Under a non-partisan Union Government we have Joshua Swan, a Parkdale barber, sentenced to a year of penal servitude because he said it "was foolish to enlist," while Bourassa, who has been preaching treason and opposition to enlistment all through the war is permitted to continue his mischief-breeding work.

HOW'S THIS, MR. PORTER?

The following is a verbatim copy of a letter received by Mr. Charles Harman, of Frankford, a labourer on the Trent Valley Canal, from Mr. E. Guss Porter, K.C., Belleville. It will be noted that the date of the letter is 22nd December, five days after the late election. The letter speaks for itself:

Porter, Butler & Payne,
Barristers, Solicitors, Notaries Public, Etc.
Belleville, Ont., 22nd Dec., 1917.
Chas. Harman, Esq.,
Frankford, Ont.

Dear Sir,—Notwithstanding I had you appointed to your present position upon the recommendation of your friends at Frankford, I am now informed by them that you have entirely forfeited their confidence and right to maintain the position which you now hold. You will therefore let me have your resignation at once, otherwise I shall have to take it up with the Department and have you dismissed.

If I do not hear from you within the next week, I shall take it up with the Department.

Yours truly,
E. Guss Porter.

Charles Harman, to whom this letter is addressed, is an employee on the Trent Valley Canal. He is what is known as an "axeman," which means about the same as labourer. His present wages are $2.35 a day, having been increased some months ago to that amount from $1.75.

As far as The Ontario can learn, Mr. Harman's offence, for which he is threatened with dismissal, was to vote for Mr. R. J. Graham in the late election. He was foolhardy enough to let that fact become known.

We have been told that the patronage system had been abolished by the Union Government. If that be true, this threatening letter makes strange reading.

Why should Charles Harman be asked to forward his resignation to E. Guss Porter?

What status has Mr. Porter in regard to the management of the Trent Valley Canal?

Has Charles Harman the right to exercise the franchise as a free-born Canadian citizen and vote for whom he chooses?

Or does the payment of $2.35 a day transform a free citizen into a slave and compel him to mark his ballot in the way his masters decree?

Comment by us is quite unnecessary. Workmen, labouring men, and all citizens who prize the right of a free and unterrorised ballot, read that letter to this poor Frankford labourer, and draw your own conclusions.

Ross Harman, son of Charles Harman, was one of the first from this section to volunteer his services in the war, and was the first man to give his life for his country.—Belleville Ontario.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

The Man Fat and Forty.

Even the fat man at forty is not irreparable if he is still free from the onset of degenerative diseases, such as hardening of the arteries, heart diseases, Bright's disease, etc. He may never be able to lick a Jess Willard or win an athletic championship for the simple reason that he has lived short on exercise and long on appetite, but by adopting a rational plan of living—proper diet, exercise, rest and freedom from alcoholic and other harmful indulgences—he may live yet twenty years, thirty or even to be twice his present age and keep in useful service.

Alexander Gage Says Tanlac Ended Troubles of Seven Years Standing

"Getting one's health back, after suffering as long as I did, is something to appreciate and I have recommended Tanlac to several of the boys on the road since it put me back in shape," said Alexander J. Gage, who lives on Keele street, Toronto, recently. Mr. Gage is a fireman on the Canadian Pacific railroad and is well known, especially in railroad circles. His statement while remarkable is only one of many wonderful endorsements that have been given the "Premier Preparation," in this city.

"I'm feeling fine now," he continued, "and have picked up twenty pounds in weight, but I certainly was in bad shape before I began taking Tanlac. My stomach and kidneys had been bothering me for six or seven years. My appetite seemed to be alright but my stomach was all wrong and nothing I ate agreed with me. My food just seemed to lodge like a lump in my chest and fill me with pain. For several hours after every meal I could hardly get my breath. I had intense pain across my back and my kidneys bothered me so at night I could hardly get any rest. I tried most everything I knew of but kept getting worse. My back got to hurting me so bad if I stooped over I could hardly straighten back up.

"In fact, I had gotten to the place where I was almost disabled for work. One day an engineer friend of mine persuaded me to try Tanlac and thats where the long and rugged road began to smoothe out for me. My stomach trouble, and all signs of indigestion have disappeared entirely and what I eat does me good. All the pain has left my back and my kidneys never bother me any more. Tanlac has certainly fixed me up in great shape. I'm feeling better than I have in years and so I have the best of reasons for saying a good word for Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd.

On Thursday morning about three o'clock, Mr. Thos. Morrison's residence on the Belmont Road was completely destroyed by fire. The loss is only partially covered by insurance.

The Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church will hold their regular monthly meeting on Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock in the Sunday School-room.

Miss Mina Throop of Peterborough is a guest of Miss Jean Buck.

Mr. and Mrs. Englehart have been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Squire.

Misses Beatrice and Nellie Liscumb were in Peterborough last Thursday.

Mr. J. Stan. Weir spent the past few days in Toronto.

Mrs. L. Killoran, of Peterborough, and son, Joe, of the Royal Flying Corps, were in town last Wednesday.

On Saturday evening a public reception for some of our returned heroes was held in the Town Hall, under the auspices of the Local Chapter of the I.O.D.E. The chair was occupied by Reeve Squire, and the presentation of a ring or locket was made to each of the boys by Mrs. B. W. Squire, in the absence of Mrs. Birdsall, Regent. Addresses were given by Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, M.P.; Rev. Irwin and Rev. McCormack, after which those present were given an opportunity to meet the boys — Corporal Wellington Reynolds, who had been overseas for three years and a half, and had been gassed; Corporal Roy Killingbeck, one of our 93rd boys, who had been wounded twice; Pte. Conds, of the 93rd, gassed and wounded, and Sergeant Gideon Walker, who also went over with the 93rd, but was kept in England. Pte. Will Andrews and Corporal Graham were not present during the evening, which was much regretted.

Miss Jennie Clysdale returned to Toronto on Wednesday.

Mr. Jack Reynolds is visiting at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon Reynolds.

Mr. Theodore Burgess was in Peterborough last week.

On New Year's night, at eight o'clock, a very pretty wedding took place in the Presbyterian Church, when Isobel, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Robb, was married to Mr. John Thompson, son of Rev. Thompson, of Hastings, and manager of the Hastings branch of the Union Bank.

The bride, who was prettily and daintily attired in white crepe de chene, with veil, and carrying a handsome bouquet of white roses, was given away by her father. The bridesmaid, Miss Annie Sargent, of Westwood, wore pale pink, with large black hat, and carried pink roses. Mr. John McMillan, of Montreal, cousin of the groom, was best man.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Thompson, of Hastings, assisted by Rev. Wolland, of Norwood.

Miss Jean Nicol played the wedding march, and when the register was being signed, Mr. J. Stan. Weir sang "Until."

After the ceremony the numerous guests assembled at the home of the bride's parents, where a buffet lunch was served, and the hours spent in music and dancing until Mr. and Mrs. Thompson left on the midnight train for Montreal, followed by the best wishes of their many friends for long years of wedded bliss.

The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome set of black fox furs; to the bridesmaid, a pin set in pearls and amethyst; to the pianist, a pearl pin; to the best man, a platinum tie-pin, set with three whole pearls. The two ushers, Mr. Will Stewart, of Peterborough, and Mr. Roderick Pakenham, also Mr. J. Stan. Weir, received a tie pin with a whole pearl setting.

On their return from their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Thompson will reside in Hastings.

Miss Hattie MacLachlan returned to Toronto on Wednesday.

Miss Butler, of Woodstock, has been a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Coleman Elliott for a few days.

Miss Flossie Nicol is visiting at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Nicol.

Miss Kathleen Watts is visiting in Peterborough.

Miss Margaret Nicol returned to Lindsay on Wednesday.

Miss Mary Frost, of Toronto, was in town on Wednesday.

In a recent shooting competition in Seaforth, Sussex, England, Corporal W. J. Stares, who went overseas with the 2nd C. E. F., but, since being gassed, was transferred to the 6th Canadian Reserve, has been the winner of a suitably engraved silver medal, being first in the competition, although up against musketry instructors.

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning
Wash away all the stomach, liver, and bowel poisons before breakfast.
To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside, no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head; no constipation, bilious attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy, acid stomach, you must bathe on the inside like you bathe outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do, says a well-known physician.
To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, drink before breakfast each day, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.
Get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless. Drink phosphated hot water every morning to rid your system of these vile poisons and toxins; also to prevent their formation.
As soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and purifying, so limestone phosphate and hot water before breakfast, act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

Sound Advice

THE best information obtainable at present indicates plentiful supplies of raw sugar for the year 1918, and, PROVIDED THAT SHIPS ARE AVAILABLE to transport the raw sugar, everybody should be able to obtain a reasonable supply.

This is a great big "I F" however, to overcome, and therefore it would be safer for consumers and dealers to make plans only for eighty to ninety per cent of last year's consumption.

It will be well on in February before any large supplies of raw sugar reach Canada, and in the meantime the supply will be limited owing to the small stocks on hand.

During 1917 this Company has operated its Refinery continuously, the only interruption being two days at Christmas time. We believe this record has not been equalled by any refinery in the United States or Canada.

During the whole year it has been our constant aim to keep the Canadian public supplied with "LANTIC PURE CANE SUGAR" at reasonable prices.

In order to accomplish this extraordinary feat in view of the actual sugar shortage that occurred, we were obliged at different periods, to purchase raw sugar at highest prices when such action was most unprofitable.

During 1918 we will continue our Advertising Campaign of our celebrated "LANTIC SUGAR" and, in addition, will make a feature of our Old-Fashioned Brown Sugars, known to the trade as soft or yellow sugars.

These sugars are available in three different grades, under the names of

Lantic Sugar

Light Yellow
Brilliant Yellow
Dark Yellow

Such sugars as these have a pronounced flavour all their own that adds richness to everything for which they are used.

Try "LANTIC OLD FASHIONED BROWN SUGAR" for Cooking and Cereals and on homemade bread for the kiddies. Its rich deliciousness and melting goodness will induce you to USE IT DAILY.

For sale by all first class grocery stores in any quantity. The Red Ball Trade Mark appears on each 100 lb. bag and your grocer will be very glad to show you that the sugar you are getting is out of a "LANTIC" bag.

We thank our friends, the people of Canada, for their generous approval of the quality of our Products and the liberal share of their patronage given us during the three years of our existence.

We assure them that in the future the same high standard of quality will be maintained so that our Red Ball Trade Mark will always be recognized as the "SEAL OF PURITY".

Sunday School Lesson Questions

Jan. 6, 1918.

John prepares the way for Jesus. —Mark 1, 11.

Golden Text: Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.—John 1, 29.

1. Verses 1-3. Where and what are the predictions to which Mark here refers? (See Isa. 40:3; Mal. 3:1.)

2. What reason is there to think that Isaiah and Malachi had John the Baptist and Jesus in mind when they wrote the words quoted by Mark?

3. What difference does it make to the potency and truth of Christ's gospel, whether Mark was right or wrong in thinking that these prophecies applied specifically to John and Jesus?

4. In what way did John's mission help Jesus in his work of establishing the kingdom of God on the earth?

5. Verse 4. What did John's baptism stand for?

6. What did Jesus mean by repentance and remission of sins? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by the members of the club.)

7. What difference was there, if any, between John's conditions for the pardon of sin, from the conditions stated by the Old Testament prophets, or that God has always required?

8. What difference is there, if any, between the moral and spiritual condition of an angel who never has sinned, and a pardoned sinner?

9. Verse 5. What was the charm or drawing power of John that such vast crowds flocked to hear him?

10. Is it the fault of the average preacher that he does not draw big crowds, or is it due to circumstances over which he has no control? Give your reasons.

11. What method of baptism did John probably adopt?

12. Verse 6. What did John's peculiar dress and food indicate as to John's general character?

13. Why should a minister of the gospel dress in any different garb from other men of the same social standing?

14. Verse 7. When a truly spiritual man compares himself with Jesus, what feelings are always produced in him?

15. Verse 8. The word "baptize" as applied to the gift of the Holy Ghost by Jesus, is clearly figurative; what is the reality?

16. When a Christian has received the gift of the Holy Spirit, in what respect is he different from those who have not received him?

17. Verses 10, 11. Jesus had no sins to repent of; why then did he request John to baptize him?

18. Verses 10, 11. Why should children be baptized, or why should they not?

19. What is the difference between baptized and unbaptized believers in Jesus?

20. Was the appearance of the dove and the voice from heaven objective or subjective; that is, could others beside Jesus see the dove and hear the voice? Give your reasons.

21. What reason, if any, is there to believe, that Christians who are filled with the Holy Spirit sometimes get similar subjective spiritual experences as are here recorded of Jesus?

Lesson for Sunday, Jan. 13, 1918, Jesus begins his work. Mark 1:12-20. GhostpdJohn tyriview

Final Details Are Arranged For Home Visitation Campaign

Over three hundred wide-awake men and men representing all the Churches and the Salvation Army, met in Charlotte Street School room, last night, for final instructions regarding the visitation to be made to-day between 2 and 5 o'clock. Most of the city ministers were present.

A statement of the plan of the city in five districts was presented to E. W. Halpenny, of Toronto, General Secretary of the Ontario Sunday School Association, who is directing the effort. District No. 1 is all of Peterborough north of Charlotte Street and west of Rubidge. Mr. W. G. Reid, 561 King Street, is Chairman of this district, and will work with headquarters for the afternoon in the school room of St. Andrew's Church.

District No. 2 is all north of Charlotte Street, between Rubidge and the River; chairman, Mr. William Madill, corner George and Hunter Streets. District headquarters in the Y.M.C.A.. District No. 3, all west of Park and south of Charlotte Street. Mr. R. C. Braund, corner Park and Albert streets, is Chairman, with headquarters in Knox Church. District No. 4 is south of Charlotte Street, between Park and the River, chairman, Mr. A. J. Johnson, in the Nugent Drug Store, headquarters in his store. District No. 5 is all East City, Mr. John Spear, 53 Hunter Street East, is chairman. Headquarters in his store.

In addition to ascertaining the religious leanings and preferences as to Church and Sunday School of every person in every home, boarding house, etc., also every employee or boarder therein, an invitation to attend their own Church more regularly and faithfully will be presented. Stores and offices are not entered, excepting to inquire for possible residences overhead. The invitation card is in five languages—English, Latin, French, Yiddish and Russian.

There will also be distributed to the 8,000 Peterborough homes a copy of the King's proclamation and call to Prayer for Sunday next, with list of meetings for the week of Prayer arranged by the Protestant Ministerial Association.

Brother Of Victoria Cross Hero Returns

Pte. W. J. McAuliffe Was Twice Wounded—Brother Was Killed

Private M. J. McAuliffe, who enlisted in Peterborough with the 93rd Battalion, has returned home after being wounded twice and gassed. A brother of Private McAuliffe won the Victoria Cross, but subsequently succumbed to wounds received in action. Private M. J. McAuliffe was with Private Wiskins of this city when the latter was killed. The McAuliffe brothers reside in Emily Township.

Private M. J. McAuliffe, who is a son of Mrs. L. McAuliffe, of Emily, went overseas with the 93rd Battalion. He has seen service in the trenches for fifteen months. Private McAuliffe was met at the station by His Worship Mayor Duffus and many of his friends. Before going to his home in Emily he will be the guest for a few days of Mr. W. Armstrong, 157 Hart Avenue. Private McAuliffe was wounded three times, being gassed the last time. His brother, Pte. W. V. McAuliffe, was killed at the front over a year ago.

Amicable Settlement Expected

Canadian Press Despatch:

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan 4.—An Associated Press dispatch from Washington to-day says: Amicable adjustment of long standing fishery disputes between the United States and Canada is foreseen by officials who will represent this country in conferences to begin here January 15.

Congressional action will be necessary to settle finally the problems, but paramount interests of the two countries in winning the war and need of food supplies are expected to promote a spirit of accommodation on both sides that will smooth out all rough places. Congress meets in joint session at 12.30 to-day to hear President Wilson outline his plan for legislature to make effective the government operation of railroads. Bills were to be introduced soon after the address embodying the railroad administration's idea for compensating the roads and the programme necessary to bring about complete government control, was expected to go forward rapidly in both houses. Steps were taken to-day by Director General McAdoo to restore to service the thousands of broken down freight cars and locomotives.

City Officials' Conference Arranged For Extension Of Assistance In Coal Delivery

During the past two days the police have obtained supplies of coal for eighty homes. The total number of applications handled through Chief Thompson's office since December 24th exceed three hundred. These are cold, abstract figures that convey an inadequate idea of the fuel crisis many of these families have faced. There is the element of detachment about the statement that fails to tell of the anxiety of those householders who have watched their little heaps of coal gradually vanish, while their uneasiness developed to alarm when their first efforts to obtain relief were unsuccessful. It was at this stage that Chief Thompson's co-operation was employed, with results that have secured immediate attention for the most urgent appeals and a broader distribution of coal to families who, investigation had shown, were in actual need of relief.

The advantage Peterborough citizens have over many other cities in the snow belt is probably overlooked by those for whom the most concern has been exercised. Thanks to the foresight of particularly one dealer, Peterborough has had the coal to meet the emergency. The local problem soon became one of delivery, and this difficulty seems to have been satisfactorily overcome. Many families have been so pressed by their needs that they have probably not taken thought of what distress they might have suffered if they had been forced to depend upon the meagre, regular shipments of coal to the city during the past month.

City Aids Delivery.

This morning a conference of city officials was held to arrange for an extension of the municipality's assistance in delivering fuel. Mayor Duffus, Mayor-elect Duncan, Ald. Weir, Ald Dobbin, Chief Thompson, Fire Chief Grange, City Engineer Parsons, and City Clerk Armstrong were present. It was decided temporarily to employ the Board of Words auto truck, and horse, also a horse and sleigh from the Fire Hall, to assist in delivering coal to homes where it is most needed.

No Coal to Farmers.

It was suggested that steps be taken to prevent supplying coal to farmers who, it was stated, could easily obtain wood in the country.

Chief Thompson has been given practically full control of the situation, and any persons who duplicate orders with different dealers and thus obtain two or more deliveries at once are contravening the Fuel Controller's Act, and leave themselves liable to a serious penalty.

Veterans To Meet Monday

First Meeting of the New Year Will Be Held in the Armouries

The first meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association for the New Year will be held on Monday evening in the recreation-room of the Armouries, when the new officers will be installed. It is desired that the attendance should be as large as possible.

Dr. F. L. Robinson, proprietor of the Empire, has very kindly offered the veterans the use of his theatre for Monday afternoon and evening, the proceeds to be devoted to the club-room fund.

The receipt of a cheque for $10.00 from Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald for the same fund is also acknowlegded gratefully by the Veterans.

Close Call For Children

KINGSTON, Ont., Jan. 4.—Leaving her three little children alone, Mrs. Hearn, of the village of Portsmouth, wnt to visit her husband, John Hearn, returned from the front, who is in a critical condition at the Mowat Memorial Hospital. During her absence the children played with matches, set fire to the house, and it was totally destroyed. The children had a close call in making their escape.

It was not often that the news editor attended church, but one night his wife persuaded him to accompany her. During the service he fell asleep, and didn't awake until the sermon was well under way. Suddenly he sat bolt upright, seized his hat and dashed to his office, surprising his staff, who were waiting there.

PROUDFOOT NOTED FIGHTER FOR PROGRESSIVE MEASURES

Was a Leader in Battle Against the Liquor Traffic—His Son Recently Won Military Cross at the Front

Mr. William Proudfoot, K. C., the new leader of the Opposition, in the Ontario Legislature, is a Liberal of long standing in Provincial politics. In 1902 he was tendered the nomination for the Provincial Legislature, but declined to stand until 1908, when he successfully contested the riding. He has never been defeated. Since his election to the Legislature he has been one of the most prominent members on the Opposition side of the House in fighting for progressive legislation along temperance lines; in fact, he was one of the strongest supporters of the abolition of the liquor license system in Ontario.

The son of the late Chief Justice Proudfoot and a mother of Scotch and Irish descent respectively, the new leader was born on February 21 1859, at Colborne township, County of Huron. He received his preliminary education in the public schools and private tuition, following which he graduated from Osgoode Hall, in 1881. He was made a K. C., in 1902 prior to which he was a partner of the late Judge Garrow of Goderich where he practised law for several years. In 1903 he came Toronto and became head of the firm of Duncan, Grant and Skeans. At present he is head of the firm of Proudfoot Duncan and Grant. Before coming to Toronto he was County Crown Attorney of Huron, and also filled the office of reeve for ten years. He was president of the West Huron Liberal Association for several years, and director of several prominent manufacturing industries in Goderich.

Mr. Proudfoot is also the proud father of a son who for his bravery on the fields of Flanders, was awarded the Military Cross, and who was among the first of Canada's honored sons to enlist for service at the front.

While always looked upon as one of the most progressive Liberals on the Opposition side of the Ontario Legislature after his election, it was not until the eve of adjournment for prorogation on April 23, 1913, that he became prominent in the public eye. On that occasion on the floor of the House, Mr. Proudfoot charged Sir James Pliny Whitney, the leader of the government, and the Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, with "corrupt and improper acts," following the outcome of an investigation instituted by Mr. Proudfoot before the Public Accounts Committee, arising out of the settlement of the claim of Taylor, Scott and Co., Toronto, in respect of a Central Prison contract.

Mr. Proudfoot made the charge on his responsibility as a member of the House, and subsequently secured the appointment of a Royal Commission to investigate the charges. The substance of Mr. Proudfoot's charge was that $500 had been accepted by Mr. Hanna, as a campaign contribution and that there was manipulation of certain tenders for supplies.

The Allied Navies.

Frank Simonds, the well known editorial writer, and author, has written an article for Farm and Fireside, in which he says:

"What so far has been the new lesson of sea power in the greatest struggle of history? How far has that policy known as Navalism justified itself in conflict with the rival doctrine of militarism?

"Even at the present moment it is possible to say unqualifiedly that naval power has achieved all that was expected it could achieve. So far it has supplied the single decisive element in the whole struggle. British sea power—and it is not necessary now to discuss the relatively minor part played by the Russian, the Italian, or even the French, navies—won the war as far as the water was concerned, in the first days of the conflict, and without battle, and now to these fleets have been added that of the United States.

"With the declaration of war against Great Britain three years ago, Germany became an isolated nation so far as the sea was concerned, save only for the Baltic. First of all her merchant marine was swept from the seas or interned in neutral ports. Almost with the first note of the call to arms, Hamburg and Bremen, the great German seaport cities, were paralyzed; they have been paralyzed ever since."

Simple Government.

The rajah of Sarawak was an Englishman, Sir Charles Johnson Brooke, G. C. M. G. He was described, and with good reason, as "the most absolute autocrat on the face of the earth." He once told Queen Victoria that he found it easier to govern 30,000 Malays and Dyaks than to manage a dozen of her subjects. "There isn't a lawyer in the whole of my dominions," he once said. "There is no red tape, and not a single official letter is ever written. I have reduced government to a miracle of simplicity simply because I trust my people, and they trust me. * * * It is very easy to govern a people with twelve inch guns beside you, but when one is alone it is very different."—Christian Science Monitor.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTION IN NORTH MONAGHAN.

To the Editor:

Dear Sir,—In reading Mr. Rye's address to the ratepayers of North Monaghan, I was struck with the manly sentiments enumerated therein, which were worthy of an honorable man. His describing the difficulties that confronted a candidate in dealing with a township composed of both rural and urban districts, was made plain, as neither section can understand or appreciate the requirements of the other. His aim is to administer their affairs fairly and justly as in the past year is commendable, and no doubt he will pour oil on the troubled waters. His motto is "united we stand, divided we fall." No better evidence could be afforded of his good record in the past than when at the nomination a man from the opposite end of the township declared publicly that the people were well satisfied with the treatment they had received in the year just closed; in fact that they had received far more than they expected.

If I know the ratepayers of North Monaghan, and I think I do, they know a good thing when they see it, and they are not going to exchange the man of their choice for the one he defeated, and they rejected, at the last election.

Yours truly,
FAIR PLAY

Jan. 4th, 1918.

Dear Sir,—Would you kindly reproduce the wording of the ballot taken on Tuesday regarding the proposed change in the ward system? If I am not mistaken, many voted the way they did not intend. Did not the ballot read for the repeal or against the repeal of a certain by-law?

The wording of the ballot in question is as follows:

"By-law to repeal by-law number 1498 of the City of Peterborough and to provide for the election of Aldermen of the City of Peterborough by a general vote of the electors instead of by wards."

The British Way.

To offer peace to Belgium is another "thoughtful" German stroke. It is very thoughtful, when you come to think of the way in which the German forces are falling back, in Flanders, before the powerful thrusts of the Anglo-French combination. And it is still more thoughtful when you read that American soldiers are now in the trenches on the western front. A little patience and Belgium will be freed, and it will be freed by just such methods as the Allies are now employing in restoring portions of the country. These methods were tersely described, recently, by an Irishman who had just returned from the trenches. He was telling of the elaborate German dugouts, when someone interrupted to ask: "But how do the British build their dugouts?" "They don't build them," he replied, "they take 'em."

New Norwegian Industry.

A syndicate of French-American capitalists is said to be establishing a company for the purpose of erecting electro-chemical works in the Telemarken district of Norway.

Greatest Heroes of the Canine World

The Belgian police dogs, on account of their ability to detect and capture criminals, and the great St. Bernards which were famous for their rescues of travelers lost in the Alpine snows were considered the greatest heroes of the canine world until the great world war introduced the Red Cross dogs whose deeds of valor in front of the front line trenches saved the lives of thousands of sorely wounded.

A HUGE LOT OF SCENERY IS CARRIED

As Result Matinee To-morrow Will Not Start Until 3 O'clock

Patrons of "The Grand" will note that the time for the Matinee "Which One Shall I Marry?" to-morrow, is changed to 3 p.m. This is owing to the fact that the company carries so much scenery that it is impossible to get it in position in time to start at the usual hour of 2.30. This is a splendid story told in allegorical form and local theatre goers can depend on seeing a performance worth while.

NOW STRAFE EVEN FISH

Huns Dynamite French Streams and Drain Rivers.

Germany's latest effort at sucking dry every inch of the invaded regions of France before she is obliged to evacuate them has just come to light in the discovery that the canals and rivers of Northern France are being drained lifeless of every eatable fish, declares a writer in The London Globe. While this latest barbarity might be explained in part by the critical food situation of the Germans, there is evidence, it is pointed out, that this is not the sole motive. Says this writer:

"The task of leaving the French rivers and canals fishless is being pursued with the same systematic thoroughness and attention to detail that characterized the efforts of the Germans preceding their retreat of last March to leave behind them a desolate wilderness, in which the French might not find either a mouthful of food or an ounce of material that would be of service to them.

"The necessity of draining dry many of the canals and portions of river beds rendered unusable by the Germans has brought to light numerous fish traps, seines, barriers, and other appliances used by the Germans in order to catch every fish. Frequently the canals and rivers were divided with barriers in order to render impossible the escape of a single fish. Evidence has also been found of the use of explosives for stunning the fish and bringing them to the surface, where they were raked in with hand-nets.

"The one idea dominating the Germans appears to have been to secure for their immediate use all the fish available, at the same time rendering it certain that after their evacuation it would be years before the French would again be able to restock the rivers and canals to their former plentifulness.

"The degree to which the canals and rivers have been seined dry is being demonstrated in another way. During their retreat the Germans dynamited scores of bridges, many of them huge steel and concrete affairs, which fell into the river or canal beds. Many of these weighed from twenty to one hundred tons or more.

"Before the Germans' devastation and retreat, the explosion necessary to break up one of these bridges now lying on the river beds would have stunned and brought to the surface hundreds of huge river fish for hundreds of yards in both directions. Now such an explosion brings to the surface probably half a dozen. What has been done by the Germans in this respect in the territory already evacuated is presumably being continued in all the remainder of France from which they are yet to be expelled."

Brussiloff's Sarcasm.

General Brussiloff, one of Russia's greatest military leaders, can be brusque when he chooses. He was once mistaken by an officer for a certain grand duke notoriously of pro-German sympathies. Saluting, the officer remarked: "Pardon me, sire, but I believe I am addressing the Grand Duke So-and-So?" "God forbid," replied Brussiloff. "I am an honest man." Saluting gravely, he passed on. And this incident was before the revolution.

Another Embargo.

The exportation from Canada of screenings produced in cleaning wheat and other grains is prohibited to all destinations abroad, other than the United Kingdom, British possessions, and protectories.

Draftees May Take The Morning Trains

Col. Mills was notified by telegram from Kingston this afternoon that Peterborough draftees need not leave tonight to report for duty, but may wait until to-morrow morning. They have two trains to choose from, one via Belleville at 8.25 a.m. and the other via Port Hope at 8.10 a.m. They will be able to report in Kingston to-morrow afternoon. This applies to the men who report in future. It is not necessary for them to be in Kingston before noon of their particular day, and hence may take the morning train out of Peterborough.

GAS FROM AUTO KILLS TWO.

Brothers Found Dead in Garage Were Not Victims of the Weather.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4. — John and Vincent Dragone, the two brothers who were found dead in a garage at [illegible] Avenue, Newark, yesterday morning, and who it was at first thought had been frozen to death were victims of carbon monoxide poisoning, according to County Physician Warren, who performed an autopsy later in the day. Dr. Warren says that the brothers were evidently working on a taxicab when they were overcome through all the oxygen in the tightly closed building having been consumed. Death followed as they lay on the floor in a zero temperature.

John was 20 years old and Vincent only 13, a pupil of Newton street Public school. The Dragones had gone to the garage after working the greater part of the night. When Isadore Siegel went there several hours later to get his car he found them dead on the floor.

BODY OF CHARLES X. REMOVED VIENNA.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The sarcophagus containing the bodies of Charles X. of France and members of his family, who went to Austria to five after Charles was dethroned, in 1830, has been removed by the Austrian authorities to the Carmelite Monastery, in Vienna, according to a despatch from that city to Amsterdam, as forwarded by Central News.

The sarcophagus had been lodged in the Franciscan Monastery, at Castagnavizza, near Gorizia, in the Austrian territory reclaimed from the Italians in the recent Austro-German offensive.

The bodies, in addition to the King's, are those of the Duke of Angouleme, eldest son of Charles X.; his consort, who was a daughter of Louis XVI.; Count de Chambord, grandson of Charles X, and his consort, Princess Theresa Modena.

SPEEDY COAL MAIN RESULT.

Director-General McAdoo Clears Up Congestion by Abolishing Priority Orders.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Railroad, labour, and finance questions engaged the attention of Director-General McAdoo and his staff to-day, along with the movement of coal.

Since Director-General McAdoo became head of a unified and Government-controlled railroad system a week ago the main tangible result has been he acceleration of coal shipments and a beginning of the clearing up of congestion in railroad yards by abolition of all priority orders.

HERE IS A TRUTHFUL MAN.

Thomas H. Swope, Kansas City multimillionaire, always declared he never earned a dollar of his millions. "All I did," he used to say, "was to buy Kansas City real estate when people were anxious to sell, and sell it occasionally when the were anxious to buy, but I kept the most of it. I just sat back and loafed while the people of Kansas City worked for me and built a great city and made me rich."

Such frankness is refreshing and iluminating.

RUSH AT LONDON WHISKEY SALE.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—So scarce has whiskey become that when a London distiller announced the sale of a supply released from bond, several hundred purchasers lined up hours before time. The price was 7s. 6d. a bottle, (about $1.85). Only one bottle was sold to each customer, and in twenty minutes the whole stock was cleared.

THE SUN SHINES SOMEWHERE.

Pasadena, Cal. — While the east shivered in zero weather on New Year's Day, there persons were overcome by the heat during the football game between the Marines and Camp Lewis, here. One of the three suffered sunstroke. More than forty thousand persons witnesesd the game, most of the women being attired in filmy summer gowns, while many of the men wore white ducks. Ripe blackberries were picked in Alamenda.

NO SILVER COINS IN ITALY.

ROME. — No more silver coins are being used in Italy. It was discovered that local and foreign shippers were melting them up and reselling the metal at a good product.

BRITISH LIVING COST DOUBLED BY WAR.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The cost of living in Great Britain has risen 106 per cent. since the war, according to official figures presented in the House of Commons.

VENICE MASS FOR JERUSALEM'S CAPTURE.

VENICE, Jan. 3.—A memorial mass was celebrated in St. Mark's in commemoration of the deliverance of Jerusalem from the Turk. The ceremonial took an unusual significance, inasmuch as the Austrians had declared they would be in the piazza of San Marco by the holidays. Instead of this, there were fervent demonstrations over the expulsion of the Turks from the Holy City.

UKRAINIA DELEGATES HAVE ARRIVED

Canadian Press Despatch:

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 4.—According to a telegram from Brest-Litovsk, peace delegates from Ukraine have arrived there and reported that the Ukrainian Government is preparing to conduct its own international affairs everywhere.

PRIORITY ORDERS ON U.S. RAILROADS ARE SUSPENDED.

Chicago, Jan. 4. — Announcement that all priority orders on the railroads had been suspended and that all classes of freight were now on an equality, had a bullish influence today on the corn market. Although such a policy in regard to freight was expected to help remove the traffic congestion as a whole, the trade seemed inclined to the view that an immediate effect would be to diminish the movement of corn to market.

GERMAN CHANCELLOR MAY BE FORCED OUT

LONDON, Jan. 4.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegrapn from Amsterdam gives a Berlin report that Count von Hertling the Imperial German Chancellor, is indisposed. The correspondent adds that a rumour in political circles is to the effect that there is intriguing to induce Count von Hertling's resignation on the ground of ill health in order to make way for Prince von Buelow again taking up the post of Imperial Chancellor.

FRANCE ASKS FARM LABORERS AND LOAN

PARIS, Jan. 4.—The 325,000 acres of wheat land retaken from the enemy this year in Northern France may be made to produce enough wheat next year for one million men, according to the estimate of a mission appointed by the Agricultural Department, which has been examining the liberated territory.

Both men and money are required, and the mission asks for a thousand volunteer American farmhands and a loan from American capital necessary to put the land in shape for cultivation. Forty million dollars is the amount thought necessary at once, and perhaps forty million more eventually.

DECLINED OFFER OF A KNIGHTHOOD.

John Galsworthy's Name in List Through Error.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—It is officially announced that John Galsworthy's name was included in the list of New Year's knights through an error. It appears that Mr. Galsworthy begged to be allowed to decline the offer of knighthood, and that his name was included in the official list owing to a misconception of his wishes.

CLOSE BUILDINGS.

Ottawa, Jan. 4. — A half dozen of the government buildings in the capital will be closed down until the coal shortage is relieved. This was decided upon by the Cabinet. The chief building which will be closed will be the Parliamentary Library, which is little used at the present time, one of the mines buildings, which closed, and some smaller buildings. Two hundred odd employees affected will have a nunexpected holiday.

Fourteen of the Separate School buildings were closed yesterday in the city as a result of the shortage of coal.

ROSS RIFLE FACTORY STARTS WORK AGAIN

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—The announcement from Quebec that to a limited extent the Ross Rifle factory is starting up again does not mean that arm is to be reverted to by the Canadian forces.

For military reasons, little is being said about the matter at military headquarters, but it is understood that the factory will be engaged in making parts and reconverting, and particularly on certain work which has been secured from the United States Government for rifles to be used for training or other purposes. It is known that, to that end, negotiations have been quietly progressing for some months.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

CURLING

CURLING KEEPS DOCTORS' BILLS DOWN.

No more striking testimony to the benefits of exercise in a competitive game and in particular to the advantages of one of Canada's great winter pastimes could be offered, than the following from one of the most respected members of the Toronto Bar:

"I am a barrister and solicitor at law. Began an extensive practice on the first day of October, 1904, and am still at it—in the same building where I started. Have the same corporation for clients, and they still seem to want my services. After the first twelve or fourteen years of hard work I was 'down and out.'

"This was before I played curling or golf. My doctor ordered me to Florida for the winter. Instead of going, I reduced my work, renewed my boyhood acquaintance with skating, and learned at forty-five the game of curling, and afterwards the game of golf (two of the finest health-giving games for men of sedentary habits which were ever devised). To-day, at seventy-eight, I skipped a rink and played a good game. If I say so, who should not? "I shall, however, speak about curling, for I find that my brother golfers know little about it. Most of my fellow-golfers in the fall of the year take refuge in their hot offices, sitting near hot radiators and letting their lives get dormant. About March they want to go south to recover from bilious headaches. They then realize the truth of the pun that whether life is worth living depends on the liver. Now, curling would have kept them in good health and saved them money, for nothing runs away with money so quickly as bad health.

"When men talk to me about it being a cold game, I tell them that on the contrary it is a hot game. Let a man play two and a half hours putting up from 24 to 33 stones, weighing from 40 to 50 pounds each with the intervening sweeping, and he will find himself hot enough—he won't want any "liver pills."

Last night's scheduled games resulted as follows:

A Close Game.

One of the surprises of the evening was Percy Fitzgerald's win. He tied George Giroux on the second last end with a three counter, and won out coming home, playing a cool, steady game against the veteran skip, whose difficulty last night seemed to be "low visibility," in addition to the handicap of playing one man short.

Walter Oke, another new skip, drew a win from J. W. McDermid.

All the rinks were engaged, old number 7 sporting a scratch game.

Juniors In First Game At Lindsay

Will Meet the Midgets on Their Own Ice To-night

The Peterborough Juniors leave for Lindsay on the 5.30 train this evening to open the O.H.A. season. The local squad are in fairly good shape, and should give a creditable account of themselves. The Petes will line up as follows:

Goal—Murray.
Right defence—McMahon.
Centre—Cherrett.
Right wing—Williams.
Substitute—Gerard.

The Lindsay Post says:

The hockey season opens to-morrow (Friday) night at 8.30 o'clock, in the local rink, when Lindsay's O.H.A. Juniors meet Peterborough's junior septette. The local management has selected a classy seven which may be depended on to give the Petes a busy night. The fans are asked to turn out in goodly numbers in order to encourage the Midgets, who have shown great form in their practices. The local line-up will be: Oliver, goal (captain); Garnet and Wilford, defence; Lyons, centre; Rogers, left wing; Conley, right wing.

HOCKEY PRACTICE.

All the players of the George Street Hockey Club will practice to-night (Friday) at the Brock Street Rink from 7 to 8.

The Ukulele.

There are 20,000 Portuguese in the Hawaiian Islands, and it is charged that these people, and not the natives, are responsible for the ukulele. It has long been a matter of common knowledge that the instrument was introduced into the islands by a Portuguese, but that is not really the question of greatest moment. So long as the ukulele was confined to Hawaii it was almost as harmless as a banjo, the guitar or the mandolin. Nobody then had a word to say against it. The point that needs to be cleared up is, Where lies the responsibility for introducing it, not into Hawaii, but into Canada?

JUNIOR CHURCH HOCKEY LEAGUE IS ORGANIZED

Last evening in the Y.M.C.A. parlours the Junior Church Hockey League was organized for the coming season. The following officers were elected:

Hon. President—Rev. R. B. Grobb.
President—Mr. Thomas Hendry.
Vice-President—Dr. Middleton.
Sec.-Treasurer—Mr. Frank Patterson.

The churches represented at this meeting were: George Street, Knox, St. Paul's, St. James, All Saints'.

The next meeting will be on Monday next at 7.30 p.m. sharp. Any other churches wishing to enter the League must have a representative at the meeting on Monday next.

On Monday a schedule will be drawn up and other business discussed. All officers of last season are requested to be present at this meeting to deal with business left over from last year.

THE PRISONERS OF WAR

GERMANS HAVE PROMISED TO BE MORE HUMANE.

Agreement Between the British and Teutonic Governments Will Bring About Improved Conditions—All Men Expatriated Will Not Be Employed on Any Front.

DETAILS of an agreement between the British and German Governments concerning combatant and civilian prisoners of war, which, if kept by the Teuton officials delegated to carry it out, will greatly ameliorate the condition of the wretched captives held in Germany, are made public in a White Paper just issued by Great Britain. The conference at which the agreement was reached was held at The Hague under the presidency of J. Louden, the Netherlands Minister of Foreign Affairs, assisted by two other Dutch officials, Minister Jonkheer and Dr. C. G. W. F. Van Vredenburgh.

At this conference also an arrangement was made whereby the Netherlands Government undertook to care for 16,000 British and German combatant or civilian prisoners of war, the respective Governments of these nationals to refund all costs of internment and to furnish materials necessary for the construction and upkeep of the camps, for medical attention, and for the victualing and clothing of the interned.

A very important arrangement is that reprisals against combatant and civilian prisoners of war may only be carried out after at least four weeks' notice of intention so to do has been given. The time limit begins with the date on which the Swiss Legation in London has been notified of the intended reprisals against German prisoners in British hands, or the Netherlands Legation in Berlin has been apprised of those contemplated against British prisoners in German hands. In cases which seem suitable an attempt will be made to eliminate the reasons for reprisals by arranging a personal discussion at The Hague before threatening the reprisals.

Another clause of deep interest provides that both military administrations will immediately repeat instructions to all concerned to the following effect: All captures are to be notified by the captor state to the other state with the least possible delay; every prisoner is to be enabled to inform his family of an address at which his family can communicate with him.

Other provisions, in brief, are appended:

Repatriation of combatant and civilian prisoners of war under the existing agreements shall be resumed as soon as practical, and to that end the Netherlands Government has been requested by both parties to arrange for and carry through such repatriation in a manner agreeabel to the British and German Governments.

All tuberculous prisoners interned in Switzerland, who are practically cured, shall be repatriated after examination.

New and more lenient schedules of disabilities shall be drawn up for guidance in choosing combatant prisoners of war for repatriation direct or from a neutral country, and for internment in a neutral country.

Prisoners of war who have been at least eighteen months in captivity, and who are suffering from "barbed wire disease," shall for the future be recognized as suitable for internment in Switzerland or other neutral country. If, after being interned there for three months, a considerable improvement in health is not observable, the disease will be treated as serious and the prisoner entitled to be considered for repatriation.

With the consent of the Swiss Government, there shall be effectuated a complementary internment in Switzerland of prisoners who were in captivity prior to the 1st of November, 1916. The examination for this purpose shall be conducted by two commissions, each composed of three Swiss doctors and three doctors of the captor state, the senior Swiss medical officer to have the casting vote in case the commission is equally divided in opinion.

The classes of prisoners whose cases are to be decided upon by these commissions are: Prisoners of war who have already been selected as fit for internment in a neutral country by the travelling medical commission, but whose cases have been adjourned for future consideration; prisoners of whom it has become known that they have been ill for some time, but have, for unknown reasons, not been recognized as being fit for internment; and prisoners who by mistake or inadvertence, have not had their cases brought before the traveling commission, or who have been unable to appear before it.

None of these prisoners shall be finally rejected at the first examination. All those not selected for repatriation or internment shall be transferred to an observation camp and their cases shall be considered again by the commission after an interval of four weeks. When the decision is unfavorable to the prisoner, the reasons shall be explicitly given. All prisoners designated as being fit for internment shall be transferred to Switzerland as soon as practicable.

In order to gain room for the complementary internment, the British prisoners interned by the German Government and the German prisoners interned by the British Government, who need a long time for their complete recovery, shall be repatriated from Switzerland according to the agreement for the reciprocal exchange of the severely wounded and seriously ill. The decision is a matter for the Swiss doctors, and shall be binding on both sides.

The examination of invalids for repatriation from a neutral country shall be made by a commission composed of two medical officers of the captor state and a representative of the Legation of the same state in the country of internment.

Prisoners repatriated in pursuance of this chapter shall not be employed on any front of military operations or on the lines of communication or within occupied territory.

All officers and non-commissioned officers, irrespective of rank or number, and whether under punishment or not, so soon as they have been in captivity at least eighteen months, shall, so far as they do not express the desire to remain, be interned in Switzerland or other neutral countries, subject always to the possibility of accommodation being found for them, which both Governments will use their best efforts to secure. The order of transfer to the neutral country shall be that of priority of capture, irrespective of nationality. As far as German officers and non-commissioned officers are concerned, the agreement contained in this paragraph applies to those only who are now or may hereafter be in Great Britain and France.

One thousand six hundred of the Great Britain, and 400 of the Brit-German civilians now interned in Great Britain, and 400 of the British civilians now interned in Germany, shall be interned in the Netherlands. They shall be chosen by the medical authorities of the captor State. If on either side the civilians who are found to be qualified do not reach the requisite number the deficiency shall be made up by adding those who, in the opinion of the medical authorities of the captor State, are the next most in need of relief from captivity on medical grounds.

Both military administrations will use every endeavor to secure the speedy delivery of all parcels addressed to prisoners of war, both combatant and civilian, and to avoid all unnecessary censorship.

Chang is Chinese Villa.

On July 2 the world was startled by the news that Gen. Chang Hsun had informed President Li that he must give up the presidency, as the monarchy was to be restored in the person of the Manchu Emperor Hsuan-tung. This move Chang obviously made upon his own authority. Chang Hsun is "the Francesco Villa of China." Illiterate and with no military training, he was twenty years ago a mafoo or groom. He was a member of the party which accompanied the empress dowager in her flight to the west in 1900. After the return to Pekin he was made an officer, and by 1901 he had attained the position of Tartar-General at Nanking.

There, during the revolution, he earned the sobriquet, "the butcher of Nanking." When he evacuated Nanking under the attack of the revolutionary forces he moved northward on the Tientsin-Pukow railway and established himself at Hsu Chow-fu, where he has since gradually accumulated a following of some 30,000 or 40,000 men. So powerful has he been that the Government has never dared attempt to dislodge him, but on the contrary has purchased his support, finally conferring on him the rank of field marshal and making him inspector of the Yang-tse Provinces. He is said to have accumulated a fortune of several million dollars and he has undoubtedly been the most feared of the military leaders. He has no respect for parliaments and no sympathy for republican ideals or aspirations.—Stanley K. Hornbeck, in American Review of Reviews.

Planters Buy Pianos.

There appears to be relationship between the coffee industry and the piano business in Guatemala. Whenever there is a good year for coffee in the republic there is a better demand for pianos.

WEDDING BELLS

BLONDON—STARR.

A very pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized in St. George's Church by the Rev. James Price on January 1st, at 10 a.m., when Miss Lillian Starr was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Bruce Blondon, of this city. They were attended by Miss Evelyne and Arthur Charlton. The happy couple will be at home to their friends at 640 Bethune Street.

OBITUARY

MRS. JAMES THOMPSON.

On Thursday afternoon, at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. D. G. Hoocy, 370 Aylmer street, Agnes J. Preston, relict of the late James Thompson, died after an illness of some years duration. Deceased was born in Canada 70 years ago, and previous to coming to Peterborough 20 years ago, had resided near Port Hope.

She leaves of the immediate family, three daughters, Mrs. W. J. Johnson, Mrs. D. G. Hoocy, and Margaret M. Thompson, all of the city, and one brother, Thomas Preston.

The funeral (private) from 370 Aylmer street, will take place on Saturday at 2.30. Service at the house conducted by Rev. Mr. Doner before proceeding to the Little Lake cemetery.

SUGGESTS CLOSING OF THE ARMOURIES

LINDSAY, Jan. 4.—With a view to relieving the local coal situation His Worship Mayor Kylie wrote to Minister of Militia Mewburn yesterday in order to ascertain if it were possible to have the armouries closed during the winter months in case soldiers are not stationed here. Some ninety tons of coal were delivered at the armouries in the fall, and if even a portion of this is saved for distribution locally it would ease the situation greatly.

FAILED TO REACH PORT IN TIME TO SAVE SHIP.

San Pacific Port, Jan. 4.—The situation of the japanese freighter, Shinyo Maru No. 2, in whose hold a fire has been raging since Wednesday, was described as hopeless in a cablegram received by the Marine Department of the Chamber of Commerce here. Assistance was near, the message said, and it was expected here that her crew of approximately 30 men would be removed from the blazing vessel without loss of life.

All day the Shinyo Maru has been racing at full speed towards a Pacific port, where it was expected that the fire might be combatted successfully. Last night she was almost within sight of her goal it seemed certain, according to the advices, that she would be destroyed together with her cargo of 7,000 tons of steel, cotton and other merchandise.

MRS. FESSENDEN IS BEREAVED

Her Uncle Mr. Charles Unwin, Veteran Surveyor, Passes Away

TORONTO, Jan. 4.—One of the oldest city officials passed away at noon yesterday in the person of Mr. Charles Unwin, Dominion and Ontario Land Surveyor. The late Mr. Unwin, who attained his eighty-eighth year on Sunday last, was in the city's service since 1873. For many years he was an assessor and in 1905 became City Surveyor, which post he retained until 1910. Since then he was on the City Surveyor's staff as consultant. Having laid out a great portion of the city he possessed a vast fund of information, and had his private surveyor's marks over a large area.

Mr. Unwin was born in Mansfield, Notts, England, on 30th December, 1829. He was the only son of James Brown Unwin and Ann Parsons Unwin. With his five sisters he came to his uncle, Charles Unwin, in this city in 1843, his mother and other sisters coming later, when he had made a home for them. All his sisters predeceased him.

From 1843 to 1847 Mr. Unwin attended Upper Canada College. He studied his profession under Mr. J. Stoughton Dennis, at Weston, and received his certificate as a Provincial land surveyor "in and for Upper Canada," in 1852.

Surveyed Indian Reserves.

For some time he was Secretary of the Provincial Board of Examiners. While with Mr. Dennis he made a survey of the Indian reserves along the north shore of Lake Huron. Mr. Unwin did much Government work, including the first Government survey of the township of Lutterworth. Perhaps his most important work was the survey and valuation of the Thousand Islands in the St. Lawrence River.

The late Mr. Unwin was one of the original committee for the formation of All Saints' Parish, and has been a regular attendant since services were first held in that parish in 1874. He has held the office of Churchwarden and has been lay delegate to the Synod of Toronto. He was a bachelor, and his nearest relatives are a nephew and two nieces: Charles J. Agar, Mrs. Cortez Fessenden, Peterborough, and Mrs. James Patton Reynolds, St. Louis, Mo., U.S.A.

Farmers Urged To Prosecute Appeals

Ottawa, January 4. — General Mewburn, Minister of Militia, announced yesterday that there appears to be a misapprehension on the part of a consideraole number of farmers as to his powers in connection with discharge of men called up under the Military Service Act.

In a statement issued, he says, in part:

71 DEGREES BELOW ZERO RECORDED IN YUKON

DAWSON, Yukon Territory, Jan. 4.—For the last 32 days of the old year the temperature at Dawson averaged 53 degrees below zero, and ever lower than that at some other points in the Yukon valley. Conditions changed for the better with the arrival of the New Year. The thermometer is registering in the thirties now. The lowest recorded at Dawson was 56. At Pelly 71 below was reached.

An epidemic of pneumonia kept all the Dawson hospitals filled. The deaths from pneumonia include those of Ernest Rivard, former Commissioner of Public Works to Dawson; James Cassidy, agent of the New York Life Insurance Company; Bert B. Pinkerton, a well known pioneer and Yukon ... J. Kearns, pioneer miner; William Powell, a well known ... and Mrs. Dan Coates.

JEWISH BATTALION SAILS TO FIGHT IN PALESTINE

LONDON, Jan 4.—The new Jewish battalion of the British army, which has just completed its training, sailed to-day for the Palestine front.

The battalion is under the command of Col. J. H. Patterson, an Irishman and a great lion hunter in East Africa in the days before the war. His experience in command of Jewish troops dates back to the Gallipoli campaign, where he was in charge of the famous Zion Mule Corps, formed in Egypt of Jewish refugees from Palestine.

WORK WITH AGRICULTURAL REPRESENTATIVES.

"Farmers claiming exemption should take advantage of the advice and assistance of the representatives of the Department of Agriculture, who were appointed under Order in Council in each county. These representatives will take cases up with the District Military Representative, and will prosecute appeals on behalf of the farmers wherever they think it necessary to do so. These representatives of the Department of Agriculture were appointed for the purpose of facilitating and not interfering with the operation of the Military Service Act. They are not tribunals with power to give judgment, but were appointed to advise as to the merits of individual cases and will themselves prosecute on behalf of farmers such appeals as they consider worthy of attention.

Tea

Fruit Salad Bread
Oatmeal Macaroons Tea

The recipes for Cheese Omelet and Oatmeal Macaroons mentioned above, are as follows:

Cheese Omelet—
1 egg
1 tablespoon cold water
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons grated cheese

Put the fat in a pan, and heat. Beat the egg and add cold water, and salt and pepper to taste. Pour the egg into the saucepan and cook until nearly set. Then add the cheese, fold over immediately and remove from the fire. As soon as the cheese is melted, remove the omelet from the pan and serve. The heat of the cooked omelet should melt the cheese. If it is left any longer it becomes tough and indigestible.

Oatmeal Macaroons
1 1-2 cups rolled oats
1 egg
1-2 cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
Pinch of salt.

Beat the egg; add the sugar and salt. Mix the baking powder with the oatmeal, and add the oatmeal to the egg, sugar, etc. Stir thoroughly, and drop by teaspoonfuls into a greased pan, leaving room to spread. Cook in a fairly hot oven until done.

You May Find It In Stocking

Cincinnati authority says your troublesome corns just loosen and fall off

Sore corns, hard corns, soft corns, or corns between the toes just loosen in their sockets and fall off the next day if you will apply directly upon the corn a few drops of a drug called freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

You merely put a drop or two of this freezone on the tender, touchy corn to-day and instantly the corn stops hurting, then to-morrow sometime you may find the old torturous pest somewhere in your stocking, having fallen off entirely without a particle of soreness, pain or iritation. The skin surrounding and beneath the former corn will be as healthy, pink and smooth as the palm of your hand.

A quarter ounce of freezone is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn, and callus and any druggist will charge but a few cents for it. It is a compound made from ether.

Keep A Little Pig In Your Own Back Yard, Says Mr. Hanna

"A Properly Cared For Pig is No More Unsanitary Than a Properly Cared For Dog"—Public Health Acts Are Provincial Enactments.

"KEEP A PIG" MOVEMENT

OTTAWA, Jan. 5.—In view of the world shortage of foodstuffs and the importance of bacon in the list of exports to the men at the front and the people of Allied Europe, it is interesting to contrast two striking facts. In Germany 4,000,000 hogs are maintained as auxiliary to the national food supply by the citizens of urban municipalities. In Canada on the other hand, where the total number of hogs in the country at most is only 3,500,000, the keeping of pigs is practically prohibited within urban municipalities. "Swine," reads a typical ordinance, "shall not be kept within the limits of this municipality except in pens, with floors kept free of standing water and regularly cleansed and disinfected and distant at least one hundred feet from any dwelling house, school house or church."

Food Shortage.

Public health acts are provincial enactments and though they may cover regulations as to keeping pigs, they generally place this matter largely upon the discretion of municipal authorities. But the trend of municipal regulations has been to discourage the keeping of pigs within the limits not only of cities and their supplies, but also those of even small towns and villages. However well justified such regulations may have been in peace times the question of their entire wisdom in the circumstances of the present day, and the conditions of acute food shortage occasioned by the war, might well be a matter of municipal consideration.

Waste of Food.

In view of an estimated waste of food in the garbage of Canadian cities and towns amounting to something over $50,000,000 per year, it would seem that there was room for the "keep a pig" movement in Canada. There are obviously many places in small towns and on the outskirts of cities where pigs might be kept without menace or annoyance to the community. No one would suggest that pigs be kept where they might become a nuisance. But where there is plenty of space, as in many a suburban garden of the typical Canadian town and city, there should be no difficulty, and there would be a decided practical advantage in keeping pigs and increasing the bacon supply. Food scraps, kitchen refuse and garden gleanings of all sorts usually buried or burned, would thus become of actual value instead of a charge. Where the regulations should be relaxed, and where they should be enforced would be determined in each case individually, and the good sense of an enlightened public would approve official action along those lines.

General Response.

Farmers, according to reports from the different provinces, are energetically taking up the campaign for an increased production of hogs in 1918. There is a general response in rural sections to the patriotic call. Greater production is the duty of the whole Canadian people for 1918. People in the cities, towns and villages responded in 1917 to the appeal to cultivate vacant lots. In 1918, this work might be supplemented by the addition of an effort to increase the production of bacon.

What applies to pigs could also apply to poultry-keeping. There are many restrictions which might be reasonably relaxed with all round benefit. A dozen hens can be kept laying on the waste bread and vegetables of the ordinary family, supplemented by a little corn. Poultry keeping could be as well carried out in the large cities as elsewhere. Indeed, while it was found that the "back garden" plan worked surprisingly well in the large cities, only the fringe of the possibilities in food production in urban areas has yet been touched.

The Food Controller does not suggest that either pigs or fowl be kept in places where the remotest chance of injury to health could result or even where the inconveniences might outweigh the advantages. It only requires a small body of level-headed, determined citizens in each place to take the matter up with the local authorities, to urge them to get the necessary of patriotism, public spirit, care and fast regulations. The rest is a matter of patriotism, public siprit, care and good sense.

CATTLE MARKET

Receipts of cattle have been comparatively light, though considerably in excess of the previous week. While the demand is usually not heavy for the first week in the year, coming immediately after the heavy demands for the Christmas and New Year's trade, still the week's receipts were considerably below normal. This condition in part due to the severity of the weather of late and the consequent difficulty of getting the cattle out, and also to transport difficulties due to the general shortage of cars. Apart from these difficulties there is also, it is said, a disposition on the part of many of the farmers to hold up their cattle for a while. This, however, may have been offset by the readiness of others to ship cattle in before they are well warmed up and in good finished condition for marketing. The result has been that many of these half-finished heavy steers have rather dragged on the market, the packers and wholesale butchers preferring the lighter weight, clean, well-finished butcher cattle. On the whole the market has ruled steady to strong at the recent high prices, with the tendency higher for the choicest selected lots of handy butcher steers and heifers. There has been a steady and active demand for butcher cows, canners, and cutters at strong prices.

There has been a steady enquiry for choice quality stockers and feeders.

Choice milch cows in good steady demand.

Supplies of sheep and lambs were particularly light all through the week, with prices correspondingly strong, choice lambs advancing to $19 the latter end of the week.

Hogs have held steady, but inclined to weaken towards the end of the week, prices being somewhat wide and irregular, ranging from $18.25 to $18.75, fed and watered, and $17.50 to $17.55 f.o.b.

Cattle Markets.

Union Stock Yards—Total receipts this week, 304 cars, with 3,903 cattle, 222 calves, 8,634 hogs, 1,076 sheep and lambs, and 1,813 horses.

City Cattle Market— 22 cars, with 268 cattle, 184 sheep and lambs, 389 hogs, 34 calves, and 19 horses.

What Makes a Car Old.

The life of the bearings of a car determines the usefulness of the entire machine. A car with badly worn bearings is an old car, even though it may have traveled less than 10,000 miles, whereas one which has seen 100,000 miles of use and still has its bearings in good condition is, comparatively speaking, a new machine.

Wear on bearings is determined by four conditions—the load which that bearing carries, the speed at which the bearing surfaces move over each other, the nature of those surfaces and their ability to resist wear and the lubrication which these surfaces receive and its ability to prevent the formation of the destructive heat of friction.

The matter of load becomes a matter of size, for with a given load it is but natural that with a large surface over which to distribute the pressure the load on each square inch of bearing surface will be less. This means that the life of bearings will, in general, be in proportion to their size.

From Private to Private Life.

A little known episode in the career of the dethroned czar, Nicholas II., was his period of service in the Russian army as a common soldier. He submitted to all the restrictions placed on an ordinary private, saluting his officers and carrying his full equipment with the rest. On the regimental roll he figured as "Private Nicholas Romanoff, of the Orthodox faith, coming from Tsarskoe Selo."

DEFAULTERS WILL NOT BE ARRESTED FOR A FEW DAYS

Military Authorities of the Opinion the Number Will Be Small—Many Have Joined With Other Units

TORONTO, Jan. 5.—Six days of mobilising Canada's new army pass on the question of enforcing the law against men who fail to report for duty as ordered becomes of greater importance.

Although the Ontario Registrar, Mr. Glynn Osaler, is charged with enforcing the conditions of the Military Service Act in this district, draftees pass out of his jurisdiction once they are formally ordered to report to any of the mobilization centres. They then come under the jurisdiction of the various commanding officers to whom they are to report. Those who fail to report come under the jurisdiction of Col. George, Assistant Adjutant General of this district, whose duty it is to direct the enforcement of the law.

Discussing the situation yesterday, Col. George intimated that the Act would not be enforced rigidly for several days yet. He thought that scores of men who had not yet reported as ordered had legitimate excuses. The authorities, he intimated, were disposed to deal leniently and sympathetically with all draftees who were a little tardy in showing up so long as they had any reasonable cause for delay. A list of draftees absent without leave, he said, would likely be given out in a few days.

Have Joined Other Units.

It is stated that many men who knew they would be called upon shortly took advantage of the opportunity of joining other units such as the Royal Flying Corps and artillery as volunteers and have neglected to notify the Registrar, as a result of which they have been called up as draftees. One other ventured the opinion that this action would account for a substantial number of defaulters.

'Everything is going along smoothly," was the comment Major-Gen. Logie gave regarding the first operations of the draft system. The General was quite pleased with the situation despite the fact that a few dozen draftees failed to put in an appearance.

GRAIN MARKET

Canada Western oats were again advanced one cent per bushel yesterday in store at Fort William. The strong cash situation and light receipts combine to keep prices on the up grade. The corn situation also continues strong, notwithstanding the railroad transport conditions. Wheat is as active as the car situation will allow.

Welcoming the Actor.

A well known society performer volunteered to entertain a roomful of patients of the Colney Hatch Lunatic asylum and made up a very successful little monologue show, entirely humorous. The audience in the main gave symptoms of being slightly bored, but one highly intelligent maniac saw the thing in proper light and, clapping the talented actor on the shoulder, said:

"Glad you've come, old fellow. You and I will get along fine. The other dippies here are so dashed dignified. What I say is if a man is mad he needn't put on airs about it."—London Opinion.

Helping the Coffee.

Some of the coffee sold roasted and ground causes complaint. Most of it can be improved a little. Trouble seems to be that it is not roasted enough and needs another touch of fire. You know the less it is roasted the more it weighs. Put a couple of tablespoonfuls in a seamless agate stewpan or cup and set it on the stove, gas or blue flame and shake it while it gets another scant parching, never letting it get hot enough to smoke or scorch. Set it aside till it gets cold and then pour on the water and finish up in the regular way.

Saving Time.

Mrs. Styles—I read today that hats are being made of banana skins.

Mr. Styles—Why don't you get one, dear?

"What's the idea?"

"It would save a lot of time. It could be slipped on so easily."

"PILLBOXES."

What They Are, and What British Are Doing to Combat Them.

One point emerges with great clearness from the reports on the recent fighting namely, that a reply has been found to the German defensive device variously described as redoubts, anti-tank turrets, "blockhouses, and, in the soldiers' vernacular, "pillboxes." General Sixt von Arnim, who is in command of the German armies on the front of the recent fighting, is an ingenious and able soldier. His famous report on the Somme battle, which was captured, revealed the possession of a very fresh mentality, able to analyze and learn, extremely frank and unusually free from preconceived ideas. It was this general who was faced with the necessity for finding some defensive substitute for the deep dugout, which the certainty of striking water at any depth over a few feet puts out of court on the Ypres front.

His reply was the pillbox or concrete room, capable of holding 40 to 50 men. These pillboxes had reinforced concrete walls, eight feet thick on three sides, and with a correspondingly thick roof. On the fourth side, that farthest away from the British, they were only made thick enough to resist rifle bullets or bombs, so that if captured they would be of little value to the captors. These things were easily constructed in a few days, and were strung in rows along the front, like the trench system, camouflage effects being secured by building them amid ruined farms or other cover.

General von Arnim added to the value of this defensive device by an ingenious arrangement of his barbed wiring, which appeared to have passages left in it whereby the attacking soldiers could get behind the blockhouses. The attacking British troops, following the line of least resistance and endeavoring to make their way through these passages amid the barbed wire, would eventually find themselves stranded in a species of barbed wire cul de sac amid a nest of blockhouses opening crossfire on them in all directions.

The great feature of the blockhouses, however, was that the field-gun fire had apparently no effect on them. Only a direct hit from a big gun would destroy them, and with big guns situated miles behind the firing line direct hits are not easy to secure. Tanks could reduce them, but tanks had their own difficulties with the Flanders mud and could not be used to the extent necessitated.

In short, General von Arnim's device—was for some little time, in the soldiers' vernacular, a complete snag. It has now been overcome, although full details are not available as to precise method. Improved intelligence work has played a prominent part, most of these blockhouses being now definitely located and mapped before the attack is made on them. Gas has been used to some extent, and some big guns have been brought nearer and many direct hits obtained. The general effect of the counter measures has been so devastating that blockhouses appear likely to pass to the limbo of forgotten things. It is reported that the Germans are constructing no more.

It is found that everywhere direct hits are not obtained the concussion of big shells is such that all blockhouses within a certain radius are toppled over, having naturally no great depth or strength of foundation. Casualties in them are naturally enormous, and their experiences within them have had a very demoralizing effect on the German soldier.

"Bankrupt."

Few words have so remarkable a history as "bankrupt." The money-changers of Italy had benches or stalls in the bourse or exchange in former times. At these they conducted their ordinary business. When any of them fell back in the world and became insolvent his bench was broken, and the name of "broken bench," or banca rotta, was given to him. When the word was first adopted into English it was nearer the Italian than it now is, being "bankerout" instead of "bankrupt."

MORE HUN BRUTALITY

How Nurses Were Treated by German Commander.

The statement of the Rev. A. B. Hellier, M.A., Oxon., Inspector of Schools in Zanzibar Diocese, has many references to one Dorrendorf, a German planter of ill-repute:

Dorrendorf was in charge at Kiboriani (a Church Missionary Society sanatorium turned into a prison camp).

"Miss Davey left Kiboriani to nurse at Kilimatinde. It was necessary to go to Culwa Station, 20 miles away. It was pouring with rain and she asked for a native chair. Dorrendorf abused her violently and refused.

"Kiboriani, where Dorrendorf was in charge, was the only place to my knowledge where priests and ladies were made to work. The ladies had to make socks and underclothing for the Germans. Kiborsiani was supposed to be a first-class camp to which privileged prisoners were sent, especially ladies. Dorrendorf had a reputation, before the war, of gross brutality towards natives.

"Dorrendorf built a special punishment cell, which he called Ross' Villa, after a British prisoner towards whom he was particularly malignant. Dorrendorf ordered us to take off our hats to any German we passed at any time of the day. Punishments were inflicted on anyone who omitted this salute. The Kiboriani prisoners were moved to Bulgiri, with Dorrendorf in charge. The behaviour of the native guards towards the prisoners at Kiboriani was extremely insolent, and was encouraged by Dorrendorf. The guards would enter our rooms (even those of the ladies), and compel the occupants to leave their beds. Miss Horne, a nurse, was ordered to leave Kiboriani for Kilimatinde to attend typhoid cases. Dorrendorf would not allow her a native chair, and she was compelled to walk the 20 miles to Kilimatinde. Miss Dutton, of the mission, was a few minutes late at work one morning, and Dorrendorf abused her violently and threatened her with bread and water.

"Dorrendorf was frequently the worse for liquor and extremely noisy. Once he broke into a room in which six of the ladies were sleeping. Forty-nine European prisoners (nearly all British), thirty-four of whom were ladies, and twelve of whom were babies in arms, were taken by Dorrendorf from Bulgiri to Tabora. We walked to Kikombo. We were marched straight into an iron-goods shed, together with forty-one native prisoners. Armed Askaris were posted on all four sides of the shed. Dorrendorf gave orders that ladies were to be allowed to go to the lavatory two at a time under armed escort.

"One of the Askaris was very insulting and brought Dorrendorf and Gerth, the other German guard. Gerth kicked against the shed and shouted. Someone laughed, thinking it was a native. Gerth entered. He had been drinking. He was purple with rage. He abused us. Then Dorrendorf entered in a similar state. He abused the English nation. He abused Sister Eva (Miss Clutterbuck) violently, and said English women make more trouble than the men, and finally instructed the guard to shoot at once any man or woman, white or black, who moved. He went out saying 'Swine.' We were left without food for twenty-two hours, until we wrote for some. (The sufferings of the women are then described.)

"At 10 a.m. Miss Plant sent a note to Dorrendorf that we were starving. He allowed Miss Plant and Miss Foden to make a fire, and sent a quantity of rice, a lump of fresh pork, and a bucket of water. About mid-day the heat was dreadful. There was no ventilation, except for one window covered with matting. The Askari said Dorrendorf was asleep and we should have to wait.

Mother and Children Had Awful Coughs

WERE CURED BY

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

Mrs. Arthur Appleyard, Novar, Ont., writes: "This past winter my children and I had awful colds and coughs which we got by being in drafts. I tried a number of different remedies for us, but got no relief. I thought I would try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and I found it a most excellent and sure cure. It gave relief to the tickling in the throat, and stopped the cough, and with a few bottles we were all cured."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is a remedy that has been on the market for over twenty-five years, and we can recommend it as being without doubt, the best cure for coughs and colds that you can posibly procure.

There are a lot of imitations on the market, so when you ask for "Dr. Wood's" see that you get it. Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Blunders by Novelists.

Novelists, even of eminence, are prone to make blunders. Sir Walter Scott in "For Faith and Freedom" wrote after the Eykins had settled in Providence, "Barnaby soon grew tired of this quiet life and went on board a steamer bound for England, promising that we should hear from him." This was in 1680 or 1687, and the first steamer from America to England did not reach Liverpool till July, 1819. Wilkie Collins also made numerous amazing blunders. In "The Duel in Herne Wood" he makes the story open with the receipt of a telegram, and the period is 1817, when twenty years had to elapse before the first telegraphic wire was laid. Three of the characters also talk of "taking the express train to London" in defiance of the fact that the first railway to London was not opened till 1837.

FRENCH BREAD CARDS.

Parisians Do Not Like Their Food Restrictions.

Firmly resolved as they are to submit to any sacrifice to ensure victory, the Parisians have shown far more passive resistance to limitations of bread and amusements than to any of the many restrictions that they have to endure. At one time, in order to economise lighting and coal, the theaters were closed two nights a week and movies were cut down by several shows. This regulation very soon quietly dropped out of observation, and theaters, music halls, and cinemas resumed full time operation. It is true that it was vaguely understood that no place of entertainment should use more lighting and heating during the seven days a week than it had during five, but this was merely a way of saving the face of the authorities who had made the regulation.

As for bread, the war began by robbing the Parisian of his little rolls and crescents which he was convinced was the only civilized form of taking his day's first meal. Then it took away his fancy bread and now the last straw, it has taken away white bread altogether, leaving him a brown substance with a very hard crust which covers a doughy and indigestible inside, which so recalls his own description of German K K bread that he blushes when he recalls his brilliant witticisms on the subject during the first year of the war.

Madame Elsa Poulle, a lady who earns her living by selling vegetables from a pushcart, had a perfect defense the other day, when summoned for insulting the police. "It's all the fault of the nasty sawdust bread," she declared. "It won't digest and you have to drink." Unfortunately she was not before a jury but a magistrate, who had to support official bread, and so fined her a dollar.

With bread reduced to the present unpopular quality, although some bakers make it quite good, the opposition to the last stage in bread regulating, the bread card, has hardly existed. The unhappy Parisian, who has quite foresworn his habit of demanding more bread, has a secret hope that bread cards may effect such an economy that he may once more be allowed his beloved white bread, and after his recent experience he is quite prepared to limit his consumption severely, if the reduced allowance is only of good quality.

The "Official Journal" has just published the decree regulating the making and consumption of bread, and explaining how the bread cards are to be operated. The decree is very long and very complicated, and does not read as if it will be workable in practice. Children from one year to six are allowed two-thirds of a pound of bread a day. Everyone above six years can have one and one-tenth pounds. "In all hotels and restaurants," the decree reads, "bread must be counted separately and only be served in slices at one cent each."

Bread cards will be in duplicate, one to be retained by the bread-eater and the other to be deposited with the baker. Any baker selling fresh bread, or bread not made with regulation flour, will have his allowance suppressed for a month.

Russian Crown Jewels.

The Russian crown jewels, which, according to rumor, have disappeared from their safe in the Hermitage at Petrograd, are said to have been appraised at $100,000,000. No other collection in Europe approaches this hoard for magnificence.

The collection consists of more than forty strings of finest pearls, among them the largest outside Asia. An American society woman has offered $100,000 for two pearls in the collection. In addition there are thousands of other individual pearls.

Some of the largest rubies known are in the collection, including the largest pigeon-blood ruby in Europe, a historic gem mined in Ceylon and said to have a bloody history.

The crown jewels also contained seven or more of the finest emeralds known, in addition to many smaller gems of the same kind.

The great prize of the collection, however, is the famous Orloff diamond, about which centre many legends and whose history is the basis for innumerable stories dealing with the curse which is superstitiously said to follow the possession of certain jewels. The Orloff diamond, also called the Koh-i-Tur, was stolen by a French soldier from the eye of a Brahmin idol, again stolen from him by a ship's captain and after much bloodshed and various adventures sold in Amsterdam, where it was bought by the Russian count, Grigori Orloff, for $450,000. Count Orloff presented the jewel to his friend, the Empress Catherine II., who handed it down to her followers. The jewel, which weighs 194¾ carats, cut, formed the end of the imperial sceptre and is called the sceptre diamond.

Jewels collected by all the Romanoff autocrats from Mikhail, founder of the house, to the present ex-Czar, with countless decorations, gold ornaments and priceless plate, are in the missing hoard.

A New Comet.

So many other things are coming along to take the attention of humanity that there is a possibility of overlooking the comet of gigantic size that is now, according to the astronomers, approaching this solar system at a speed of 1,134,246 miles a day. Halley's comet, which appeared in 1911, and disappointed people principally by reason of the flimsiness of its texture, was large enough to be seen through the great telescopes eight months before perihelion, or its closest approach to the sun; but the visitor now on the way was seen fourteen months before being due to attain the corresponding position. Its discovery having been made in April, 1916, The comet will, it is announced, be at its best and brightest in June of next year, and it will be welcome if it shall fulfil its magnificence even a part of all that is promised in the advance notices.

Cream of Epicures.

When St. Paul addressed "epicureans and stoics" (Acts xvii., 18) at Athens the philosophy of life was practically reduced to the teaching of these two antagonistic schools.

Pleasure and not goodness or truth was the end at which Epicurus aimed. His system degenerated into mere materialism, and in 10ls term epicureanism was the popular philosophy at the beginning of the Christian era.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Still Waters Run Deep

By EUNICE BLAKE

Wilton Page was twenty years old and handsome as a picture. He had an oval face, large dreamy eyes and cameo cut features.

Wilton entered a parlor car one day for a journey. On the opposite side were three women. One was about thirty, another twenty and the third seventeen. The two younger ones called the oldest Aunt Sue, while she called the next youngest Dorothy and the younger Fanny. Aunt Sue seemed to be on terms of equality with the others and was the merriest of the three. Dorothy and she were continually cracking jokes with each other, while Fanny was sober, but childlike.

Wilton, having placed his hand baggage in the rack above him, settled himself in his chair, pulled a novel from his pocket and began to read. He did not therefore observe the effect his manly beauty had on the ladies. Dorothy looked from him to Aunt Sue and back again to him with an expression that being interpreted meant, "Isn't he just too lovely for anything?" Aunt Sue returned the glance, indicating "Handsome enough to kiss." Little Fanny observed the mute comments of her elders, but said nothing.

Dorothy leaned toward Aunt Sue and whispered something in her ear. Aunt Sue cast her eyes aside, rested them on Wilton for a few moments, then whispered something in Dorothy's ear. Then Dorothy swung her chair around and said something to Fanny, who glanced at Wilton and shook her head, indicating a negative.

Wilton read on unconscious of the attention he was attracting from those three ladies. Indeed, he had not given them a glance on entering the car and had begun his reading as soon as he had settled himself. They were all comely, dressed in a manner to indicate that they were persons of refinement, and since women like to be noticed Wilton ignoring them may have spurred them to a conspiracy they concocted concerning him. But of this the reader must form his or her own opinion after hearing what this conspiracy was.

Those were the days when trains on passing through tunnels were not lighted as they are today. On the line upon which these three persons were traveling was a tunnel so long that some three minutes by the watch were required for a train to pass through it. The train reached the tunnel in about an hour after starting. As soon as they entered it Wilton dropped his book on his knee and with his face to the window waited for the return of light. About half the distance under ground had been passed when he felt a pair of arms thrown around his neck and a pair of lips pressed against his own.

Having been pinioned from behind, he was powerless to resist the kiss—if he had wished to do so—or to get a hold on the kisser. He tried to clutch the arms, but they evaded him, and all the satisfaction he derived from the attempt was a knowledge that they were covered with feminine material. He reached out wildly in the dark, but came in contact with nothingness.

Nearly two minutes elapsed before the train shot out into daylight. When it did so Wilton swept the car with his glance with a view to discovering who had kissed him. There were a number of women in it besides the three ladies mentioned. Having noted those at a distance, he fixed his glance upon his neighbors. Aunt Sue was peering out of the window, and, her back being toward him, he could not see her face. Dorothy was wiping the dust out of her eyes with her handkerchief. Fanny was leaning back in her chair looking up at the car ceiling apparently wrapped in thought.

Wilton formed an opinion that he had been kissed by one of his neighbors. He came to this conclusion because they were so near him and because there was no other woman on the train who looked as if she would be likely to commit such an act. Of the three he fixed upon Dorothy as the culprit. And yet when she finished wiping the dust out of her eyes he noticed an amused rather than a guilty expression on her face. Aunt Sue kept her back turned toward him so long that he was not sure after all that she was not the perpetrator. The only one of the three that he was quite sure was innocent was Fanny. She looked fitted to sit as a model for a Madonna.

When the train reached the terminal Wilton left the car, still uncertain as to who had kissed him. The three ladies left at the same time, and he saw them driven away in a private carriage. They took no notice of him, seeming to be oblivious of him.

One evening not a week later Wilton appeared, handsomer than ever in evening dress at a function. He was walking toward a group of ladies, and when within a few feet of them one of them whose back was toward him turned suddenly and faced him. The moment she saw him she turned scarlet.

She was Fanny.

An introduction—embarrassing for the young lady—followed, while a satisfied smile played on Wilton's lips. Since they are now an old couple there can be no harm in stating that she was put up to kissing her fellow traveler by the other two women, who assured her that they would draw the gentleman's attention to themselves as soon as an inspection was made.

But what at the time saved Fanny from detection was her admirable nerve

Cough Nearly Gone! in 24 Hours

That's the usual experience with this home-made remedy. Costs little—try it.

Anyone who tries this pleasant tasting home-made cough syrup, will quickly understand why it is used in more homes in the United States and Canada than any other cough remedy. The way it takes hold of an obstinate cough, giving immediate relief, will make you regret that you never tried it before. It is a truly dependable cough remedy that should be kept handy in every home, to use at the first sign of a cough during the night or day time.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 55 cents and you have 16 ounces of the most effective remedy you ever used.

The quick, lasting relief you get from this excellent cough syrup will really surprise you. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Two Splendid Things

One is plenty of open-air exercise.

If you can't get all of that you should, it's all the more important that you should have the other tried-and-true remedy for a torpid liver and bowels that don't act freely and naturally.

Take one pill every night; more only when you're sure it's necessary.

LESSONS OF WAR.

French General Says That Military Experts Face New Problems.

Writing in Harper's Magazine, General Malelterre of the French army explains how the new science of war has developed and the present stalemate on the western front has occurred.

"During the first fifteen years of the twentieth century Europe was alive to the probability of a general war. In almost every country military service was obligatory and universal, and the number of young men under arms increased yearly. More men were following the profession of arms as a career than at any time in the history of the world. The problems of military strategy and tactics and of military preparation commanded the best brains of the nations now at war. On the sea as well as on land, these problems were being examined from every possible angle, and the evolution of industry and transportation was kept constantly in mind. Military and naval experts seized upon new inventions, and studied them from the standpoint of their possible effect upon the conditions of carrying on war. As far as we could see, nothing was neglected. We had the benefit, too, of being able to study in actual practice the modifications necessitated by new inventions and the remarkable development of industry and methods of transportation and communication. There were the Spanish-American War, the Boer War, the Russo-Japanese War, the Turko-Italian War, and the two Balkan wars. It would take a lifetime to read what has been written about war in the period from 1898 to 1914.

"And yet in all the mass of published material—I might even go further, and say in the archives of the war departments of Europe and America—what was there to indicate that critics and General Staffs were prophets? Did any belligerent nation have the knowledge and vision to prepare for the kind of war we are waging to-day? One can say categorically—no! Otherwise there would have been victors and vanquished long before now.

"We who took part in the Battle of the Marne felt instinctively that France was saved in the second week of September, 1914. But—we can confess it frankly now—our instinct would not have proved right had Germany been much better prepared to wage offensive warfare under the new conditions than we were. Fortunately for us, Germany's vision was as limited as ours. Although she had been preparing her coup for a whole generation, Germany failed to crush us. Her preparation was stupendous—but she had not prepared in the right ways or had we or any other belligerent. The Germans could not break through the entrenched positions from Arras to the sea, that barred their way to Calais. Nor, by the same token, could we follow up our victory of the Marne, and drive the Germans out of their entrenched positions on the Aisne. The Battle of the Marne was the end of an epoch in military history, and the Battle of the Yser was the beginning of a new epoch. Germany's failure to win the war was not demonstrated by the Marne alone. The handwriting on the wall was visible only after Germany's lack of success in the Battle of the Yser, the first offensive of the new epoch. Since then the war on the western front has been practically a stalemate."

A Political Ring.

"Regard-rings," or rings set with the stones ruby, emerald, garnet, amethyst, ruby, and diamond, the initial letters of which spell the word "regard," and engagement-rings set with stones the initial letters of which spell the name of either of the betrothed, are so well known at present as not to evoke special comment, but the use of this same device for political agitation, of which Mr. George Frederick Kunz gives an example in his book, "Rings," is quite unusual—

"About 1830, when popular feeling was roused to the highest pitch by the agitation for the repeal of the Corn Laws, many rings were set with the following stones, the initial letters forming the word 'repeal'—

"Ruby, emerald, pearl, emerald, amethyst, lapis lazuli.

"An Irishman who owned such a ring noted one day that the lapis lazuli had fallen out, and took the ring to a jeweler in Cork to have the missing stone replaced. When the work was completed the owner, seeing that the jeweller had set a topaz in place of a lapis lazuli, protested against the substitution; but the jeweller induced him to accept the ring as it was by the witty explanation that it now read 'repeal and that if the agitation were often enough repeated repeal would come of itself."

Sports and Money.

Sports come high, but we must have them. A billiard player insures his hand for $100,000.

A baseball pitcher earns $3 every time he hurls the ball.

A football coach gets double the salary of a United States senator.

Prizefighters have made more than $1,000 a minute.

Pretty good for men to be able to do that, but I once saw a horse capture more than $50,000 in two minutes.—Gerard in Philadelphia Ledger.

THIS DAY.

Every day, as it rises out of eternity, keeps putting to each of us this question afresh, What will you do before this day has sunk into eternity and nothingness again?—F. W. Robertson.

An "Orderly" Election.

I was in Puerto Mexico on election day when General Candido Aguilar was running for governor of Vera Cruz against General Gavira. You would have thought he had at least a good running start by being Carranza's candidate and engaged to his daughter. But Candido never takes any chances. He had two freight trains of decanted Constitutionalist soldiers, armed beyond the teeth, in that town bivouacked around the polls and the telegraph and cable offices. You had to step over sleeping arsenals to send a telegram. The simple job of that soldiery was to insure a constitutional and orderly election by keeping the Gaviristas from exercising a suffrage called by the new constitution universal. I don't know first hand just how matters stood in the other towns of the state of Vera Cruz, but on reaching Mexico City several days later I read in the capital papers that General Aguilar had been elected governor by substantial majorities after a very "orderly" election. —George Marvin in World's Work.

Why People Die Early.

High blood pressure belongs to a group of old age diseases—Bright's disease, arteriosclerosis, heart failure, apoplexy and paralysis. People naturally die of them at seventy to eighty years of age. If they fall victims at an earlier age there is something wrong. What is wrong? Why do people die prematurely? I believe it is because we fail to search for and find the symptoms of these organic diseases. There is no question at all that if we can discover the right agent to fight the toxins that live in the colon or large bowel the average man and woman should live to be at least a hundred. The American people are going to take death prevention more seriously than they do now. Some day when men and women die under fifty years of age a coroner's inquest will be called to determine the cause of their untimely demise.—Dr. W. S. Sadler in Collier's Weekly.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally if You Eat Meat Regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Korea Eats Rice With a Spoon.

While China and Japan take rice with chopsticks, Korea eats hers with a spoon. Prediction is that the next step will usher in the bread fork. "Whence comes this peculiarity?" asks the Korea Magazine. "One reason is that in the Analects of Confucius a record exists that the master ate his millet not with chopsticks, but with a spoon. Every saying that pertains to Confucius is reverently regarded in Korea, and the people of that land would rather follow the master than present day customs."

The Servian Swineherd.

In any Servian village there is only one swineherd, and he leads all the pigs of the community. In the morning he goes through the streets blowing his horn, and the pigs come out of their own accord and fall in behind him and follow him to the pasture. At night he brings them home, and they disperse to their sties in the same orderly way as they pass the houses to which they belong. They require no attention and no singing out.

Southern Mangrove.

The rhizophora mangle, the southern mangrove, is most curious in propagation. The seed sends forth a shoot that really comes through the seed and grows to a foot long. It then falls away and strikes, root end down, in the mud and is at once a plant.

BAKER'S COCOA HAS GREAT FOOD VALUE

THE food value of cocoa has been proven by centuries of use, and dietitians and physicians the world over are enthusiastic in their endorsements of it. It is said to contain more nourishment than beef, in a more readily assimilated form. The choice, however, should be a high-grade cocoa.—"Baker's" of course.

WHY PEACE TARRIES.

Must Prove to Germans That Empire Cannot Be Starved.

A very shrewd and able Englishman, writing recently from Mesopotamia to a military officer in England, said that, to judge by the British newspapers, the familiar saying that England does not know when she is beaten ought now to be revised so as to read, "England does not know when she is winning." This competent witness, able from his situation to take a broad view of the war, regards all the signs and omens as favorable to us and our Allies. His optimism is shared by General Smuts, who speaks with much greater authority, for he is not only himself a great soldier and a man of high intellectual distinction, but is also a member of the War Cabinet, with access to all the sources of information.

In his conversation with the London representative of the Paris "Journal" General Smuts declares outright that we have won the war and that the Germans know it. Peace may be near or may be far off, but the issue, he thinks, "is no longer in doubt." Why does victory tarry? Because of the nature of modern warfare. "This is a war of machinery." In such a war quick victory is not possible, but our tactics, though not showy, will produce mathematically certain results. All this coming from so high an authority as General Smuts is welcome and reassuring in these days, when there is widely prevalent in this country a feeling of disappointment at the apparently meagre results obtained on the western front in a year which has seen the British Army at the maximum of its strength.

It is obvious, from what he told The Journal representative, that, in addition to the persistent pressure of our army, General Smuts looks to other factors, financial and economic, to aid in the achievement of victory. The nations in the rear have a function to perform as well as the men in the fighting line. We at home must, to quote the words of General Smuts, arm ourselves with patience. Something more than patience was required of us. All of us who are condemned by age, condition, or occupation to remain at home when brave men are fighting, suffering, and dying for us abroad, have our own contribution to make to victory. This applies not only to the munition workers whose duty it is to provide our Army with abundant materials, but to the whole mass of the people, everyone of whom can help the country in this crisis by economy in expenditure and reduced consumption. Above all things a reduction is necessary in the amount of bread that is eaten. Our stocks of bread are even too large at present, and a considerable shrinkage in the world production of cereals next year is certain. In all likelihood there will not be enough grain in the world to go round in 1918. With that prospect before us, and with U boats still taking their daily toll of our merchant ships, it is the bounden duty of everybody in this country to reduce the consumption of bread to the utmost.—The London Chronicle.

Not a Word Waster.

Sir William Grant, the learned master of the rolls, was a native of the county of Banff and for a considerable time represented that county in parliament. Though a forcible and easy speaker, scarcely inferior to any of his time at the bar or in parliament, he was a remarkably silent man, says the Farm and Home. He was the most patient of judges. The story is well known of his hearing an elaborate argument for two days on the meaning of an act of parliament and when the counsel finished simply saying, "Gentlemen, the act is repealed." On one of his visits to Banff he rode out a few miles into the country, accompanied by a few friends. The only observation that escaped from him was in passing a field of peas. "Very fine peas!" Next day he rode out with the same cortege and was equally silent, but on passing the same spot he muttered, "And very finely podded too!"

Music and Its Trinity.

What we call music is well described as a trinity. The three components are rhythm, melody and harmony. Rhythm is to music what the will is to the individual. The rhythm of music is its physical side, just like the body or flesh of the human being. Melody in music parallels the heart (or blood), a component part of the individual. Harmony is the soul of music just as feeling is the soul of the human being (also possessed of a three fold nature.) The triple elements in music are represented in the history of the world first by the drum (rhythm); second, by the fife (melody), and third, by the fife (harmony). Music lays its first hold on the human understanding by its rhythm. All men are influenced by it (even savages). And every soldier (with or without an ear for music) can appreciate the tap, tap of a drummer boy's drum

HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

BEFORE IT IS TOO LATE.

If you have a gray-haired mother,
And from home you are away,
Sit down and write the letter
You put off day by day.
Don't wait until her tired steps
Reach Heaven's pearly gate,
But show her that you think of her
Before it is too late.

If you've a tender message
Or a loving word to say,
Don't wait till you forget it,
But whisper it to-day.
Who knows what bitter memories
May haunt you if you wait
So make your loved ones happy
Before it is too late.

The tender word unspoken
The letter never sent
The long-forgotten messages,
The wealth of love unspent,
For these some hearts are breaking,
For these some loved ones wait,
So show them that you care for them
Before it is too late.

GOOD MANNERS.

Young folks should be mannerly. How to be so is the question. Many a good girl and boy feel as though they do not behave to suit themselves in company. They feel timid, bashful and self-distrustful, the moment they are addressed by a stranger or appear in company. There is but one way to get over this feeling, and acquire easy and graceful manners; that is, to do the best they can at home, as well as abroad. Good manners are not learned by teaching so much as an acquired habit. They grow upon us by use. We must be courteous, kind, civil, gentlemanly and womanly at home and then it will become a kind of second nature to be so elsewhere. A course, rough manner at home begets a bit of roughness which we cannot lay off when we go among strangers. The most agreeable people we have ever known in company are those who are perfectly agreeable at home. Home is the school for all good things, especially for good manners.

MARRIAGE.

Marriage has in it less beauty, but more safety than single life; it has not more ease but less danger, it is more merry and more sad, it is fuller of sorrows and fuller of joys; it lies under more burdens, it is supported by all the strength of love and charity, and those burdens are delightful. Marriage is the mother of the world, and preserves kingdoms, and fills cities and churches and heaven itself. Celibacy, like the fly in the heart of an apple, dwells in perpetual sweetness, but sits alone, and is confined and dies in singularity; but marriage, like the useful bee, builds a house and gathers sweetness from every flower, and labours and unites into societies and republics and sends out colonies; and feeds the world with delicacies, and obeys their king, and keeps order, and exercises many virtues, and promotes the interest of mankind, and is that state of good to which God hath designed the present constitution of the world.

HOW TO MAKE A GOOD WIFE UNHAPPY.

See your wife as seldom as possible. If she is warm-hearted and cheerful in temper, or if, after a day's or week's absence, she meets you with a smiling face and in an affectionate manner, be sure to look coldly upon her and answer her with monosyllables. If she forces back her tears and is resolved to look cheerful, sit down and gape in her presence, till she is fully convinced of your indifference. Never think you have anything to do to make her happy, but that her happiness is to flow from gratifying your caprices; and when she has done all a woman can do, be sure you do not appear gratified. Never take an interest in any of her pursuits; and if she asks your advice, make her feel that she is troublesome and impertinent. If she attempts to rally you good-naturedly on any of your peculiarities, never join in the laugh but frown her into silence. If she has faults (which, without doubt, she will have, and perhaps may be ignorant of) never attempt with kindness to correct them, but continually obstrude upon her ears: "What a good wife Mr. Smith has!" "How happy Mr. Smith is with his wife!" "Any man would be happy with such a wife!" In company never seem to know you have a wife. Treat all her remarks with indifference. Be very affable and complacent to every other lady. If you follow these directions you may be certain of an obedient and heart-broken wife.

ONLY A SUNBEAM.

Only a stray sunbeam! Yet perchance it hath pierced some wretched abode, gladdened some stricken heart, or its golden light found its way through the leafy branches of some wild wood, kissed the moss-covered bank where the tiny violet grew and caused shades of beauty to adorn its lovely form.

Only a gentle breeze! But how many aching hearts hath it fanned, how many hearts cheered by its gentle touch.

Only one stray bullet that pierced the noble soldier-boy as he trod the lonely midnight round, faithfully guarding the precious lives intrusted to his keeping, and the life blood slowly ebbed out, and the sunbeam fell on the cold face of the dead.

Only a drop of ink! And yet it carried the news of death to anxious ones at home and caused the tear of anguish to trickle down the furrowed cheek of a widowed mother.

Only a frown! But it left a sad, dreary ache in that child's heart and the quivering lips and tearful eyes told how keenly he felt it.

* * *

How often does one hear a great man say, "I owe everything to my home training," or "What I am my mother or my father made me." And how often with truth, the bad man, the mean, petty, small man, might say the same thing.

Essentials of Song Voice.

Many good singers only think their songs. These fall short of the power they might attain. The listeners hear the music, but they are not thrilled.

Other singers have feeling, but they fail to display will. Their voices necessarily lack fiber and are too soft and sentimental. Such singing suggests merely passive sympathy and not the desire to help actively.

Good, honest sentiment and the ring of good will, implying action, are wanted in good music. There is no appeal in the song voice that only wills. The voice of authority and domination is not pleasing. The essentials of the song voice embrace all the singer's powers, faculties and attributes. They include not only will, but also thought and feeling, and that voice is lacking which fails to combine all three of these elements

Champion Slow Workers.

One of the things that Cebu boasts of is its fine wharf. They make a great deal of the fact that today the palatial liner can slip up to the wharf on the sly and get rid of its cargo before the customs officials have waked up, whereas it was only ten years ago that boats had to lie out in the harbor and have the cargo transshipped into lighters.

We slipped up to the wharf all right. It took us from 6 in the morning until 6 at night to unload half the cargo of a ship whose gross tonnage is 742. I have seen lighters used in several scores of ports, and I never saw such slow work as that.

But, then, I had never seen the Filipino workman at his task before. As a snap judgment, made after only two weeks in the islands, I would say that a Japanese woman or a Chinese coolie could give a Filipino a month to rest up and feed up for a piece of work and then beat him so badly in the first hour that he would never catch up. Of course Cebu is in the tropics, but so is Singapore, and I'll back a Singapore Chinaman against a Cebu Filipino any day.

In a Chinese Home.

The most wonderful thing about a Chinese house is the spirit of peace which seems to pervade it. The courtyards, inclosed by houses which are in turn surrounded by high walls, have an air of security and seclusion which is not to be found in our western homes. Into these peaceful courtyards the noise of the busy world does not penetrate. The triple doors seem to shut out the storms of the world and its troubles. So says Luther Anderson in his book on Asia. In the more pretentious houses some of the courtyards are transformed into miniature landscape gardens. There are miniature mountains, precipices, lotus ponds, bridges, grottoes and rustic nooks. The irregular rocks are so well fitted together and built up against the sides of the house that they seem to have been placed there by nature long before the houses were erected. The proportions are so carefully worked out that everything seems to be larger than it really is. And the arrangement is so irregular that nature is simulated to perfection.

Three Fighters.

Walter Scott has not many recorded fights at school, but, in spite of his lameness, he was always in the thick of the "bickers," or street fights, with the boys of the town.

Byron was a great fighter at Harrow. He was very unpopular at first among his schoolfellows, until he fought his way into their affections, and then he became a veritable champion and leader.

Keats was a great fighter. He was chiefly remembered at school for his beautiful face, his kindness of heart and his pugnacious disposition. His school chum, Edward Holmes, says "he had a penchant for fighting. He would fight any one, morning, noon or night, his brother among the rest." He did not make friends easily, although everybody coveted his friendship.

The Cat in the Adage.

The adage referred to in "Macbeth," act 1, scene 7, "like the poor cat i' the adage" has been identified in one of John Heywood's proverbs, a source from which is derived much of what is best in our gnomic literature. Heywood's proverb reads, "The cat would eate fish and would not wet her feete." This seems a satisfactory source of Shakespeare's:

Letting I dare not wait upon I would,
Like the poor cat i' the adage.

Early as Heywood is he borrowed the adage from yet earlier sources, for it is found in a manuscript of the middle thirteenth century preserved in Trinity college, Cambridge, in the rude version, "Cat lufat visch, ac he nele his feth wete."

On the Jump.

"Growing little town, this!" complimented the wise drummer.

"Growing? You just betcha!" replied the landlord of the Petunia tavern, who is surcharged with local pride. "Why, we've already got an east side and a west side, and the first thing you know we'll have a north side and a south side. Oh, Petunia has got the bit in her teeth and her tail over the dashboard, and there ain't no stopping her!"

Joy in Prospect.

"When is a good time to visit the coast?" inquired the stranger in Washington.

"What sort of speech do you want to hear?"

"No speech at all. I want to hear em calling each other names."

Awkward.

"Have you a dog?" asked a tax assessor of an Evansville woman.

"No, sir," was the woman's answer. Then from the kitchen came, "Bow-wow, gruff-gruff."

"Then that is your kitten?" asked the assessor.

Easily Detected.

"Smith could never misrepresent his goods, for such a trick could be easily seen through."

"What kind of goods does he sell?"

"Window glass."

Somewhat Mixed.

"She seems to look upon my proposal as a sort of flapjack."

"How so?"

"Says she'll turn it over in her mind."

The Unadorned Truth.

"Pa, what is temperament?"

"Just a fancy name for cussedness."

Work is activity for an end; play is activity as an end.

She Got the Idea.

He—I say, Dolly, may I take your photograph? You look so pretty that I feel I could eat you! She—Oh, I see; that's why you want me on a plate, eh?

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Bites and Stings.

In case of a sting of any kind the first thing to do, of course, is to remove the sting. This can best be done with the point of a knife or needle, but care should be taken not to break the skin for fear of infection. Then the next best thing, perhaps, is to apply ammonia water or soda water to the affected parts.

In case of bites, as well as of stings when the sting is removed, as a rule a paste of common baking soda applied to the affected parts or these bathed in ammonia water is all that is necessary. Where the poisonous effect is severe, however, send for a doctor. In the meantime the patient should lie down and keep quiet.

An application of a 50 per cent solution of a saturate solution of potassium permanganate which you get at the drug store is very efficient for insect poisons and for the poisons of plants, too, such as poison ivy and sumac.

A SLUGGISH LIVER CAUSES LOTS OF TROUBLE

When the liver becomes sluggish it is an indication that the bowels are not working properly, and if they do not move regularly many complications are liable to set in.

Constipation, sick headache, bilious headache, jaundice, heartburn, water brash, catarrh of the stomach, etc., all come from a disordered liver.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are a specific for all disease or disorders arising from a slow, sluggish, lazy or torpid liver, and they have been universally used throughout Canada for over 20 years with the greatest success.

Mrs. W. A. Harrison, 7 Poplar Grove, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I take pleasure in writing you concerning the great good I have received by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills for a sluggish liver. When my liver got bad I would have severe headaches, but after using a couple of vials of your pills, I have not been bothered any more."

Monaghan Elections

Peterborough, Ont.,
Jan. 2nd, 1918.

To the Ratepayers of North Monaghan.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

When I first entered the Municipal field in North Monaghan, I did so fully realising that the Township was the most difficult to handle in the County. It is very hard to get satisfactory results, for both Rural and Urban districts, when you have to work on statutes that are designed entirely for Rural Districts. The Rural part does not see nor understand the requirements of the Urban and neither does the Urban end understand the requirements of the Rural, and so it becomes the business of the Council to "Keep the Peace" between them, and endeavour to administer the affairs fairly and justly, giving to each faction its just dues. I think it can be taken as a fair criterion of the fairness of administration of last year's work, when at last Monday's nominations a ratepayer of the far end of the township publicly makes the statement that "they were well satisfied with the treatment they had received this year; in fact, they had received far more than they expected."

Thanking you, Ladies and Gentlemen, for your confidence and support in the past, and trusting you will be able on January the 7th to voice a continuance of your confidence in me by re-electing me to the office of Reeve of the Township.

I am, respectfully,

H. B. RYE.

To the Ratepayers of the Township of Smith

Ladies and Gentlemen,—Having been asked by a large number of electors of our Township to stand for election for the position of Deputy-Reeve, after careful consideration I have decided to do so, and if elected I will give the very best service I can, and be very careful in the expenditure of money throughout the year.

Wishing you and all a prosperous New Year, I beg to remain,

READY!

In the newspapers there recently appeared articles telling of the arrival of the American fleet at Queenstown—telling how the Officers of the English Navy had gone to Vice-Admiral Sims and asked him when he would be ready for action. Every American thrilled with pride at his answer—

"WE CAN START AT ONCE."

"READY TO START AT ONCE"—What a wonderful motto for every man, and yet how many of us realize that at any moment we may suddenly be called away from Business, from Home and Friends, from this world of ours to pass in to the Great Beyond.

Are you Mr. Reader, "READY TO START AT ONCE?" Have you made provision for those dependent on you should the call come?

"READY TO START AT ONCE." No man can do more—we cannot afford to do less.

If your loved ones are not already protected against such an emergency you had better act while you have the opportunity. To-morrow may be too late.

LLYOD GEORGE DISCUSSES WAR AIMS

German Attacks Are Averted In The West

GERMANS ARE STRONG BUT THE TOMMIES ARE CONFIDENT

Despite the Fact That There Are More Huns on the Western Front Than at Any Time Since the War Began British Soldiers Are Sure of Their Ability to Block Anything That Hindenburg Can Put Across.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, JAN. 5.—Like heavyweights in the final rounds of a finish fight, the British and German armies during the first few days of this New Year's, have returned to mutual sparring, for a lead. Counting "time" monthly, the giant scrappers to-day are on their forty-second "round." Both are clinched. They are easing up after the terrific blows in the recent onslaughts. The war zone is still snow bound. The trenches are locked in ice, the gullies are as hard as granite. Fragments of frozen earth, sprayed by exploding shells, are just as deadly as slivers of bursting shells, themselves. Despite this sort of weather, the enemy is unusually busy in small enterprises. On our side we have launched more than a dozen raids, big and little, since New Year's Day, all the way from Ypres to St. Quentin. Simultaneously the German airmen are attempting a ceaseless watch over a sky the colour of an iceberg. The Patrol means the Prussian High Command is straining every facility to get posted as to the British movements. Meantime the British know surely that fresh divisions continue to arrive on the West front to aid the enemy. They come, principally, from Russia. There are more enemy troops on this front now than at any time since the war began, and the German ranks are steadily increasing. There is reason to believe these German troops are in better spirit than at any time since the Marne. The collapse of Russia and the Teutonic advance in Italy has visibly bucked up the waning courage of the enemy. Stories that Germany is trumpeting for a great blow on the Western front, continue to filter behind the British lines through declarations of the German prisoners. They all speak of the drive as a certainty. Meantime hostile airmen are dropping silly leaflets over the British lines, announcing the coming of German "Super Soldiers" in the native belief apparently, that they can scare the 'Tommies." But the "Tommies" merely smile derisively. They have gained a personal impression that something is off colour inside of Kaiserdom, making peace in any way by any fashion during 1918 imperative for the Militarists.

If the present peace plot fails, British fighters expect Germany to turn loose her mighty punch at her earliest convenience on the Western front, at a time before America's fighting forces can count as a factor in the battle. This is probably the stem winder with all of Germany's hopes of the present and future pinned on it. Forewarned and forearmed the "Tommies" wear an air of grim certitude these days, perfectly confident of their ability to block anything Hindenburg can put across, regardless of the amount of steam behind it.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Free passage of the Dardanelles for Russian ships, Russian evacuation of Turkish territory and the demobilization of the Russian Black Sea fleet are provided for in the draft of the Turkish peace terms presented to Russia, according to an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Petrograd. Turkey, it is provided, is to retain her active army in consequence of the continuation of war against the Entente.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 5.—A raid attempted by the enemy during the night, in the neighbourhood of Hollebeke, was repulsed without loss by our troops, the War Office reports. Another hostile raiding party succeeded in raiding one of our posts east of Zonnebeke. A few of our men are missing.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TOKIO, Jan. 5.—Enemy submarines which attempted to attack British transports, convoyed by Japanese warships in the Mediterranean on Dec. 30th, were repulsed, says an announcement from the Japanese Admiralty. The warships were not damaged.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Uncertainty still beclouds the status of a Russo-German peace negotiations. Both sides have declared that certain proposals of the other side did not meet with their approval. Russia has said that the German terms concerning occupied territories could not be accepted and German Chancellor von Hertling announces that the Germans cannot move the Conference to Stockholm, as Russia has suggested.

The Russian position, coupled with the reports that the delegates of the Central Powers and even of Germany were divided as to the question of annexations, appears the stronger one, but there is no indication that Germany will recede ,although it has been rumoured that the leading German and Austrian emissaries had returned to Brest Litovsk with new instructions. The speeches before the Reichstag Main Committee of Chancellor Von Hertling and the Under Secretary of the German office did not make clear whether Germany would stand unalterably on the conditions to which Russia objects.

THE KING'S PROCLAMATION

Having read the King's Proclamation with regard to the Day of Special Prayer, on January 6th, and also the urgent appeal of the Ministerial Association, that every citizen of Peterborough should be found in his Church on that day, we most cordially approve of this recommendation, and ask for the co-operation so much needed and so seriously sought.

CANADIAN CORPS PAY THEIR JUST DEBTS IN FULL

Every Bit of Work They Are Assigned Is Carried Off With the Same Old Punch, Writes Lieut. W. J. O'Brien

MORALE IS SPLENDID

The following letter from Lieut. Wm. J. O'Brien, 1st Battery, 1st Brigade, C.F.A., will be read with great interest by his many friends. Lieut. O'Brien, who is a son of Mr. Michael O'Brien, of Toronto, formerly of Peterborough, was at one time principal of St. Peter's School here, and is a brother of Mr. Gerald O'Brien of the local post office staff. He enlisted as a gunner early in the war, was soon promoted to sergeant, and some time ago, after long service in France, received his commission as a lieutenant. He writes as follows:

France, 13th Dec., 1917.

After spending the summer in England learning some of the things that a brand-new artillery officer should carry in stock, I crossed the Channel (for the third time) to take a hand once more in the big, blazing, and interesting game of war. I was only up near the front a few days when I was sent back to a British hospital with rheumatic fever. I received splendid treatment there for three weeks and came out fit as nails more than a fortnight ago.

The front we are holding at present is rather quiet, although the enemy gets restless in fits and starts and begins to pound our gun positions, billets, and other possessions. He always appears a bit "merry" when the Canadians come on the front, because they have rammed some good lessons down his throat since their arrival. This may sound a bit like boasting, but it's the "cross-my-heart" truth. If you had had the pleasure of seeing some thousand Hun prisoners coming back after one of these maulings you would realise the fact that the Canadian corps pay their just debts in full with interest, pressed down and running over.

Just at present the sides appear to be feeling one another out as a prelude to another grand smash. Somehow or other one can sniff it in the air, and it will relieve the tension when it does come at last. I do not think that he will ever bulge this line to any appreciable extent, although there is no disguising of the fact that he is strong. It will be much better for us all when America's hordes get going; they should be good troops, and hey have a real motive and a big principle to uphold in their struggle by our side.

SOLDIERS ARE HERE

E Company of the 1st Eastern Ontario Depot Battalion Quartered at the Armouries—Advance Party Has Arrived

OTHERS ARE COMING

The advance guard of E Company, of the 1st Eastern Ontario Depot Battalion, is now housed at the Armouries, and the khaki uniforms will soon be as familiar again as they were in the days of the 93rd Battalion.

E Comapny, which is to be stationed at Peterborough, is in command of Major R. P. Watt, and will consist of drafted men from the western part of No. 3 Military District, including, of course, the men called to the Colours from the city itself.

The first detachment, consisting of the majority of the Peterborough draftees who left for Kingston on Wednesday night, arrived on the nine o'clock train last evening and were marched to the Armouries.

To-day they are busy on fatigue work, getting the quarters into shape. Peterborough's new soldiers are already becoming accustomed to the uniform, and were in excellent spirits when the Examiner representative saw them this morning.

A detachment from the Canadian Army Service Corps is in charge of Lieut. Stewart, arrived on the 5.30 train last evening, and are looking after the supplies for the soldiers.

For the present the draftees are messing in the company rooms, which are comfortably heated.

Another detachment will arrive from Kingston this evening, and the strength of the company will steadily grow during the next week.

Major Watt has received no information as to the personnel of his staff yet.

May Modify Order-in-Council

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 5.—There is in process of being drafted under the supervision of the Justice Department, an order-in-council modifying that recently passed, on recommendation of the Finance Minister, restricting the floating of bonds and sale of securities by provinces, municipalities or individuals. This order has been held to be unconstitutional by the Province of Quebec. To the protest of that province has now been added a further protest from the province of Saskatchewan, based on similar grounds to those taken by the province of Quebec.

It is now stated that a further order will be passed exempting from the inclusion of the first order certain groups. It is probable that the Provincial government will not be required to come to the Finance Minister for approval of flotations.

No official details of the new order are, however, at present available.

NO OBJECTION TO COLLECTION FOR VETERANS

The following letter is self explanatory:

Dear Sir,—Re fund to be collected from the city of Peterborough for branch of War Veterans' Association.

In reply to your letter of the 20th ultimo, I am directed by the Honourable, the Minister, to advise that as the War Veterans' Association, referred to in your letter, which we presume is the Great War Veterans' Association, is not a military organization, therefore, this Department can have no objection to the collections being made on this account.

Yours faithfully,
(Signed) W. R. Creighton,
Major.

German Government Between "The Devil And The Deep Sea"

"MOST CRITICAL HOUR" SAYS LLOYD GEORGE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Premier Lloyd George, addresing the Trades Unions to-day on the subject of war aims, said that only the clearest, greatest and most just of causes could justify the continuance, even for a day, of this unspeakable agony of nations. The Premier continued: "We ought to be able to state clearly and definitely not only the principles for which we are fighting, but their definite, concrete application to the war map of the world.

"We have arrived," the Premier went on, "at the most critical hour of this terrible conflict, and before any Government takes the fateful decision as to conditions under which it ought either to terminate or continue the struggle it ought to be satisfied that the conscience of the nation is behind these conditions."

Mr. Lloyd George said that during the last few days he had taken special pains to ascertain the views and attitude of the representative men of all sections of thought in the country.

GERMAN AUTOCRACY OUT-MANOEUVRED IN PEACE PARLEYS

Russia's Peace Talk is Poisoning Germany Showing the German Democrats That the Kaiser's Autocracy is Deceiving Them

HAND CLASP BROKEN

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.

(By Wm. G. Shepherd, Formerly U. S. Correspondent at Petrograd.)

ASHEVILLE, N.C, Jan 15.—The labouring man's government of Russia has outmanoeuvred the autocratic government of Germany in the Brest-Litovsk peace parleys

It has put the Kaiser in the position of trying to carry water on both shoulders. Unwittingly or not, Trotsky and Lenine are just at this time working exactly in line with America in President Wilson's plans to encourage the German people to throw off the yoke of their autocratic masters.

Russia's peace talk is poisoning Germany. It is a poisoning gas that the Germans first used after the Russian revolution that is now being blown back on them. The Russians are showing to the German democracy that German autocracy is deceiving them. They have shown that the Kaiser is not on the square. Trotsky and Lenine had ambitious ideas, going beyond President Wilson's idea of plain people working out their own salvation, of having these same plain people of all nations get together and demand an end of war. The German armistice was part of this plan. The Russian Council of Workmen and Soldiers, representing as far as it was possible the plain people of Russia, thrust out its hands towards the democracy of Germany.

They saw a hand extended from Germany in the vague mistc of German diplomacy. It was not a clearly defined hand, but the Russians grasped it in the hope it might be that of their democratic brothers in Germany. Only a few days of negotiations, however, showed, instead of having grasped the horny hand of democracy, they had shaken a hand bearing the gauntlet of militarism. That hand clasp is broken to-day.

The Russian dream of reaching through and beyond militarism and Kaiserism to the German common people has been shattered if there is a German democracy, such as the Russians hoped to encounter, it lies beyond the stone wall of the Kaiser's militarism. Proof that it exists is in the fact that the autocrats are preventing the Russians from dropping pamphlets behind the German lines, and that Foreign Minister Von Kuehlmann will not permit German Socialists to go to Stockholm to confer officially with the Russian Liberals. If Lenine and Trotsky cannot reach the German people now, they must try to batter down the wall between them and their German fellows—in other words they must again join the Allies and help to fight the way through to a rescue of the German people.

ANOTHER PETERBORO' SOLDIER'S BRAVERY HAS BEEN REWARDED

Pte. Carl Noftall Who Went Overseas With the 93rd Battalion, Receives the Military Medal For Gallant Conduct in the Field

WOUNDED AT LENS

Mrs. Wm. Noftall, 188 Dalhousie Street, has received by registered mail the Military Medal awarded to her son, Pte. Carl Noftall, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, for bravery on the field.

News of the award of the decoration was received by Pte. Noftall's parents some time ago, but they preferred not to have the news published until the medal itself came along.

Pte. Noftall, who is well known in the city, especially in Y.M.C.A. circles, enlisted here with the 93rd Battalion, and after going overseas was transferred to the 20th Battalion.

He earned his medal during the terrific fighting around Lens, when he was wounded in both legs. Previous to that he was through the battle of Vimy Ridge and the hard "scraps" that followed. He is at present at West Sandling Camp, England.

Pte. Noftall is the son of Mr. W. N. Noftall, traveller for T. Kinnear & Co., City.

Revolutionary Plot Revealed

MADRID, Jan. 5.— A revolutionary movement has been unearthed by the government. Telephone and telegraph communications have been suspended and other precautions taken.

Although remaining out of the war, Spain has not escaped political unrest which it has produced. There have been frequent strikes and disorders and it has been necessary to declare martial law at times. The most formidable movement occurred last summer with widespread strikes, several armed clashes in which nearly four hundred persons are reported to have been killed and an avowedly Republican movement in Catalonia. This week King Alfonso dissolved Parliament.

TO-DAY IS BETTER.

Why put off such an important thing as bettering your seeing power? We are fully equipped to render you all the aid that glasses will give and guarantee the results. See Dr. Lacey, 410 George street. Open Wednesday evening.

Amicable Relations With Russia Are Absolutely Necessary For the Germans But at the Same Time the Huns Do Not Want to Make Too Many Concessions.

SITUATION CONFUSED

(By Webb Miller.)

LONDON, Jan. 5. — The Russian Bolsheviki have put the Imperial German government "between the devil and the deep sea" in the universal view here to-day. Germany's next effort to avoid one or other contingency will be some additional "concessions" in her peace terms in a desperate effort to prevent final and complete breaking off in the negotiations. Amicable relations with Russia are vitally necessary for the Kaiser's empire after the war. Opportunities for economic penetration to restore the Teutonic commercial position is imperative and particularly with Russia. In the view of observers here it is almost more important than any eastern conquests.

The German leaders, facing this necessity, are nevertheless apprehensive lest the Bolsheviki government may not "stand up." On the other hand they are afraid to lose the bird in the hand, conquests their armies have already grabbed, while there is a chance of catching also the whole flock. Evidences multiply to-day also that the Imperial situation in Germany is worrying the Imperial government leaders. The pan-Germans are insistently demanding that all conquests be retained. The Liberals and Socialists are just as determined that all shall be given up. The situation in the Reichstag is such that it offers the first chance for a trial of strength between the annexationists and democrats. The Reichstag is at present in recess, but dispatches received by way of Amsterdam report a strong demand in Germany for immediate summoning of this body. There is considerable doubt in view here that the Government would care to risk sessions of that legislature just now with certain consequence of an open debate on the Government's course in the Russian negotiations.

STOLE LIQUOR IN WATERLOO

Detectives Clear Up Mystery That Has Baffled Distillery Officials.

WATERLOO, Jan. 5.—As the result of the clever work of two detectives from the Thief Detective Agency, of Toronto, the greatest liquor stealing job ever perpetrated in this community was unearthed.

For the past three months large quantities of liquor have been missing from the Seagram distillery warehouse, and it has been discovered that it was the work of three young men, who, when confronted, admitted their guilt, and will appear Friday before Magistrate Weir, for sentence.

DEFERRED ELECTIONS

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 5.—Nomination day for the deferred election in Nelson, Man., has been set for Jan. 21, with polling day on Feb. 18.

The deferred elections in Halifax and the Yukon will be held on Jan. 28. In Halifax all four candidates are still in the field. In the Yukon Dr. Thompson, the Government endorsed candidate is being opposed by F. T. Congdon, who, however, is also running as a supporter of Union.

The City Treasurer will take orders for Hardwood, delivered. This wood is of the very best. 4 feet green maple and beech. 2d-4

THE NEW LIBERAL LEADER.

Mr. W. H. Proudfoot, K.C., M.P.P., West Huron, the new Liberal leader for Ontario, is described as a "noted parliamentary fighter," and deserves the title by the earnestness and resolution he gives to the battle for reforms, especially social reform, and reforms in administrative methods and clean, straightforward public life. He is a good debater, with a mind well stored with knowledge of economic questions. He has strong convictions on all important subjects, and has shown that he has the courage of his convictions. As aggressive in action as he is progressive in policy, he is a fitting leader for the small but gallant little band of Liberal Oppositionists in the House. Under his leadership it is certain that slipshod or slantwise administration will not go unchallenged and wrongdoing ignored. Mr. Proudfoo's political opponents may regard him as the leader of a forlorn hope; but numbers do not always indicate the extent of accomplishment. The same numerical Opposition that Mr. Proudfoot leads, under Mr. Rowell brought the Government to the point of adopting Prohibition as a policy and largely helped in its enactment. Mr. Proudfoot is a "democrat to the hilt" and a strong champion of the rights that democracy demands; and he will see that many reforms or progressive measures receive the attention which democracy, under the new recognition war conditions have brought, will insist upon.

"It's never too late to mend," Premier Borden has come to his senses—of patriotism and duty. The Government he heads announces a big programme of building ships which Sir Robert half a dozen years ago declared Canada could not build in fifty years.

BE BRITISH: BE FAIR.

The very men and newspapers that, during the last election, did most to exploit racial and religious appeals to antagonising and naturally segregating Quebec and arousing ill-feeling, are now doing the most in berating Quebec for taking advantage of the feeling they themselves have provoked—in following racial antagonism with commercial antagonism. The irresponsibles of Quebec who advocate the boycott in commercial matters are doing wrong to the common country and wrong to themselves; for no commercial boycott will fail to illustrate the homely proverb, "cutting off one's nose to spite one's face."

Nor is the narrow bigotted idea of the boycott confined to one province. In Ontario, and in the name of a misdirected loyalty, there are found advocates of boycotting the manufacturers of Kitchener for no fault of theirs; but for the fault of a few hotheads who disturbed a Unionist political meeting. This is rank injustice. The demand for boycotting the manufacturers of Kitchener is a demand for withholding British justice from loyal Canadian citizens in the name of misdirected loyalty to British institutions. If such evil councils are heeded Canada's name for fair play and even-handed justice will suffer, and outsiders will not too nicely differentiate between the commercial "disloyalists" of Kitchener and the general body of Canadian manufacturers.

The boycott advocates of both Quebec and Ontario are altogether in the wrong; and we may be greatly thankful that neither of them represents nor speaks for the great mass of sane, steady-minded, truly loyal citizens of both provinces who recognise that mutual forbearance and tolerance and interprovincial harmony are the essentials of the highest relations of citizenship and the foundations of true prosperity.

The high cost of living is the penalty paid for the lack of efficient development and organisation of production and distribution.—Adams.

TO WAKEN PETERBOROUGH.

We are as a people such material people, so engrossed with the anxieties of getting on, and therefore so intent on present aims, that we confine ourselves o the considerations of the moment—that we neglect larger things that appeal less directly to our present interests, and neglect the higher or remoter outlook. And the war and its demands more than ever keep our noses to the grindstone, so that our perspective is narrowed and shortened and our regard for the future dimmed. By, in the past, neglecting the interests of the future, we are come to conditions now where we must strive to replace what we have somewhat recklessly destroyed or failed to wisely utilise. We have prodigally exploited our natural resources, and especially our forest wealth, to the extent that we are reduced to economic penury in the matter of fuel supply. We have in part converted our forests into money spent in building canals and railways, and we have a premature supply of these sufficient for a country of fifty millions.

This loss of forest area has not been altogether a blessing. It has devastated the landcape, and though it has cleared the soil for cropping it has, for this very reason, so affected climatic and meteorological conditions that crop yield has been lessened. If, in the process of removing our forest growth foresight had been exercised and judiciously distributed growth left standing, especially on lands unfitted for successful agriculture, we should have had not only better weather and crop-growing conditions, but would have had a store of fuel tha would have been very welcome in these days of fuel scarcity.

This disregard of foreseeing and of scientific dealing with our forest resources, and the undesirable results, is cited as an example of other failings to look ahead and provide the best foundation for future constructive work. Our Canadian towns and cities are the result of blind development. They have not been planned; like Topsy of the story, they "just growed." And though the growth, as in the case of Peterborough, has been important, it has not been attended with conditions that have contributed to the greatest civic beauty and conveniences.

We have not really developed—we have, in a large sense, simply "growed." Proper development of natural advantages of site, and the best results of civic enterprise, depend upon proper planning. We have not planned, and by this neglect we have forfeited and missed an infinite deal of the civic scenic beauty, and provisions for the highest sanitation and many other things that go to make the ideal civic home—the ideal of residential desirability.

In this connection it is a pleasure to announce that we are likely to be disurbed in our easy-going complacency. The Engineers' Club of Peterborough has arranged for an address under its auspices to be delivered in Peterborough on 17th January by Mr. Thomas Adams, of Ottawa, Town Planning Adviser to the Commission of Conservation.

Mr. Adams is an expert in his specialty. He is past president of the Town Planning Institute of Great Britain, and the Commission of Conservation and all Canada are to be congratulated on securing his services. It is to be hoped that the enterprise of the Engineers' Club will result in the adoption of means to bring the address of Mr. Adams to the direct attention of our best citizenship. The members of the club no doubt have noted the wants of Peterborough, the sore spots in our civic make-up; and their efforts to arouse public opinion as to the material profit of making our city not only beautiful and clean, but with healhy conditions of living, so that with comfort, content, and health our population, the real factors in our growth and prosperity, may discharge their duty under conditions the most highly advantageous, for bringing to bear upon the prosperity and growth of the city the most intelligent, most effective civic service.

At the moment, the conscription nippers are closing upon the young men of Quebec, the Lieut.-Governor of that province, in a message to the King, "pledges once more Quebec's continued and determined participation in the war."

SHALL THE GOVERNMENT ASSUME ADMINISTRATION OF THE PATRIOTIC FUND?

In spite of the fact that there is a strong feeling in favour of making the patriotic fund and its distribution a Government function, the executive committee of the fund has decided unanimously to make the usual appeal for voluntary subscriptions this year. Whether this will end the question or whether the Government may decide to take unto itself the duties in connection with it is not certain, but the latter move would find many supporters.

It is announced by the governor-general, president of the fund, that the decision to retain the voluntary system was reached only after all other alternatives had been considered exhaustively. That may be so, but the public would be interested to learn what objections were raised and by whom to making a change.

The patriotic fund as at present administered carries with it just a tinge of charity in the public mind. There are many wives of soldiers who do not apply for a grant because of this, although they require the additional money and are thoroughly deserving of it. They shrink from asking to be included in the list of those who are receiving the fund. There are, also, certain other more or less disagreeable features which sensitive minds would avoid, and the placing of the fund under Government control might eliminate these.

Under present conditions, a private soldier's wife receives from a grateful country $25 per month, and from $15 to $20 a month from her husband's pay. This gives her a maximum of $45.00. If she has no children, the amount is hardly sufficient to keep her, and if she has a family the amount is absolutely inadequate. Why should she have to ask for a voluntary grant? Is the work her husband is doing for his country not of sufficient importance to warrant the payment of a wage which will keep him and his family in comfort? Why should she have to submit to an oversight of her conduct and affairs if she would increase her income? It is monstrously unfair. No wage-earning or salary-earning civilian would work for a firm which insisted on supervising his domestic affairs before paying him the money he earns. Why should the wife of the man who is doing the greatest and most important work of all be subjected to such humiliation?

The new Government of Canada owes it to the soldiers to pay enough for their services to guarantee a comfortable living for their families. Had this been done earlier, conscription might never have been deemed advisable. The people pay the patriotic fund money in any case, and surely the idea of keeping to the voluntary plan is not based on the theory that money will be saved because some will not apply who would receive the monthly check if it became part of the soldier's pay. That would be discounting natural pride and independence.

Canadians are willing to pay all that is necessary for the upkeep of the soldiers and their dependents. Let it be paid the same as any other salary.—London Advertiser.

CANADIANS TO THE RESCUE.

A despatch comes to the effect that the British are running short of suitable material for medals for decoration for distinguished service in the field. It is a rule that these medals are to be made from captured bronze cannon; and there is a shortage of captured guns of this kind. Not that guns are not captured galore, but in modern artillery making, bronze is not always used for guns. It is stated that the Imperial Government is requesting the Canadians to turn over some of the bronze guns they have captured for making Victoria Crosses. The Canucks might well do this, for they have been meeting from time to time wih considerable success in gun-taking. Besides, Canadians have so largely developed the habit of special gallantry in action that these bronze guns will in large part come back to them in the form of medals. This war has inspired many new ideals and new definitions, and Canadian Tommies may furnish the explanation that "a son of a gun" means a medal made for a gallant soldier out of a captured bronze cannon.

We are threatened with a general election in Ontario some time early in summer. It is to be hoped the race-and-creed patriots are not sharpening their weapons. We have had enough political mischief of that kind in our generation.

UTTERING SPURIOUS OPINION.

One sees with surprise and regret, a prominent and widely influential journal like the Globe giving the prominence of its editorial page to a column or so of extracts from irresponsible and uninfluential Quebec journals, containing or embodying the treasonable twaddle or hysterical outbreaks of corresponding nobodies, about "outrages" and attacks upon the province and people of Quebec. For more reasons than one, Ontario journals, especially those of weight, might well ignore these vapourings and refuse to give them a currency which alone makes them noxious, by republication in this province. The first reason is that these diatribes have no authority nor influence nor substance behind them. They no more represent the sentiments of the mass of Quebec people than the "Tooley street tailors" represented the "people of England." Another reason is that the more publicity is given to intemperate and declamatory assertion of firebrands, either in Ontario or Quebec newspapers, the more the danger of political and citizen schism is added to. Such things said and left to the obscurity and indifference their insignificance deserves, would do no harm; but selected from their comparatively obscure sources, mutually reprinted in the respectable press of the respective provinces, their dormant life is fanned into evil existence; false ideas are created; causes of friction and antagonism are given a vogue, that alone constitutes the evil and possibilities of arousing or perpetuating the spirit of disunity and race and creed faction that is doing more real harm or threatens more real harm in Canada than the assaults oof the Hun upon our civilization. Newspapers in both Ontario and Quebec, that give currency to the rabid utterances of extremists in either province, and help to create the idea that they represent the heart and mind of either of the two peoples, is guilty of uttering bogus public opinion.

Origin of the Dahlia.

By a curious irony the dahlia flower, popular at the flower shows, is of very humble origin. It has been developed from a Mexican tuber. Some century and a half ago this plant was introduced into Europe by the Swedish botanist, Dr. Dahl, for the purely commercial purpose of supplanting or supplementing the potato. But they did not prove popular, and the dahlia dish soon disappeared from the dinner tables of Europe, but the gardeners saw the latent possibilities of the flower, from which they have evolved the double dahlia and other popular floral fancies. It would thus appear that the dahlia had reversed the fate of the red clover, which was originally introduced as a garden flower, but was found to be much more desirable as a fine forage. The tubers of the dahlia, though bitter, are still eaten in some parts of France.

Beyond Human Control.

Children were discussing "what we'll do when we get big." One wanted to be a milkman and ride around. The second wanted to ride on freight cars and "make the round things go." The third could not decide whether to be a minister or a grocer. The fourth child, a girl of eleven, did not care to tell.

"Aw," cried he for whom the ministry and confectionery had equal attractions, "yur want to get married."

When the boys had run off, the girl's ambition was confided to her favorite aunt. "I wouldn't tell them," she said scornfully. "They couldn't understand. But, aunty, I want to be a justice of the supreme court and"—her voice became solemn—"beyond human control."

Might Is Right.

"Effie," said the timid highland lover, "I wud kiss ye, but I'm feart ye wadna let me."

She blushed as red as the sunset, but did not answer.

"Effie," he repeated timidly, a little later, "I said I wud kiss ye, but I'm feart ye wadna let me."

At the third repetition she asked:

"Dae ye min', David, yesterday I couldna lift a bag of potatoes intae the cairt an' ye lifted them for me?"

"Oh, aye!" he replied.

"Weel, that shows, David," she murmured "that ye're far stronger than me!"

Principles of Action.

There are five good principles of action to be adopted—to benefit others without being lavish, to encourage labor without being harsh, to add to your resources without being covetous, to be dignified without being supercilious and to inspire awe without being austere.

As a Bad Job.

"What made young Howler give up the practice of the law?"

"He didn't give it up exactly. So far as I am able to understand the situation, the practice of the law gave young Howler up."

Things for You to Consider:—

When you buy a suit of clothes, a dress or groceries, etc., you try to get the most for your money—DON'T YOU? Then, in selecting a home, it is only common justice to yourself that you do the same thing. At the present time there is offered for sale a number of good homes in this city, and at prices that you will not make any mistake in picking up, for instance—

$2,300 buys a two story brick house with plumbing and furnace. Also a large lot and stable.

$2,000 buys a modern house, except furnace. Owner leaving city.

$3,500 buys a modern brick house, hardwood floors, hot water heating, garage, etc.

$2,600 buys a very central house, with plumbing and furnace.

$2,800 buys 25 acres; good buildings and land; owner would like to exchange for 100 acres.

$3,600 buys 50 acres; good buildings, close to the city.

San Sebastian Is Unique

As a place of pleasure, a holiday resort of the first class and of international reputation, San Sebastian, Spain, has, for many years, been regarded as unique. The beautiful resort at the corner of the Bay of Biscay has a multitude of charms such as perhaps no other can claim, and in normal times the most cosmopolitan assembly is collected there of high social, political, and other personages to be found at any spot in the summer time. In point of beauty of situation, this "smiling garden city," as some call it, is surely without superior. The scenic effect is the wonder of all beholders. Two lofty, but gentle arms of land, with a little mountain at the point of each, Urgull on the right, and Igueldo on the left, wrap themselves protectingly round the beautiful bay, or concha, as it is called, and it indeed is veritably shaped like a shell, which is the meaning of the Spanish word, while at the narrow opening to the sea is the island of Santa Clara with a lighthouse, and numerous little islets immediately attendant upon it.

At the head of the concha is the Playa de Banos, where the bathers disport themselves, and above it is the Paseo de la Concha, one of the finest seaside promenades in the world. Along the Paseo are many splendid hotels, and the wonderful Casino where, besides other attractions of every kind, the most excellent musical, operatic and dramatic entertainments are given in the season. Behind all this is a beautiful city which derives certain advantages from having been burned down and rebuilt upon various occasions. It is, in many respects, the most modern city in Spain, finely laid out in blocks and squares, with handsome boulevards like the Alameda and the Avenida de la Libertad, and in its neatness, cleanliness, system, and elegance, one sees a happy blend of some of the best features of New York and Paris. The climate, not only in the summer, but for most of the year, is delightful, and at this time, when most parts of Spain are very hot, San Sebastian is pleasant with continual sun tempered by the breezes that float in from the bay. Here, in the season, come the royalty and the greater part of the nobility of Spain. It becomes in fact the headquarters of the court, the place where society disports itself, where politicians plot and plan, where actors and musicians play their best, and where artists and writers dream their new conceptions. There is nothing in the old world quite like San Sebastian.

San Sebastian stands almost alone as a famous cosmopolitan watering place upon which the shadow of the war is scarcely cast. Existence there proceeds almost exactly as usual. The season, although it seemed to start a little late, is one of the best, and at an early stage it was calculated that there were more than 3,000 visitors in excess of the number at the same time last year. The concha is crowded in the mornings with the bathing parties and others, and in the afternoons the boulevards and the terrace of the Casino are gay as ever. As a result of the war the season certainly suffers considerably from the absence of a good part of the cosmopolitan element, largely French and American, and it is dependent chiefly on the human resources of Spain itself, but there are quite as many of the aristocratic families as ever there were, and the humbler folk follow them in their thousands. The absence of the aliens inevitably means a considerable decrease in the income. It has been declared of San Sebastian that a lady might cross the streets in dancing slippers immediately after a heavy rain without marking them with mud, but that is hardly true at the moment. Still one has to look for the differences to find them. One hears little of the war, and the general attitude of the visitors, encouraged by the local people, is to ignore it as much as possible at this time of recuperation and enjoyment, and to do the same with the difficult internal politics of Spain herself. Up to the moment of their flight northward from Madrid, the statesmen and politicians were seething with their wrangles and schemes, but complacency falls upon them when they reach this coast, and their worries seem to float away on the waters of Biscay. In Madrid it seemed as though Spain were fast nearing revolution; here at San Sebastian she has never seemed further from it.—Christian Science Monitor.

Bright Youth.

Caller—So your son Willie has started work as an office boy. How is he getting along? Fond Mother—Splendidly! He already knows who ought to be discharged and is merely waiting to get promoted so that he can attend to it.

Unter den Linden.

Unter Den Linden is the famous street in Berlin which extends from the Brandenburg gate eastward about three-fifths of a mile. Bordering it are the princely and imperial palaces, the university, the academy, the statue of Frederick the Great, etc. It means "under the lindens."

A Solemn Duty.

"Why did Bangs change his iron gray hair to black?"

"Because his fiancee thought the gray in his hair made him look too old for her, and he thought it was his duty to obey his sweetheart's dying request."

Where There Was No Change.

"Don't you think I'm thinner than when you saw me last?"

"Well, you may be thinner, but to me you're just as thick as ever."—Tribune.

Origin of the Matinee.

Whether or not we have to look back to the fifties for the first matinee, there is at least little doubt that the invention had not attained any general popularity when the seventies were reached. I am reminded that the Bancrofts, who were responsible for many innovations that have since become the vogue, did not institute afternoon performances until 1870, after they had been in management eleven years. The Bancrofts, if not the inventors of the matinee, were certainly the first to pay full salaries to those who took part in them.

Not until 1878 did the matinee become a fixed and regular feature of even the Bancroft management. It was a byproduct of "Diplomacy," the success of which made any means of providing additional performances acceptable. Sir Squire Bancroft has put it on record that at the beginning the matinee was a much more costly affair than it is now, as frequent and separate advertisements and announcements were necessary to make it known

A Defect In Higher Education.

It must be said that the higher education of the United States is at present in a condition where it may readily drop backward rather than improve. The college student of today and in some cases even the university student is permitted to sprawl over so large and so varied an area of intellectual interest that he loses the discipline in concentration, in hard work, and in the mastery of some relatively small field that comes from pursuing a better and older method. There is just now, however, a marked tendency among the better colleges to aid and to guide the student toward concentrating his interests and his energies upon a small group of subjects that have some common center of interest and some well marked relationship. This movement is a sound and hopeful one and should be encouraged and aided.—President Butler in Youth's Companion.

Salt Means Much to Health.

"If the human race should be deprived of salt even for a period of a few months," said a physician, "we would not only lose a natural healthful incentive for our food, but disease, with all its attendant miseries, would spread with such relentless speed as to defy the efforts of the most skillful doctors of the land. Ailing persons frequently refuse sugar, but they seldom turn up their noses at common salt. That is because there is in the body a deficiency of chloride of sodium, and nature intuitively excites the desire for it. Salt is essential to health and life and is as much a food as bread or flesh. If there is no wish for salt in a person doctors uniformly conclude that disease in some form is lurking unsuspected in the system."

Obliterating Class Distinctions.

Modern and cultured persons, I believe, object to their children seeing kitchen company or being taught by a woman like Peggotty. But surely it is more important to be educated in a sense of human dignity and equality than in anything else in the world. And a child who has once had to respect a kind and capable woman of the lower classes will respect the lower classes forever. The true way to overcome the evil in class distinctions is not to denounce them as revolutionists denounce them, but to ignore them as children ignore them.—G. K. Chesterton.

The Spanish Alcalde.

In former times in Spain the alcalde de corte was a judge of the palace court, having jurisdiction in and about the residence of the king. The office is now obsolete in this sense, but "alcalde" is still used to designate the mayor of a town exercising the functions of a justice of the peace.

Why He Looked Sour.

Dusty Dennis—Why do you look so sour, pard? Gritty George—Why, one of dem comic artists wanted me to sit on de fence and let him sketch me. Dusty Dennis—What of dat? Gritty George—It was a barb wire fence.—Exchange.

News to Her.

"What was the farmer talking about?" asked the first city girl.

"A whiffletree," said the other.

"Well, I've studied botany, but I never heard of a whiffletree. Sounds like his idea of a joke."

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Flat Foot.

A treatment suitable, with but slight modification, for all cases of static foot trouble (flat foot), from the early cases which are often described as "weak ankles" to the most severe cases, where there is old standing structural change, is described by Dr. P. B. Rath in the Lancet. The treatment consists of attention to footwear, attention to position in standing and walking and regular daily exercises. Whether boots or shoes are worn, whether they button or lace, they must be the shape of the feet. The inner side of the boot where the big toe line is kept straight, so that the end of the boot is opposite the big toe and not opposite the second or third toe. This is to insure that the big toe is not pushed out against the other toes and has plenty of room in which to act. The soles should be a sixth to a fourth of an inch thick, the heels broad, an inch or less in height.

The World's Volcanoes.

There are six hundred and seventy-two known volcanoes in the world, of which two hundred and seventy are active.

The Surrey Cricket Club.

The Surrey Cricket Club, whose famous ground may shortly be commandeered by the military authorities, had its origin in an association of cricketers whose early matches were played on Kensington Common, where their playing-ground was shared occasionally by pugilists and itinerant preachers and orators. Thence they removed to the Oval, which was part of the grounds attached to Kensington Manor House, a Royal lodge, built on the site of a pre-existing Royal palace at Kensington Cross. Its last Royal resident was Charles the First when Prince of Wales, but it had previously been an occasional residence of the Kings of England prior to the Conquest. It was tenanted by the Black Prince; John of Gaunt took refuge there from the infuriated mob; Henry the Seventh and his Consort resided there; and James the First settled the manor on his eldest son, Henry, Prince of Wales, and ever since it has been part of the inheritance of the Prince of Wales.

The Oval closely adjoined the grounds of Durham House, the London home of the Bishop of Durham, part of which subsequently became Vauxhall Gardens. The Surrey County Cricket Club have been leaseholders of the Oval during practically the whole of their existence.

A Critic's Blunder.

Ian Hay, the famous author of "The First Hundred Thousand," tells an amusing story against himself. It seems that after his great war-book had brought him popularity his publishers received some of his earlier stories and republished them. They were well received, although the author regarded them rather as amateur efforts. But a critic in New York waxed enthusiastic over them and congratulated him on his improvement as a writer since the production of his popular book.

A Gentle Hint.

He—Then you are not interested in my welfare. She—No; but if the two syllables were transposed I'd not only be interested, but enthusiastic.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

When Baby Cries.

Well babies do not cry. When a baby cries and cries it is invariably an indication that it is ill. When a baby cries himself to sleep find out why he does so. An infant may be so uncomfortable from frequent handling that he is made nervous, feverish even and ill. The nervous system of the young child is exquisitely sensitive, and profound systemic disturbances frequently result from irritation of a child's nerves. It is the mother's duty to insist upon having her baby treated with courtesy. When he is lying down to rest or contentedly playing with his toes no one should be allowed to touch him. Letting him alone saves his nervous system from being irritated. "Naughty, fidgety" babies are made so by their well meaning caretakers and visitors. Infants are good when they are well, and they cannot be well if they are unnecessarily handled.

SCENE FROM "WHICH ONE SHALL I MARRY" AT THE GRAND TO-NIGHT.

Owing to the fact that the G.T.R. could not handle the Company's baggage and scenery car out of Brantford in time to get it here for the Matinee to-day, it was necessary to cancel that performance. However, everything will be in readiness for to-night, and patrons can depend on seeing one of the best $1.00 attractions ever at "The Grand."

This Great Contest Is Absolutely Free of Expense. Send Your Answers To-Day!

This great contest is being conducted by the Continental Publishing Co., Limited, one of the largest and best known publishing houses in Canada. That is your guarantee that the prizes will be awarded with absolute fairness and squareness to you and every other contestant. Frankly it is intended to further introduce EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD, Canada's Greatest Magazine. You may enter and win the best of the prizes whether you are a subscriber to EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD or not, and, moreover, you will neither be asked nor expected to take the magazine or spend a single penny of your money in order to compete. Have a try at it!

EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD is so popular everywhere that it now has the vast circulation of over 125,000 copies a month; but our motto is: "EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD in Every Woman's Home." We want more Canadian magazine readers to become acquainted with this famous publication. Therefore, when we acknowledge your entry to this contest and give you your standing for the prizes, we shall send you without cost a copy of the very latest issue and a review of many of the fine features soon to appear. Then, in order to qualify your entry to be sent on the judging and awarding of the grand prizes, you will be asked to assist us in carrying on this big introduction plan by showing your copy to just four friends or neighbours who will appreciate this really worthwhile All-Canadian magazine and want it to come to them every month. You will easily fulfill this simple condition in a few minutes of your spare time and we will even send copies for each of your friends if you wish.

How to send your Solution.—Use one side of the paper only and put your name and address (stating Mr., Mrs., or Miss) in the upper right-hand corner. If you wish to write anything but your answers, use a separate sheet of paper.

Three independent judges, having no connection whatever with this firm, will award the prizes, and the answer gaining 160 points will take first prize. You will get 10 points for every name solved correctly (No. 10 being excepted as it is practically given); 20 points will be awarded for general neatness, style, spelling, punctuation, etc.; 10 for hand writing, and 40 for fulfilling the condition of the contest. Contestants must agree to abide by the decision of the judges. The contest will close at 5 p.m., May 30th, immediately after which the answers will be judged and the prizes awarded. Address your answer to-day to

The thermometer took its usual below zero dip last night, this time to 2 degrees below. The temperature, however, rose at daybreak, the self-registering index showing 2 degrees above. This makes ten mornings in succession of below zero temperatures and establishes a record, at least for the early part of the winter. Quite mild weather prevails throughout the west, while in the east heavy snow and drifting prevails.—W.P.

NATIONAL SERVICE AT ST. JOHN'S

Major J. C. Davidson Will Occupy the Pulpit at Both Services To-morrow

In response to the Proclamation of His Majesty the King, there will be a special national service in St. John's Church at 11 a.m., with an address by Major the Rev. J. C. Davidson. Officers, N.C.O.'s, and men of His Majesty's forces, overseas and Militia, attending are asked to come in uniform, for which permission has been obtained.

The service at 7 p.m. will be of a similar character.

Residence Is Gutted

Home of Mrs. Lockhart, 600 George Street, Practically Destroyed

The residence of Mrs. A. Lockhart, 600 George Street, with its contents, was practically destroyed by fire last night at 9.15.

The occupants of the house, Mrs. Lockhart and her daughter, Miss Lulu, had gone to visit neighbours, and returned to find the whole upper storey of their home in flames, while the Fire Department were combatting.

The Cause.

The cause of the fire, which broke out between the first and second floors, is believed to have been a short circuit, caused by the mice nibbling away the insulation on the electic wiring.

The fire gained rapid headway in the second storey and spread to the attic by the partition in the walls.

The Damage.

The extent of the damage will amount to about $1,500—$1,000 to the building, which is owned by the Bradburn estate, and $500 to the furniture.

TORONTO, Jan. 1st.—On receipt of a telegram from Mr. R. T. MacIlreith, chairman of the Halifax Relief Committee, accepting an offer as a New Year's gift, or contribution to the worthy cause, the Cowan Company, Limited, of this city, has forwarded to the Relief committee at Halifax, N.S., 2,000 1-2-pound tins of Perfection Cocoa.

This generous gift has provided 2,000 families of Halifax, rendered wholly or partly destitute by the terrible disaster, with a grateful and comforting addition to the relief subsistence, and helped to cheer the incoming of the New Year.

Enjoyable Concert Held

An enjoyable concert was held on Friday evening at St. George's Sunday School, when the scholars received their prizes. Games were played early in the evening, followed by a concert and the distribution of prizes by Mr. C. A. G. Spence and Mr. F. Holmes.

A cushion was drawn for little Miss Mary Evans, and the holder of the lucky number was Mrs. J. Price.

After a grand march for candy bags by the children, the happy company broke up.

I am getting rather weary of war after three years of it; but I should feel content to change my vocation in life if I were assured of the opportunity to address my mail home from my unit "Somewhere in Germany."

The war has produced many strange features, but I think that one of the most remarkable is the wonderful upkeep of the morale of our Canadian troops. I have had opportunity of seeing and working with British troops from every corner of the old Empire, and while I cannot indulge in the game of comparisons to the detriment of any regiment (for they all are good), I may, with perfect ease, state that a better fighting army than our own Canucks was never produced. Every bit of work they are assigned is carried off with the same old punch, it appears to me. For the past year we have never once had a poor German division opposite us—the physique of the prisoners taken is proof sufficient of this. I hope you will pardon my big talk, but there have been a few occasions during the past couple of years upon which the discomforts of snow, mud and fatigue melted away in the face of the fact that I belonged to the elect.

I am writing this from the bowels of the earth—in a deep, well-constructed, bomb-proof dug-out, a thousand yards behind the front. One of my telephonists is "doing" a look-out up above, "waiting," Micawber-like, "for something to turn up." A strange stillness, however, pervades the front to-night, and I may get a real sleep. I was doing my observing early in the week from a ruined housetop behind the front, but he put six of his five-nines into it in two days, thus rendering it unfit for active service. My usual luck was "present," and I came through it nicely again.

With good wishes, I remain,
Sincerely yours,
Wm. J. O'Brien.

PETERBORO' PUBLIC LIBRARY CLOSES SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Librarian's Annual Report Gives a Detailed Account of the Various Activities of the Institution—Juvenile Books Have Larger Circulation —War Trophies Needed For the Museum—An Innovation.

At the regular annual meeting of the Peterborough Public Library Board Mr. F. M. Dela Fosse, librarian, presented the following interesting report:

I beg herewith to present my report on the work accomplished in the Public Library during the year 1917:

I am glad to state that the past year, in the matter of circulation, as well as in several other particulars, has been the most successful in the history of the institution. In the use made of library facilities, such as in reference work, and appeals for information from people dwelling at various points outside the city, as well as from bona fide residents, very clear evidence has been given that the popularity of the library is on the increase. I am quite sure, that if there were proper means of ascertaining the actual use made of the reference room our returns for circulation would compare most favourably with those of any library of like size in the Province. During the coming year an effort will be made to ascertain the number of books used in that department and also to make as close a record as possible of the questions asked by visitors to the library who are in quest of information. I think that in this way a better idea will be presented of the nature of the work that is being done.

Circulation Record.

Following is the record of circulation of books, etc., during the past year:

Fiction	44558
Biography	800
Philosophy	396
Sociology	2166
Religion	499
Physology	10
Natural Science	875
Useful Arts	980
Fine Arts	439
Literature	1163
Travel	1137
History	2400
Magazines	602
Total	56,025

In addition to the above, a record of circulation has yet to be received from the King Edward School, of books loaned by the library for circulation among the scholars. Roughly computed, 150 may be allowed for this.

In computing the circulation with that of the preceding year, these points may be noted.

Increase.

Fiction	1863
Religion	210
Philology	3
Fine Arts	7
Literature	85
Philosophy	58
History	915

Decrease

Biography	92
Sociology	42
Natural Science	11
Useful Arts	18
Travel	185

Juvenile Books.

Juvenile books have circulated to the extent of 9,156 volumes, being an increase of 202 over the previous year. This is without taking into account the circulation from the King Edward School.

During the year 654 people have applied for Library cards; of these 157 were juveniles.

The number of books received at the Library during the year was 1,076. In this number are included presents ot the library from various donors, the number of books presented was 104. The classification of books entered in the period above named is as follows:

Magazines	57
Philology	2
Fine Arts	18
Biography	46
Juvenile	158
Fiction	257
Useful Arts	41
Literature	83
General Works	54
Religion	28
Natural Science	38
History	132
Sociology	56
Travel	30
Philosophy	26

In addition to gifts of books the library has been in regular receipt of government publications both from the Bureau of Education at Washington and from the Ontario and Dominion governments. It seems hard, for the public to grasp this salient fact although it has been advertised time and time again in the daily papers. In one feature alone much trouble and expense might be saved many persons if they would remember that the library receives regularly from the Dominion Government the issues of the Patent Office Board and that we have on fyle a fairly complete set of these volumes.

Mutilation of magazines and periodicals and theft of books have not been so noticeable as in past years. Most of the volumes missing have been of a purely ephemeral type, but one volume of Reed's Bird Book and a volume of Ariosto's Poems have been taken. In the latter instance the loss was made good by the guarantor of the borrower.

Besides these, about seven hundred volumes have been removed from the shelves owing to decay from much usage, or from the fact that they had long outlived their usefulness for active circulation. About 350 of these latter books, which were in a fairly good state of preservation, were distributed in equal proportions to the Protestant Home and the House of Providence.

It gives me pleasure to report that the work of the library has run smoothly and that the work of the staff has been satisfactory.

An Innovation.

Reference was made in an earlier part of the report to an innovation which had been made, at the instance of the Chairman, in consigning a selection of books to the King Edward school for the use of the schoiars. Thirty-four books were sent to the school on the understanding that they should be counted in all respects as library books. The pupils appear to enjoy the privilege of obtaining them without the trouble of having to journey to the Library. In this connection I may mention that whilst the radius of the Library's influence is widening, there are certain sections, such as Ashburnham and the southern and southwestern areas which are as yet sparsely represented among its patrons. If the system of sending consignments of books could be extended so as to bring in other schools I am confident that only good could ensue.

That the Library is getting more in favour with out-of-town borrowers is evidenced by the increased fees received, but there is still room for improvement in this particular. In former years only three or four persons from outside points seemed to take any interest in obtaining books. This year some nine or ten have come in and we hope for better results in the future from such additional advertisement.

According to Dr. Dana, the well-known head of the Newark Library, the number of active users of a library may be judged as about equal to the number of books in use at any one time. On this basis, our active borrowers amount to about 1,250. Taking the estimate of the same authority, the loss of books in libraries averaging from 25,000 to 100,000 in population, ranges from 6 to 48 in every ten thousand, I would reckon our average as about 25 in every ten thousand.

Our museum has continued to be a source of great interest, not only to our own residents, but also to very many visitors from other parts. Its usefulness as an adjunct to the library has been abundantly manifest. I would respectfully suggest to the members of the Board that still greater interest would be taken in it if an effort were made to obtain from returned soldiers' war relics that they may have secured at the various fronts. If a special department could be started along this line it would not only be of the greatest interest to visitors, but would prove a monument to the devotion and bravery of those who have been fighting our battles against the arch enemy of human liberty.

In concluding my report, Sir, I desire to express to you, as well as to all the members of the Board, the appreciation of the members of the staff and my own personal thanks for the great kindness and consideration which we have received at your hands.—Yours respectfully, Fred. M. DellaFosse.

"Great White Trail" Land In Wastes of Snow

Great stretches of snow, with never a track of sledge or snowshoe upon them, long vistas of mountains, ice caves and glaciers—these things form the back-ground of The Great White Trail," the new Wharton super-feature, which is coming to the Empire Theatre next Monday. The Great White Trail" is a love story of many vicissitudes, in the days when men turned brute in their wild rush to the gold of the Klondike, and when thousands fought their way over the icy steeps and great flats of snow in their crazed desire for northern gold.

And all through this atmosphere of roughness, a tiny pair of baby shoes tugs and strains at the hearts of a man, a woman and their child, tugging and tugging with the strength that only the sentiment of baby shoes can possess, until at last the sunshine of happiness comes to those who have suffered long in the shadows of sorrow.

Doris Kenyon plays the stellar role assisted by Paul Gordon, Edgar Davenport, Thomas Holding, F. W. Stewart, Besse E. Wharton, Louise Hotelling, Hans Robert, and a big cast. The picture is in seven reels.

Proceeds are given by Dr. T. L. Robinson of both afternoon and evening performances towards furnishing the Great War Veterans Club Rooms.

"Canada Weekly" (formerly Canada Monthly, established 1906), has created a great reputation for its excellent fiction. Its great national articles about Canadians and things Canadian. Its broad editorials, as well as for its artistic covers and illustrations and its high grade printing and general appearance.

It is the desire of the publishers to put a copy in the hands of every Canadian who has never seen this magazine, and thus introduce it to new readers. "Canada Weekly" is a vigorous magazine with a purely Canadian editorial point of view, as you will see after examining it, and you will probably want to buy it yourself at 5 cents a copy weekly from one of our thousands of boy salesmen.

You can help us advertise this magazine should you like it, and when you enter the contest you will be asked to write and tell if you are willing to do so. If so, without cost, a sample copy of the latest issue will be sent to you in order that you can do us the small favor of showing it to five or six of your friends at your business acquaintances or in your home neighbourhood.

We frankly tell you of these simple rules in advance. There is no obligation on your part to subscribe or take the magazine or spend any money in order to compete in this contest.

1 Write your solution of the mysterious message on one side of the paper only. Put your address in the upper right hand corner.

2 Boys and Girls under fourteen years of age are not allowed to compete, nor are employees of "Canada Weekly."

3 The judging of the entries in this contest will be done by three well-known business men who have no connection with this firm. Prizes will be awarded according to the number of points gained on each entry. Contest will close on 31st day of May, 1918.

4 Each competitor will be asked to show a sample copy of "Canada Weekly" to five or six friends, business associates or neighbors, to whom such a magazine will appeal and who will want to take the magazine regularly.

For these services the publishers guarantee to pay each contestant in cash or by a prize selected by him or her in advance. Such guaranteed reward will be entirely in addition to any competitive prize which may be won. State your willingness to examine the copy of "Canada Weekly" which will be sent to you, and address your reply to

Mr. Editor: I notice in the Examiner of January 3rd, re conservation of coal, by closing some churches, or having less services. After reading this article I would like to mention "Lest we forget," that the earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof. Let serious-minded Christians (and that we all should be at this time above all others) think deeply about this matter. Remember our earthly Monarch calls for more and special prayer at this most important time in the world's great struggle for Christian liberty; remember Admiral Beatty's recommendation for public prayer, which he stated would be the quickest means of bringing Victory to our Nation. I say then, why close or curtail the privilege of the "House of God?" Under such circumstances, why not economize on actual luxury, theatres, picture shows, etc.? The powers that be have not recommended luxury at these times. While I feel it would be presumptious for me to dictate to the Ministerial Association, I trust that they will give this serious consideration. Rather give us more services than curtain them.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain,
J. J. Cunningham,

Public Library, Peterborough,
January 5th, 1918

Dear Sir,—It has been suggested by Mr. Mowat, the Chairman of the Library Board, that it would be an excellent thing to obtain from parents and others such letters and documents relating to the war as they may have received from their sons and relatives at the front, for the purpose of making a collection for reference purposes at the Library. Other libraries are engaged in collecting as much material as possible along these lines, for it can be easily seen that they would form most valuable material for future historians to have access to, as well as prove a most interesting mine of information to ordinary readers. In the same class may be placed all literature that has been printed, in regard to Red Cross work and other branches of endeavour brought into existence by the exigencies of the war. May I ask you through the medium of your columns to bring this matter to the notice of these most likely to be interested in this matter with a view of enlisting their services therein. Any material sent to me will be properly tabulated and carefully conserved. In any cases where reluctance arises in presenting originals, copies might be sent, with endorsements of accuracy by the owners, which would virtually be as effective. It would be preferable however, if the originals were presented. I remain,

Yours, etc.,
Fred M. Dela Fosse.

Speed-Up For 1918

A Heart-to-Heart Talk by the Manager of Heintzman Hall to His Staff of Salesmen and Employees

This morning a representative of the Examiner was permitted the privilege of being present in the office of Heintzman Hall, Royal Bank Building, Hunter Street, when the manager, Mr. B. H. Britton, gave an instructive and forceful half-hour's business talk to his staff of salesmen and regular employees.

Mr. Britton informed his men that he had asked them to present themselves on this occasion that he might have a quiet, earnest talk with them regarding the business for 1918. He said he intended keeping up these business talks on the first Saturday morning of every month during the year, in order to inculcate incensed activity and alertness in their work. Mr. Britton himself has been somewhat in the midst of things, so to speak, in the piano salesmanship business for many years. In his message to his men, he gave them the benefit of his practical experience, his methods, and his advice, and plainly demonstrated the general truth essential to business, that success must come through their energetic work.

Mr. Britton expressed satisfaction with the volume of business done by Peterborough's Heintzman Hall during its first year, and he wished to incite his men to redouble their efforts for 1918 in order to maintain its good lead. He must have the valuable assistance of faithful, live salesmen, possessing real genius for the work—men who are alert, honest, clean, polite, and helpful to each other—that the public may discern that they are legitimately enthused with their business. Mr. Britton, in conclusion, pointed out that there were three "rungs in the ladder of success: First, the start; second, the middle; third, the top. He urged them all to aim for the third rung in the ladder—the top.

Several of the salesmen expressed themselves delighted with the helpful talk, advice, and encouragement that had been given them.

Mrs Britton, who graced the gathering with her presence, also spoke a few enheartening and cheering words to the men, rallying them to their work, and reminding them of the truism, "United we stand, divided we fall."

Council Will Hold Inaugural Meeting January 14th

One week from Monday next the inaugural meeting of the 1918 City Council will be held. Mayor Duffus and his colleagues will continue to carry on until G. H. Duncan, Mayor-elect, and the new members of the City Council, enter upon their duties.

Following the inaugural meeting, the Council will be called upon to strike the standing committees for the year.

In this connection it might be recalled that two years ago Mayor-elect Duncan took exception to the action of some members of the Council who at that time met in the private office of a South Ward alderman and undertook to allocate the committee chairmanships. It was a case of "you vote for me on this committee and I will reciprocate." With Mayor-elect Duncan at the head of civic affairs, it may be that the aldermen in question will refrain from such methods, although it is an easy matter to hold a star chamber session without the knowledge of the Mayor-elect.

There is much speculation as to the disposition of the committees. Chief among them is the Finance Committee. The ratepayers need have no qualms about the fate of the Finance Committee chairmanship, as like every other committee of the Council, the bulk and more important and executive duties fall upon the departmental heads. In this case, the keystone of the Finance Committee is City Treasurer Adams, whose years of experience will more than counter-balance any deficiency that may manifest itself in the new chairman.

One of the chief acts performed last year by the Finance Committee was the transfer of the city's bank account from one bank to another. Another important committee is that of the Board of Works, and whoever of the aldermen essays to guide the destinies of this committee will have reason to wonder why the city is not governed by a commission and an adequate salary paid for such services.

Other committees are less cumbersome and the duties are less laborious.

NOT FIGHTING A WAR OF AGGRESSION

Lloyd George Clearly Outlines Britain's War Aims—No Permanent Basis of Peace Could Be Made on Proposals of the Austrian Premier

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Jan. 5—Lloyd George in his speech to-day, said that although the Government alone was responsible for the actual language he proposed using, there was a national agreement as to the character and purpose of the nation's war aims and peace conditions. He was speaking, therefore, not merely the mind of the Government, but the mind of the Nation and the Empire. ""We are not fighting a war of aggression against the German people," declared the Premier. "Destruction or disruption of Germany of the German people has never been the war aim with us since the first day of the war to now. British people never aimed at breaking up the German peoples or to disintegration of their state. Our wish is not to destroy Germany's great position in the world, but to turn her aside from her schemes of military dominion, to devote her strength to beneficient tasks." The Premier decalred that Great Britain was not fighting to take Constantinople from Turkey nor destroy Austria - Hungary. We are not fighting, he said, to destroy Austria Hungary, or to deprive Turkey of its capital or rich lands in Asia Minor, and Thrace, which are predominantly Turkish.

Lloyd George declared that Britain would stand by France to the end, in her demand for reparation of the wrongs of Alsace-Lorraine; also that the disposition of the captured German colonies would rest with the conference which would take into account the desires of the native populations. Poland must be made independent. Lloyd George declared that no permanent basis of peace could be made on the proposals of the Austrian Premier, on Dec. 23rd.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAS. SUTHERLAND)

Deuteronomy, 34 chap.—Moses views the Promised Land from Mount Nebo, etc.

Moses apeared reluctant to leave his work, but that being finished, he manifested no unwillingness to die. He now was brought to acquiesce in the Lord's refusal to him of an entrance into Canaan. He appears animated with the immediate prospect of glory loosening all earthly attachments and adding to his strength and spirits, in ascending the mountain, where he was to put off the tabernacle of his body. It seems probable that he went up alone, without anyone to close his eyes, or witness his death. His mounting upward to die, might intimate that the believers dropping the body, is enlargement of the soul and ascension to glory. We need not be anxious for the presence of beloved friends, or the Lord's servants in our dying moments. Should our departure be sudden, alone, or even among strangers, the love and presence of our Saviour will suffice. Moses looked downward again toward this earth, to see the earthly Canaan into which he was not permitted to enter, but therefu, by faith he looked forward to the heavenly Canaan, into which now he was to immediately to enter, God had promised that he should have a view of it, and the promise is now fulfilled. The Lord showed him all that good land. Though his sight was good, and he had all the advantage of high ground that he could desire for the prospect, yet he could not have seen what he saw now, if his sight had not been miraculously assisted and enlarged, and therefore it is said. The Lord showed it him. For all the pleasant prospects that we have of the better country we are beholden to the grace of God; it is he that gives the spirit of wisdom, as well as the spirit of revelation; the eye as well as the object. He saw it at a distance, such a sight the Old Testament saints had of the Kingdom of Messiah; they saw it afar off. Thus Abraham before this, saw Christ's day, and being fully persuaded of it, embraced it in the promise, leaving others to embrace it in the performance. Heb. 11-13. Such a sight believers now have through grace, of the bliss and glory of their future state. The word and ordinances are to them what Mount Pisgah was to Moses, from they have comforting prospects of the glory to be revealed, and rejoice in the hope of it. He saw it, but must never enjoy it, as God sometimes takes his people away from the evil to come, so at other times he takes them away from the good to come, that is the good which shall be enjoyed by the church in the present world. Glorious things are spoken of the kingdom of Christ in the latter days, its advancement, inlargement, and flourishing state; we forsee it, but are not likely to live to see it. Those who shall live to come after us, we hope, will enter that promised land, which is a comfort to us. He saw all this just before his death. Sometimes God reserves the brightest discoveries of his grace to his people, to be the support of ther dying moments. Canaan was Immanuel's land. Isa, 8-8, so that in viewing it he had a view of the blessings that we enjoy in Christ. It was a type of Heaven, Heb. 11-16, which faith is the substance and evidence of. Those may leave this world in peace / who die in the faith of Christ, and in the hope of heaven and with Canaan in view. Having thus seen the Salvation of God we may well say, Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace. As a true servant of the Lord, Moses was obedient unto death, and obeyed this command of God as willingly as any other, though it seemed harder, but he died in honour and peace. God will have it so, and Moses cheerfully submits. He is here called the servant of the Lord, a man eminently useful in the service of God. It was more his honour, to be the servant of the Lord than to be king in Jeshuvun. Yet he dies, neither his piety nor his usefulness could exempt him from the hand of death. God's servants must die that they may rest from their labours and receive their reward. When God's servants are removed and must serve him no longer on earth, they go to serve him in his temple, day and night. He dies in the land of Moab, short of Canaan, while as yet he and his people were in an unsettled condition, and had not entered into their inheritance. He dies according to the word of the Lord; at the mouth of the Lord; so the word means, the Jews say, "with a kiss from the mouth of God." The Jews speak much of a person dying at the kiss of God, thereby not only expressing a person dying in his favour, but to show how sweet the death of God's saints is to them. No doubt Moses died very easily; there were no bands in his death, and he had in his death a most pleasing taste of the love of God to him; he died in the mouth of the Lord, he died in compliance with the will of God. The servants of the Lord when they have done all their work, must die at last in obedience to their Master, and be willing to go home, whenever he sends for them, Act. 21-13. Perhaps the Lord buried the body by the ministration of angels, but not by any human help and concealed it from the Israelites that it might not be an occasion of superstition and idolatry to them. The particular place of his burial was not known, and we must learn not to be over solicitous about the place of our burial. If the soul be at rest with God, it is of little consequence where the body rests. The burial of Christ hath consecrated every spot where a believer is interred, and his omnipotent voice will at length raise the body incorruptible. Many think this was the contest between Michael and the devil about the body of Moses, mentioned, Jude 9: and that the devil would make the place known that it might be a snare to the people and Michael would not let him. Moses' life was prolonged to old age; he was one hundred and twenty years old, though far short of the years of the patriarchs, yet most exceeded the years of most of his contemporaries; for the ordinary age of man had been reduced to seventy. Psa., 90-10. The years of the life of Moses were three forties; the first forty he lived a courtier, at ease, and in honour, in Pharoah's court, the second forty he lived a shepherd in Midian, the third forty in the wilderness leading the people to the promised land. His eye was not dim, nor his natural strength abated. There was no decay of the strength of his body or the activity of his mind, his understanding was clear, and his memory as strong as ever. This was the general reward of his services, and it was in particular the effect of his meekness and gentleness. There was solemn mourning for him. It is a debt owing to the surviving honour of deceased worthies, to follow them with our tears, as those who loved and valued them, are sensible of our loss of them. They mourned for thirty days. We must not abandon ourselves to perpetual grief, but let the wound heal in time. If we hope to go to heaven rejoicing why should we go to the grave mourning.

Thus died the great and good man of whom it is written that no such prophet ever arose in Israel, If we follow him from his cradle to his grave, from his little ark of bulrushes to his last sleep on the rocks, we shall find one uniform perfection of character, which no other man, or history of any man, ever exhibited. As a mere man he doubtless came as near perfection as was in the power of human nature and as will ever be the consequence of such exalted piety, great meekness, firm faith, and uniform practice, he enjoyed the favour and love of God and the respect and affection of men.

Yours sincerely,
JAMES SUTHERLAND.

MEAT SHORTAGE IS ACUTE IN OLD LONDON

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Jan. 5.— The most acute meat shortage since the start of the war struck London to-day. The Committee of Meat Supplies announced that the present consumption must be cut in half, but held out hope for an improvement within a short time. The government released 4,000 mutton carcases to-day, on condition that they be distributed only in the east end of the city. Butchers are unable to get supplies. Five hundred of them were counted in a single queue at Smithfield and many were unsupplied from the central warehouses. A great many meat shops in London have closed down from lack of supplies. The government, it was asserted, will aim to keep the poor and residences of munitions centres supplied first, and the wealthy must come last.

Peterboro' Juniors Beaten In Their First Game At Lindsay

Local Youngsters However Showed Good Form and Should Win the Return Game Next Week—Six Man Hockey Provided a Fast Game.

FINAL SCORE 8 TO 5

Although the Peterborough Juniors were beaten in the opening game of the O. H. A. season at Lindsay, last night, the youngsters showed such good form and so much promise for the futur that the officers of the club came home this morning feeling thoroughly satisfied with the prospects. The final score was 8 to 5 in favour of the Lindsay squad, who led 4 to 3 at the end of the first period, and 8 to 3 at the end of the second.

The Petes lost the game in the second session, when they ran into the old trouble that has always bothered Peterborough teams in Lindsay, of being unable to clear quickly when their territory was invaded. The smaller ice surface and the rounded corners always seem a handicap to the Peterborough gang and the result was last night that during the second round Lindsay secured two or three easy counters on shots from scrimmages. To make matters worse Goalkeeper Murray was knocked out by a crack over the head at the end of the first period and he was groggy for the next twenty minutes.

It was anybody's battle in the first period, the second was pretty well all Lindsay, and the third, which witnessed the fastest hockey of the night, had a distinctly Peterborough flavour. Capt. Cherrett's squad finding the nets twice, while Lindsay failed to score.

It was fast, exciting hockey all the way with plenty of penalties, but no deliberate rough stuff. The introduction of six-man hockey was a success from the spectators' viewpoint, as the pace was fast throughout and the use of a substitute kept the teams going at top speed. The return game here on Friday night next, should be a corker.

The Lindsay squad had it on the Petes both in size and weight, and had plenty of speed as well, but the Peterborough youngsters had the edge in stick-handling. Both teams need practice to develop team work, and accurate shooting, and the Petes in particular suffered from lack of combination.

Cherrett, although handicapped with a very sore heel, was the most effective man on the Peterborough lineup. The Petes' Captain showed all kinds of speed and stick-handling, checked back consistently and, as usual, led in the attack, getting three of the Petes' five goals. Bartley was also very useful, doing some great rushing and skating, while he bagged two goals by pretty work. Gerard, who was used both on the defence and the forward line, showed splendid promise, and little Williams, of last year's Mark Street team, who looks and plays like a second edition of Freddy Graham, earned a permanent place on the line-up in his first O. H. A. game.

Hagerman and McMahon, on the defence, also made their O. H. A. debut last night and gave a good account of themselves, especially the former, who showed plenty of speed. Murray, in the nets, tore off some pretty stops several times, skating out and blocking when his defence was beaten.

Lindsay's chief strength was in the attack. They had a lot of speed on the forward line and the advance guard checked back all the way. It was this coming back that saved the day for the Lindsay defence was easily drawn out, and when the Petes shook off the forwards they had little trouble in breaking through. Wilford, Lindsay's left-defence was the star of the team from an offensive standpoint, and played as if he was more familiar with the forward line than on the rear guard. He was always up on the attack and showed a fine turn of speed that made him a constant menace to the Petes. Lyons, the centre man, was another decidedly useful player and Conley did good work, although he marred his effectiveness by his constant slashing, which earned him five trips to the penalty box.

Referee Stanley Burgoyne of Toronto handled the game to perfection. It was a contest of the calibre that keeps a referee busy, but Burgoyne was always on the job and succeeded in pleasing both teams and the crowd which is a pretty fair task for any referee.

The teams were as follows:

Lindsay		Peterborough
	Goal
Oliver		Murray
	Right Defence
Garnett		McMahon
	Left Defence
Wilford		Hagerman
	Centre
Lyons		Cherrett
	Right Wing
Rogers		Girard
	Left Wing
Conley		Bartley
	Substitute
Green		Williams

The Lindsay gang pressed from the start and Murray was called upon to make several stops in the first minute's play. Then Rogers broke away down the boards and centred neatly to Lyons, who scored from close in.

The Petes' began to hit their stride and the pace grew faster. Cherrett evened it up when he grabbed the puck at centre, dodged the Lindsay defence and scooped one past Oliver from the side.

The Petes went ahead in the next minute, when Bartley broke away from his own end of the rink and, after a pretty rush, passed to Cherrett, who fooled the Lindsay defence pair and took Oliver's measure.

Lyons evened it up for Lindsay, when he nailed the puck after a face-off near the Peterborough nets and bored a fast one past Murray.

That left it 2—2, but the figures were quickly changed when Bartley took the rubber away from Wilford and scored with a pretty shot.

In four minutes Lindsay again tied the score, when Garnett found the nets with a shot from well out. This was just after Murray received a blow over the head and took the count. He resumed play after a few minutes' delay. Just before the period ended Conley put Lindsay in front with a swift shot from the side.

Lindsay had much the better of the second period. Right off the reel Lyons grabbed the rubber, ducked inside the defence and beat Murray. Two minutes after a long shot from Wilford trickled through. The Petes were having difficulty in clearing and Murray was kept busy with the puck hovering around his nets. Finally Garnett made it 7 to 3 on a low swift shot from well out, and five minutes afterwards Wilford repeated the trick, leaving the score 8 to 3 at the end of the period.

The Petes came back strong in the last period and had a big edge on the Butler squad. With more system in their attack they might have pulled the game out of the fire, as they threw away golden chances through hogging the puck or passing wildly. Early in the period Bartley sent the Petes' stock up with a pretty rush and shot that beat Oliver.

Three or four times in succession the Petes broke through only to lose the rubber at the mouth of the net or to shoot wide. Finally Williams broke away and passed to Cherrett, who bored a beauty into the corner of the net for the final score of the game.

Military Cross For Maj. Harold Gould

Major Harold V. Gould, son of Mr. Harvey J. Gould, grain merchant and prominent Liberal-Unionist of Uxbridge, has been awarded the Military Cross for "exceptional bravery under fire and general efficiency in work." Major Gould enlisted in the 116th (Ontario county) battalion, commanded by his uncle, Col. Sam Sharpe. He is a brother of Eddie Gould, who starred in the old days of the Midland hockey team, and is a cousin of Mrs. J. S. Knapman, of this city.

VISITATION GREAT SUCCESS

Over 7,000 Cards Were Filled in Peterborough Yesterday

The Home Visitation in Peterborough yesterday was a complete success. The visitors did their work systematically and well and the result was that this morning found huge bundles of cards ready for the use of all the clergymen of the city. Rev. E. W. Halpenny, who supervised the work, stated to The Examiner to-day that he had never seen a canvass better conducted. Over 7,000 cards were filled out and the city was thoroughly covered. Information was freely given to the visitors, and the cases where people failed to indicate a preference for any particular denomination or refused to supply any information were few and far between. The cards have been sorted and were available for the ministers to-day.

INSTALLATION OF THE OFFICERS OF COURT PETERBORO' NO. 29, C.O.F.

At the regular meeting of Court Peterborough No. 29, Canadian Order of Foresters, held in their hall on Simcoe Street, last evening, the annual installation of Court officers for 1918 was the order of business for the evening.

Deputy High Chief Ranger Bro. J. J. Hartley, assisted by High Marshal Bro. John Hardwick, conducted the impressive ceremony with all due regard for the solemnity of the occasion, and installed the following officers for the ensuing term:

Past Chief Ranger, Bro. Stanley Cummings.
Chief Ranger, Bro. James Brown.
Vice Chief Ranger, Bro. Russel Harper.
Treasurer, Bro. Frank Adams.
Finan. Secretary, Bro. Charles Stenton.
Rec. Secretary, Bro. Harry Oland.
Chaplain, Bro. Dan. Menzies.
Senior Woodward, Bro. William Carter.
Junior Woodward, Bro. George Dredge.
Senior Beadle, Bro. Geo. Carpenter.
Junior Beadle, Bro. Cole Barrett.

At the conclusion of the installation, a number of appropriate speeches were made by several of the members present, particularly the retiring Treasurer, Bro. Henderson Nesbitt. Bro. Nesbitt was one of the original charter members of Court Peterborough No. 29, and has held continuous office for over 30 years, during which time he has made a host of friends by his unfailing devotion to the welfare of the order in general and of the members of Court Peterborough in particular.

The annual installation banquet will be held on 18th January, to which all the members of Court Peterborough are cordially invited.

Diplomas Presented To St. Alban's Scholars

At the recent annual Christmas Tree of St. Alban's Mission S. S., when fifty of the scholars sat down to a substantial repast, 14 diplomas were presented for regular attendance, while five scholars received second-year seats. Every child received a present from the beautifully decorated Christmas tree. Mr. Whiteside, the energetic superintendent of the Sunday School, and Scoutmaster, deserves credit for the success of the evening, as also do the ladies who so kindly asisted at the tea.

MAY ATTEND IN UNIFORM

Lieut.-Col. Mills has received instructions from Kingston that all officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the active militia, and all officers, non-commissioned officers and men honourably discharged from the C.E.F. may attend their respective churches in uniform to-morrow in connection with the service held in response to the King's proclamation.

FIRST CARS OF GREEN HARDWOOD RECEIVED BY THE CITY TO-DAY

A meeting of the Committee of the Whole will be held on Monday night to discuss further certain details of the city's fuel engagements. The first cars of green maple and birch arrived this morning, and it is hoped that these may be delivered from the cars. This wood costs the city $9.35 f.o.b., Peterborough, and there is some feeling that the selling price of $11.25 is too high for uncut wood.

The city is not actuated by any intent to make a profit from this service to the public, but was largely guided by a desire to avoid what some dealers might regard unfair competition. It is apparent that a margin of $1.90 is too wide to cover the cost of unloading and delivering directly from the cars.

Some of the consumers may cut this wood themselves, but if they hire some of the remnant of the old buck-saw brigade there will be an additional expense for cutting. Hence it is contended that the city's price should be reduced to provide for the additional expense of cutting.

WEDDING BELLS

LARDIE—VAN NORMAN.

At the George Street Methodist Parsonage yesterday (Friday) evening, a quiet wedding was solemnized by Rev. Mr. Thomas, when Kathleen Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Van Norman, was united in marriage to James Lardie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Lardie, of Burlington. Mrs. M. A. Rowe, Lakefield, was matron of honour, while Pte. George Van Norman, brother of the bride, supported the groom. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome diamond brooch, to the bridesmaid and best man, sums of money.

After the ceremony the wedding party enjoyed a pleasant evening at the home of the bride's parents, 423 George street.

Mr. and Mrs. Lardie will reside in Hamilton.

OBITUARY

SOPHIA J. MACDONALD.

Word reached Lindsay yesterday that Mrs. Sophia J. MacDonald had died at Fernie, B.C. The late Mrs. MacDonald and her family lived in Lindsay for several years and had a host of friends. Mrs. MacDonald had not enjoyed good health for some months back, but her demise has come as a shock to the people here.

The deepest sympathy of the community at large goes out to the members of the family, who are Mrs. J. Billings, Victoria, B.C., Mrs. Harry Herchmer, Victoria, B.C., Mrs. Geo. Herchmer, Fernie, B.C., also another married daughter, Kathleen; John B. MacDonald, Vancouver, Fergus, of Victoria, and Cyril, who is overseas.

Mrs. MacDonald was a sister to Dr. Butler, who at one time practiced medicine in Peterborough.

JEAN BAPTISTE LAVALATT.

Jean Baptiste Lavalatt, one of the oldest residents of the city, died this morning at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Hosanna Brioux, 70 Park street, after an illness of some months, which terminated yesterday in a paralytic stroke. Deceased was born in Quebec 91 years ago, and came to Peterborough 65 years ago to reside. He was principally interested in the lumber trade.

He leaves of the immediate family, three daughters, Mrs. Rose Brioux, Mrs. Lafavre, Toronto, and Mrs. Billiveau, of the Western States.

The funeral from 70 Park street, will take place on Monday morning at 9 o'clock to the Sacred Heart church, thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

War Veterans To Attend Services At St. John's To-morrow

Every member of the Great War Veterans' Association is requested to attend the special services of invocation for victory at St. John's church to-morrow morning and evening. The men will meet at the Barrie Building at 10.30 a.m. and again at 6.30 p.m.

MILITARY MEDAL FOR PTE. BLEWETT

93rd Battalion Hockey Player is Decorated For Bravery

His many friends in Peterborough will be glad to learn that Pte. Harry Blewett, of Lakefield, and formerly of the 93rd Battalion, has been awarded the Military Medal for bravery in the field. Pte. Blewett was a member of the 93rd Battalion intermediate O.H.A. team, playing a star game at right wing for the soldier hockeyists. He enlisted here with the 93rd and after going overseas was transferred to the 20th Battalion at the front. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Blewett, of Lakefield.

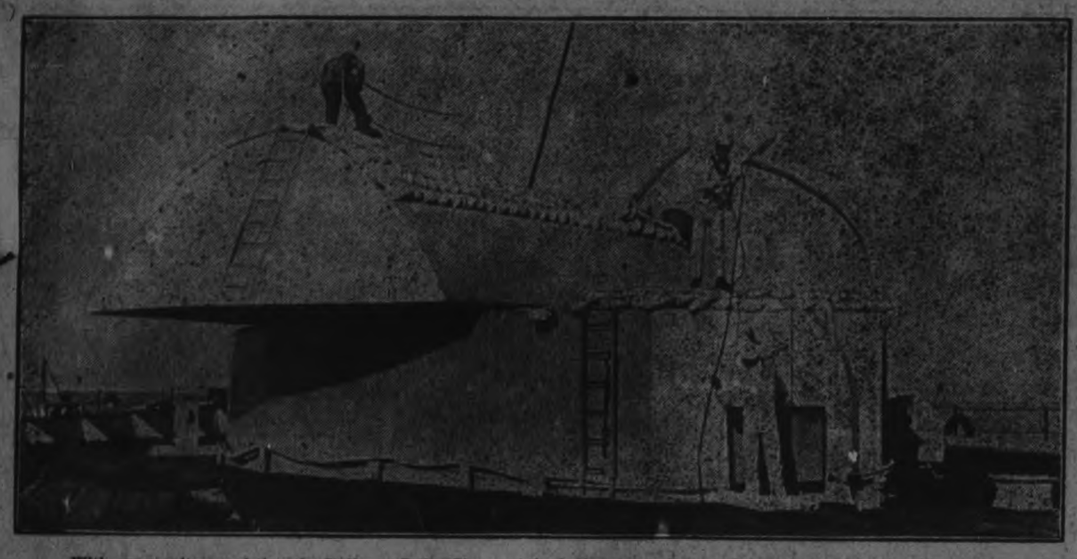
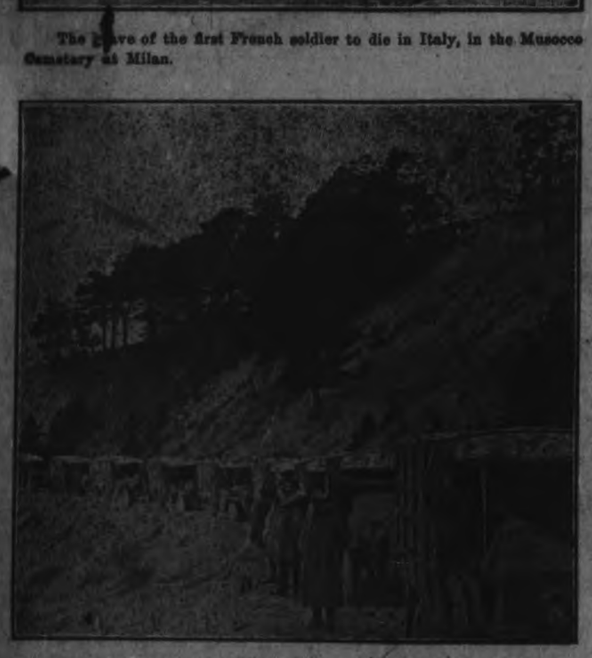
The British and French Reinforce Italy - Military China

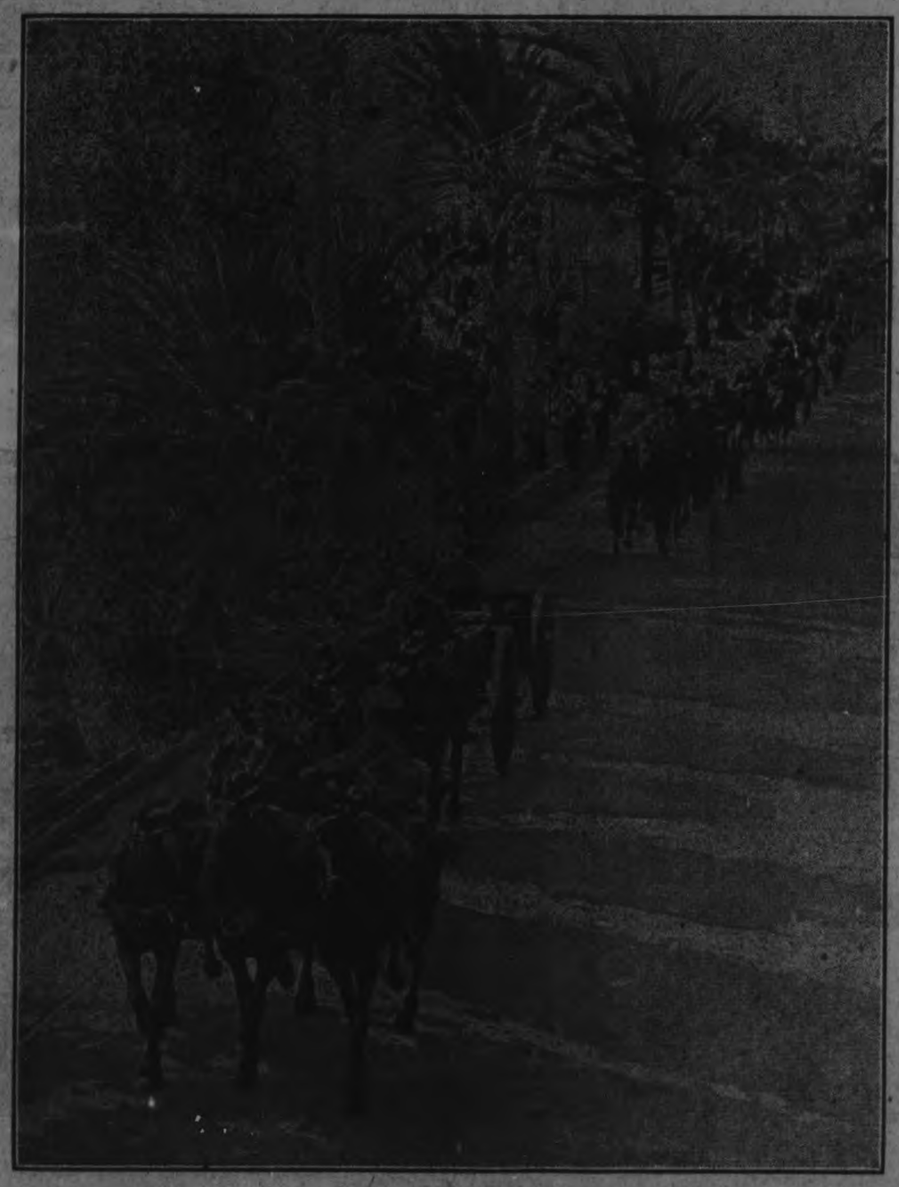


With our monitors assisting the Italians off the Piave. A barbette gun sandbag-roofed against bombs, standing out to battle. While swift vessels of the Italian light flotilla keep watch and ward round our monitors while in action off the mouth of the Piave and in the Gulf of Trieste against U-boats and bomb-dropping aeroplanes as far as possible, against the latter the monitors take special precaution on their own account. Sand-bags are used all over the ship on the upper deck, among other purposes, to protect the magazines, engine-rooms, and vital parts of the interior, and also on the roofs of the heavy-gun barbettes, and as wall-like breastworks round exposed quick-firing gun-positions on deck. Monitors, as most people know, are shallow-draught vessels, designed for standing close in-shore off low-shelving coasts, and bombarding from there.

The grave of the first French soldier to die in Italy, in the Musocco Cemetary at Milan.



A French convoy halted on a road in a mountain pass on the way to the Italian front. French troops, having a shorter distance to go, were naturally the first to reach Italy and to come to the help of the Italian army.



British troops "pouring" into Italy: Artillery on the march. The prompt help sent to Italy in her hour of trial by her French and British allies has been immensely appreciated and is having the happiest effect.

On the road at Desenzano: A supply column of French Motor lorries in Italy.

The reinforcement of the Italians by British and French. Two of the French airmen. The transference of British and French troops from elsewhere to reinforce the Italians and assist in rolling back the wave of invading Austrians and Germans, has been accomplished, according to all accounts, with record swiftness and smoothness.

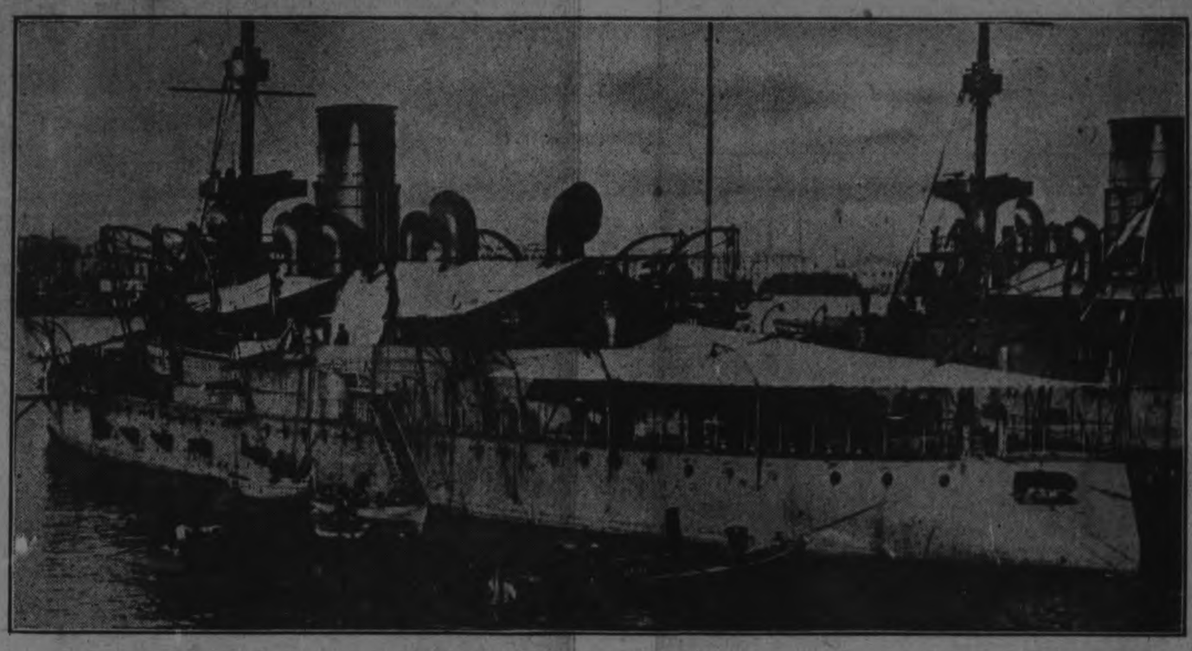
Military China: A Presidential review of troops. A military review at Nan Yuan on October 10, the anniversary of the Republic. Awaiting the President (right to left)—The Premier, and Ministers of the Navy, Finance (next but one), the Interior, Justice, and Communications.

Chinese President Feng Kuo-Chang's first review of troops (on October 10 at Nan Yuan). (1) The President; (2) The Premier; (3) The Grand Master of Ceremonies; (4) General Yin-Chang, Chief of Staff.

World's Greatest Siege Gun - With our Italian Allies - A Captured "Pill-Box."

The world's greatest siege gun. It is of more than 20-inch calibre, and is under construction in the Famous French Creusot munitions plant, supposedly for prospective use against fortesses. It is considered far too ponderous for ordinary field service.

Remarkable German concrete blockhouse or "Pill-box," as it is called by the British Tommies, erected on the St. Quentin salient, where it resisted bombardment after bombardment by the French, practically without damage, and finally had to be taken by assault. The face of one of the French captors of the "Pill-box" can be seen peering through the peephole.



The Austrian battleship Wien, lying at her anchorage in the harbor of Trieste, where she was recently torpedoed and sunk by Italian sailors under Lieut. Rizzo, of the Italian Navy, who cut they way to the ship through nets of steel cables strung over submarine mines. Alongside lies her sister ship, the Monarch.

The Third Italian Army moving back to its new position behind the Piave. This view shows the crowded state of the roads during the retreat to the Piave.

In Cambrai battle: "Kamerad"—just in time.

The Conflict in Russia - German Prisoners in Good Hands

Civil Strife in Russia: The Lenine-Kerensky conflict in Petrograd. Before Lenine obtanned power—some of his troops being marched to prison by former comrades fighting for Kerdensky. Inset—A Lenine flag.

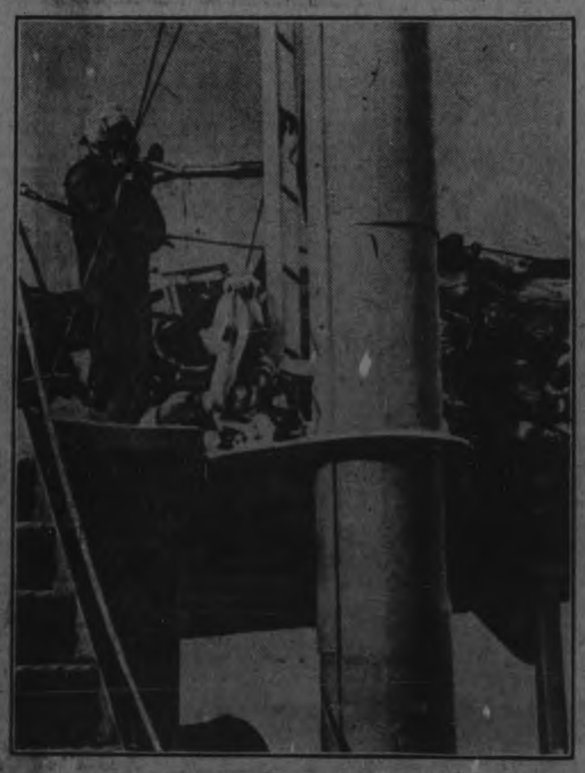
The struggle for power in Petrograd: Railway carriages used as prisons for captured Leninites, barred and strongly guarded. Photograph taken during the earlier stages of the struggle in Petrograd between the adherents of Lenine and the forces of Kerensky and the Provisional Government.

In the blacksmith's shop: A worker at the Kensington War Hospital Supply Depot.

The fierce fighting on the Western Front—British troops moving through a village.

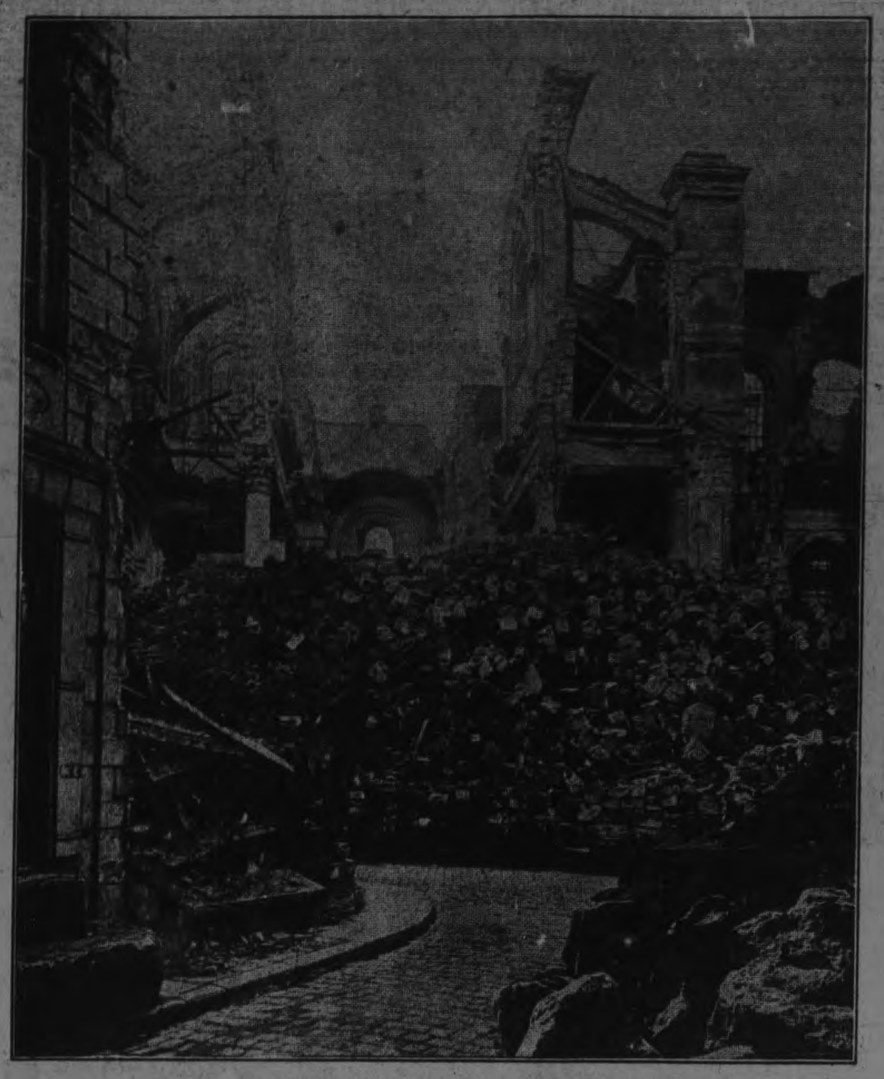
On the Cambrai front: A gun captured by some Highland troops.

The aftermath of Battle: German wounded and prisoners captured near Cambrai. Three wounded German prisoners, captured by Highland Territorials, coming in over a "duck-board" track.



On the Italian defence line at the mouth of the Piave. On a British monitor: Telephone communication with wireless on the screened upper bridge.

Meal-time for German prisoners in a French camp: Lining up to receive their rations of soup. The German prisoners in the hands of the French are well treated and well fed. Our photograph shows the methodical arrangements for the serving out of soup to the prisoners at a large camp in the Haute Marne.



The ruins of Arras Cathedral: The interior and wrecked facade.

Sounding the upper atmosphere. A French ballon sondé about to be released. This little balloon is filled with hydrogen and then released. Its changes of direction are watched and measured as it ascends. Sometimes special instruments are attached, which are recovered when they fall. Its height is obtained by angular measurements.

A Kingston landmark. Building on Queen Street, near Bagot Street, wherein the first Parliament of Canada was held.

The man who prevented the destruction of "L49" by her commander: M. Jules Boiteux.

Pte. Delbert A. Dixon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dixon, Verona, Ont. He enlisted in the 146th Batt., and at Valcartier was transferred to the C.M.G.D., in which he spent five months in the trenches. Being gassed on November 11th, he was sent to the Red Cross Auxiliary Hospital in England.

Lower right—Capt. Lionel M. Dawson, M.C. Lower left—Lt. Wilfrid L. Dawson. Upper left—Bdr. John R. Dawson. Upper right—Pte. Eric L. Dawson. Centre—V.A.D. Nurse Edith N. Dawson. Sons and daughter-in-law of the George W. Dawson, of Plevna, in the County of Frontenac, formerly of Kingston, who represented Addington in the House of Commons from 1891 to 1896 in the Parliament of the five Premiers, Macdonald, Abbott, Thompson, Bowell, and Tupper.

Capt. L. M. Dawson is serving in France, with the City of London Field Ambulance. Recently he was awarded the Military Cross for conspicuous bravery in ministering to and superintending the removal of the wounded from the battlefield under heavy fire. He is a graduate of Queen's University Medical School. His wife, Nurse Edith N. Dawson, is serving in England with the V.A.D.'s.

Lt. W. L. Dawson also is a graduate of Queen's. He went overseas in 1915 as a gunner in the 7th Brigade, C.F.A., was wounded in action in France, and, upon recovery, was transferred to the Royal Garrison Artillery with the rank of second lieutenant.

Bdr. J. R. Dawson went overseas with his brother as a gunner in the 7th Brigade. He also was severely wounded in action in France, and is now convalescent in England.

Pte. Eric L. Dawson left Canada last August with a draft from Queen's University Ambulance Corps. Upon arrival in England, he was transferred to the 7th Infantry Reserve. He has not yet seen active service in France.

Another son, Sydney G. Dawson, B.Sc., of Queen's University, in August, 1914, immediately war was declared, resigned a lucrative position and enlisted for overseas service. He served at Valcartier Camp with Queen's University Engineers for several months, when he was honorably discharged because of goitre, from which he has not yet wholly recovered.

SENT FREE TO MEN!

ALL ABOUT STRENGTH AND VIGOR

MR. READER:

Here is something we have to offer you absolutely for nothing—a little private book of special information about the legitimate uses and unnatural abuses of manly strength; about the preservation and its possible self-restoration, an illustrated pocket compendium of 5,000 words, 72 pages and 30 half-tone photograph reproductions—which I am very pleased to send by mail, absolutely free of charge, in a plain sealed envelope, to any man, young or elderly, single or married, who writes for it.

Over a million of these books have been thus sent to applicants all over the world since my free offer first appeared. Publishers are charging as much as $2 for books on sex subjects, while my book is free. Therefore, reader, if you would like a great fund of inside information relating directly to the subject of manly strength, all put in perfectly plain, easy-to-read language, with many hints that you can surely apply to your own self, no matter how strong you may be, or how nervous or rundown you may be—if you want to know the facts about this particular subject, given to you without a single scare, then fill in the coupon below, send to me, and receive my book sealed, by return mail. In one part of this little publication I describe a mechanical invention of my own, which I call the SANDEN vitaliser, something you wear at night as an aid to the restoration of waning strength. You are not expected to get one of these appliances unless you decide for yourself that you want one. The book is complete, and there is absolutely nothing you are required to buy or pay. Therefore, please send your name and address to-day.

SANDEN, Author.

MANHOOD WINS IN ALL WALKS OF LIFE.

MANHOOD! The quality which rules the world to-day. My friend, there never was a time in the history of the human race when real, sturdy manhood, manly vigor and manly courage counted for as much as they do now, this very minute. No matter what your years, whether you are 20 or 60, you must be either entirely in the race or entirely out of it. It is invariably the fellow who proves up strongest in this human strength that forges to the front, while weaklings stand aside; it is he also who is in most demand, and most sought after by all classes of his community, simply because he radiates that marvellous magnetic influence which only an abundant vigor and rugged manly health can radiate. I believe any man can hope to completely develop or mature this same vigorous strength, no matter what his past may have been, provided he is willing to REALLY MAKE THE EFFORT, and provided, of course, he is not weighed down by extreme old age or is not incurably diseased. To my mind, the need of the one who wants more vitality is perfectly plain, but it is a road that any man MUST travel if he attains the highest ideals in this respect. See information in my free book.

As to the SANDEN Vitaliser, previously mentioned, will say it is a little mechanical appliance, weighing but a few ounces, which you wear at night. This Vitaliser generates and sends forth a certain soft, penetrating force which I call Vitality. It drives this Vitality into your nerves, blood, muscles, and organs as you sleep. It is quieting to the nervous system—or, at least, so users say. Men write that it takes pain out of the back often at once, and restores vital strength in 90 days. Remember, the general information of the free book is independent of this Vitaliser, and most are not expected to get one of these little appliances unless you want to. You can write me later as to that, if you so desire. With special attachments, my Vitaliser is used by women as well as men for rheumatism, kidney, liver, stomach, bladder disorders, etc. If you live in or near this City I should be most pleased to have you call in person at my office, where you may see and test the Vitaliser free of charge. Hours—9 to 6. Or if convenient to call, do not fail to write for the free booklet. Satisfaction guaranteed in every case.

PLEASE USE COUPON.

Fill in the coupon below and send it. You will receive free, sealed, by return mail, our 72-page illustrated book, containing 5,000 words, a complete compendium of useful information for men, young or elderly, single or married, who want the truth about the subject of vital strength, its preservation, its possible self-restoration, and its legitimate uses and unwise abuses. You get it all free.

HUNS PLAN GREAT AERIAL OFFENSIVE

Kaiser Now Makes Effort to Combat American Air Forces.

With the American Army in France, Jan. 7.—Germany's plans for aerial warfare on a larger scale than heretofore it is indicated in documents taken from enemy prisoners, are founded upon published statements regarding the aerial warfare plans of the U. S. Information to this effect has reached the American expeditionary forces.

It is indicated that the Germans, believing that America intended putting machines by the tens of thousands into the battle area, immediately enlarged their own plans in the expectation of offsetting the increased enemy forces. Just when the enemy's programme will be realized is uncertain, but the information obtained in captured documents is regarded by ranking officers as making it extremely desirable for a speedy and complete development of American air service.

NERVOUS HEADACHE: PAINS IN BACK

Could Scarcely Get About the House —Doctors Did Not Seem to Help Me But I Found a Cure Which I Can Recommend to Others

Mrs. H. Crary, 515 Cedar Street, Peterborough, Ont., writes:

"I was suffering from a run-down condition of the system, nervous debility and sleeplessness. I lost a good many nights' sleep, and some nights after going to sleep, would wake up with a start, and then lie awake for hours. I also had frequent headaches, and pains through my back. I got so that I could hardly do any work. I had taken doctors' medicine, but it did not seem to help me. Through reading in the newspapers of the help others had derived from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I started taking this medicine The first box helped me, so I continued, taking about five or six boxes. I found that I was a great deal better, able to sleep well, and do my work without any trouble. My headaches and nervousness are gone. My mother lives with me, and she has also found great benefit from the use of the Nerve Food. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for nervous trouble of any kind."

When the nerves give out everything goes wrong. The heart's action is weakened, the stomach fails to digest the food, headaches result, you cannot rest or sleep properly, and you get run-down and discouraged.

There is only one way to get out of this condition, and that is by feeding the nerves and thereby nourishing them back to health. The most successful treatment used for this purpose is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This fact has been proven in so many thousands of cases all about you that it seems as though everybody should know it by this time.

Ask your friends and neighbours about this great food cure, and put it to the test in your own case. You will then understand why so many people are enthusiastic about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50 cents a box, 6 for 2.75, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto. The genuine bears the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author, on the label.

Teutons Must Recognize Rights Of Nationalities As A Basis For Peace

Also Re-Establishment of Sanctity of Treaties and International Organization Limiting Armament—Three Conditions Must Be Fulfilled—Prussia's Real Intention

MUST BE REPARATION

LONDON, Jan. 7.—David Lloyd George, the British Premier, in an epoch-making speech, delivered today at what he declared to be the most critical hour of the war, laid Great Britain's war aims before the world, both more broadly and more specifically than they have been formulated.

In effect the speech was a reply to a rejection of the German peace terms as violated by the spokesman for the Central Powers, at the Brest-Litovsk conference. No lasting peace was possible on this basis, he asserted, emphasizing the point that mere lip service to the formulas of no annexations, no indemnities and self-determination would not suffice.

Recognition of Rights.

The broad principle of recognition of the rights of nationalities formed the basis of the Premier's statement. He enunciated this specifically in declaring that "government by consent of the governed" must be the foundation of any territorial adjustments after the war, replacing the old method of settlement by bargaining around a council table by a few negotiators scheming to serve the interests of one dynasty or another.

Prussia's Real Intention.

"Nobody who knows Prussia and her designs toward Russia can doubt her ultimate intention," said Lloyd George. "Whatever phrases she uses to delude Russia, she does not mean to surrender any of the Russian provinces and cities now occupied. Under one name or another, they will henceforth be part of the Prussian dominions, ruled by the Prussian sword, and the rest of the Russians will be enticed or bullied into complete economic and ultimate political enslavement."

There Must be Reparation.

"Reparation means recognition," the Premier said. "Unless international right is recognized by insistence or payment for injury done in defence of its canons it can never be a reality. Next comes the restoration of Serbia, Montenegro, and the occupied parts of France, Italy and Roumania.

"The complete withdrawal of alien armies and reparation for injuries done is the fundamental condition of a permanent peace."

Unity of Italy.

"We regard as vital," said the Premier "the legitimate claims of the Italians for union with those of their own race and tongue.

"We also mean to press that justice be done to the men of Roumanian blood and speech in their legitimate aspirations.

"If these conditions were fulfilled, Austria-Hungary would become a power whose strength would conduce to the permanent peace and freedom of Europe, instead of being an instrument of the pernicious Prussian military autocracy."

Justice to Belgium.

The Premier said the first requirements always made by the British and their allies had been complete restoration of the political, territorial, and economic independence of Belgium, and such reparation as could be made for the devastation of its towns and provinces. This was no demand for war indemnity, but insistence on the fact that before there could be any approach to stable peace this great breach of public law in Europe must be repudiated, and, so fas as possible, repaired.

Self-Govt. in Dual Empire.

"Although we agree with President Wilson that the breaking up of Austria-Hungary is no part of our war aims," he continued, "we feel that unless genuine self-government on true democratic principles is granted those Austro-Hungarian nationalities who have long desired it, it is impossible to hope for removal of those causes of unrest in that part of Europe which so long have threatened its genuine peace."

Outside of Europe, Mr. Lloyd George went on, he believed the same principles should be applied. He added:

What Turkey Must Do.

"While we do not challenge maintenance of the Turkish Empire in the home lands of the Turkish race, with its capital Constantinople—the passage between the Mediterranean and the Black Sea being internationalized and neutralized—Arabia, Armenia, Mesopotamia, Syria and Palestine are, in our judgment, entitled to recognition of their separate national conditions."

Always Ready to Discuss.

The Premier told his hearers much had been said about the arrangements Great Britain had made with its allies on this and other subjects. He could say only that, as new circumstances like the Russian collapse and the separate Russian negotiations had changed the conditions in which the arrangements were made, the Government was always ready to discuss them with the allied nations.

To Settle Disputes.

"One regrettable omission we notice in the proposal of the Central Powers," he said: "we believe a great attempt must be made to establish a great international organization as a means of settling international disputes. War is a relic of barbarism, and as law has succeeded violence in the settlement of individual disputes so it is destined to settle national controversies.

Three Conditions.

We are fighting for a just and lasting peace," the Premier declared. "Three conditions must be fulfilled: Firstly, the sanctity of treaties reestablished; secondly, territorial settlement based on the right of self-determination or the consent of the governed; lastly, creation of an international organization to limit armaments and diminish the probability of war.

Sacrifice for Principal.

"To secure these conditions the British Empire is prepared to make even greater sacrifices."

Pledge That is Worthless.

RELIEF TRAIN SENT BY CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS

Special Party From Boston Went to Halifax With $10,000 and Food and Clothing For the Needy

Speedy action was taken by the Christian Science organization in Boston to provide relief for the Halifax people who are in distress on account of the explosion of the munitions ship and the resulting fire. Efforts to send aid on Saturday were at first hampered by reason of the fact that there was no through train available at the time when a party could be made ready to start. Agents of The Christian Science Board of Directors were able, however, to make special arrangements with the Boston & Maine Railroad for a special train, which left this city Saturday evening, saving many hours in getting the needed aid to its destination.

Meanwhile, in Boston, special arrangements were made for special collections in The Mother Church, and also in many of the branch churches in other cities, and the Comforts Forwarding Committee took charge of the gathering of clothing and supplies, and the forwarding of them to Halifax.

Besides $10,000 in cash and letters of credit, the representatives of the Directors took first aid in the form of warm clothing, food and other necessary articles to be distributed among the sufferers at Halifax.

On Board the special train, as representatives of the Board of Directors were: Ralph E. Parker, Mrs. E. Parker, Charles H. Welch, William Bradford Turner, B. Howard Cocley and Dr. Frank C. Colby.

When it became known that a train had been arranged for by the Directors City Hall officials telephoned saying that certain others wished to send along some of the city doctors and supplies, and this was quickly arranged. The Red Cross officials also asked for opportunity to send along some of their material, so that the special train of the Christian Scientists actually carried thirty or forty others interested in giving aid or in reaching Halifax at the earliest possible moment.

The special collection taken at the services in The Mother Church on Sunday, which is but a preliminary one, as no proper notice had been given, amounted to $4,693.04. Also, if further relief is necessary the Directors are prepared to send nurses etc. Collections taken in Christian Science branch churches are yet to be reported and made advisable.

A message was received in The Mother Church from Jenine B. Stevens, representing Christian Scientists in Halifax, reading as follows: "Gratefully report all our people safe and well."

(The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, U.S.A., Dec. 11, 1917).

Additional contributions have swelled the amount of the Halifax relief collection, taken at the Sunday services of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Boston, so that the total amount now reported by the treasurer, Miss Knapp, is $8,239.80. Mr. Knapp says that it is not yet possible to make a complete statement as to the total.

The "Waacs" Are at Work

Helping British Army To Complete Its Victory

"WAACS" is the newest word in the war vocabulary to-day. This is the merry appellation which good luck and the alphabet have bestowed upon England's soldier girls. No time was wasted over there in wrangling and writing to the editors about the respective merits of "Susie Atkins" or "Mollie-go-to-the-War." Women's Auxiliary Army Corps is the name of the organization, so "Waacs" they were, without more ado.

Prosaic-minded persons cabled to the newspapers in this country that "the women are to wear a uniform consisting of khaki tunic and trousers, high boots, and sombrero hats." It remained for Miss Cicely Hamilton in a recent letter to inform a waiting world that the proper title for the costume is "Somewhere in France." This is reminiscent of those strangely faraway days when the Paris couturiers vied with each other in devising poetical names for their creations and manikins lovely beyond all possibility of imitation strolled about clad in "Mists of Morning" and "Maiden's Prayer." Much cheerful news may be expected from an army of "Waacs" who buoyantly retain their feminine interest in clothes, even in the responsible hours of establishing history for the first women to partake in the actual business of making war.

They are a strange contrast to the pitiful "Legion of Death" in Russia. One cannot, of course, imagine Russian peasant women hunting about for a cheery name for their uniform, any more than one would expect the tragic soul of the Russian woman to be content to do her "bit" rubbing down an officer's horse or typing his reports after a day in the trenches. The women of England go about their warring chuckling, as the men do, and probably would thank no one to point out that the chuckle drowns out the sob.

Everything that women can do at home can be done behind the firing line. It has taken the world many thousand years to discover this, but England, having made the discovery, sent her women in a matter-of-fact way to the war and said no more about them. They live in barracks exactly like those provided for the men and are subject to rigid army discipline. They perform duties which release thousands of men for actual work in the trenches. Women as mechanics, automobile drivers, cooks, stenographers, waitresses, packers, and telephone operators, milkers, haymakers, horsekeepers, and market gardeners are coming to be the accepted thing in the British army of to-day, as the nurse was in the army of yesterday. Properly housed and fed under army regulations, it is probably true that the "Waac" is better off in France than she was in her London lodgings, and, reasonably well chaperoned, she will be an excellent thing for the Tommy Atkins. We quote Miss Hamilton on this:

"Their neat khaki uniforms pervade the cobbled streets, and, office hours over, are dotted on the country roads; and judging from the frequency with which you meet them under escort, they are popular with the army from a social point of view. When I made my visit to the barracks the evening was typical August. There were deck chairs planted in the open. A game of tennis was in progress, and half the camp had wandered out a-walking. Even so, the hut where you sip your cocoa and write your letters, the Y. W. C. A. hut, was by no means neglected; there was custom at the counter and a tidy attendance for a lecture."

In Ireland.

A prominent member of the Irish convention was recently in England, and, at his club, was asked how things were going in Ireland. "How can I tell you how things are going in Ireland?" he replied. "But I'll tell you a little story to help you to realize how things go over there. A master of hounds in the south had, as usual, to pay for losses of poultry from the depredations of foxes. Last year, owing to absence from home, he had to delegate the job to his first whip. On his return he found that the account was less by about half than in former years, so he called his whip and asked him the reason. 'Ah, sure, your honor, ye don't know the people like I do,' was the answer. 'I just told 'em all to come and bring their claims, and I put all the good straight wans in the shed on one side of the yard, and I put all the rascals in the shed on t'other side; then I said to the rascally spalpeens, "Now phwat's your claims?" and sure I paid 'em all every wan. Then I went over to the good folk and said. "Phwat's your claims?" and when they told me I just said, "Phwat do ye mane by bringing a pack of lies like this here?" and I just druv them all out.'"

New Mine Props.

Mr. Edwin Seward, a Cardiff architect, after several years of patient study has patented a substitute for mine-props which has been tried and found to give every satisfaction. The main points about the new props are that they are simple in construction, are indestructible, and do not deteriorate in water or damp. The chief component materials are colliery cinders, stone, and crushed clinker, which when washed, manipulated, combined, and duly strengthened result in a prop the finished weight of which is light enough to allow of efficient handling by one man.

ENGLISH INN SIGNS.

Invariably Are Derived From Some Historical Event.

There are thousands of inns scattered throughout the British Isles—inns which have existed for centuries past as the places of call for the stage coach, which have marked the way along well-known routes, and have been welcomed as houses of rest along the less frequented ones. These old-time hotels have come down to posterity, altered perhaps in character and appearance, but still relics of the past, with their quaint names and still quainter signs.

In London alone there are records of countless inns or taverns, numbers of which are now extinct or rebuilt to meet the needs of the hour. The old mail coaches journeying along the Great North road used unfailingly, for the benefit of their passengers, to call at the Angel and the Peacock inns at Islington, with their then "low," old-fashioned, wainscoted parlors, while not far away on Pentonville hill was the Belvedere tavern, famous for many years on account of its debating society, at which many prominent politicians enjoyed their first oratorical triumphs.

One of the most ancient inns in the metropolis is the Bricklayers' Arms inn, at the corner of Tower Bridge road. This was recently rebuilt, but its name dates back some 600 years. At Ludgate circus is the Belle Sauvage inn, supposed to have been so named in honor of the Indian princess, Pocahontas, who rescued Captain John Smith, one-time governor of Virginia. An inn of historical importance, the premises of which have now been converted into a railway booking office, was the George and Blue Boar, which used to stand at High Holborn, and was the last "house of call" for criminals on their way to Tyburn. It is also related that during the great rebellion, a messenger was found there, carrying a letter from Charles I. in which the king expressed his intention of having Cromwell and Ireton executed, and the discovery of this information decided his would-be victims to have the sentence visited on Charles himself.

One of the most famous of the ancient London inns is the Mother Red Cap inn at Camden town, the signboard of which used to consist of the portrait of an old woman with a scarlet capuller or hood covering her head and shoulders. The Old Bell Inn and Oxford Arms used to be in Warwick lane. One of the most renowned old coaching houses was the White Horse inn in Fetter lane.

Many inns have been written of in literature. Readers of Dickens, the world over, know that Sam Weller was originally "Boots" at the White Hart inn in the borough, and Chaucer relates that the Tabard inn at Southwark, of which little more than the name now remains, was the meeting place of his Canterbury Pilgrims on their road to the shrine of Thomas a Becket.

Among the quaintest of inn signs are those of "The Angel and Steelyards" symbolizing justice holding her scales; "The Bull and Bedpost" indicating a bull fastened to a stake to be baited; and "The Black Sack" showing an old leathern drinking cup, various other signs such as "the Cutlers' company," "The Elephant and Castle," the Glovers' company, "The Ram's Head;" the Bakers' company, "The Wheat Sheaf;" the Stationers' company, "The Angel and Trumpet," and so on for many more, while other signs are of interesting origin, such as "The Goat," which represents Wales. "The Crossed Keys" standing for the keys of St. Peter and the badge of the Pope, the "Feathers" descending from the Black Prince. "The Crown and the Anchor" has to do with the royal navy. "The White Horse" upholds the Hanoverian dynasty; "The Royal Oak" calls to mind the refuge of Charles II. from his pursuers, and "The Saracen's Head" dates from the Crusades; in fact the cognomen of practically every English inn will after a certain amount of research reveal an interesting, and more often than not historical "raison d'etre."

Cromwell Refused Quinine.

We owe to Sir Clements Markham the introduction of quinine yielding trees to British India and the consequent cheapening of the drug from a guinea to a half-penny an ounce in Calcutta, but the medical properties of chincona bark had long been known. They were discovered by the Jesuits, after whom it was called Jesuits' bark.

Concerning that, Sir Clements used to relate an odd coincidence. Oliver Cromwell died of tertian ague and quinine might have saved him. In the very newspaper in which his death was announced, the "Mercurius Politicus," there was an advertisement of Jesuits' bark for sale. But the name of Jesuit was abhorrent to the Puritans and hence Cromwell's medical advisers would have nothing to do with it.—London Chronicle.

Women in War Service.

The British Ministry of Munitions has taken over all expenses connected with the training school for women welders at Notting Hill Gate, organized by the women's service. This is on the condition that at least twenty women are in constant training. This arrangement is said to be giving complete satisfaction. About 200 skilled welders have been trained in this school.

A Woman Surgeon.

Dr. Markland enjoys the distinction of being the only woman surgeon in the British army. She is known as one of the foremost surgeons in the British isles, and will probably see active service soon.

Green Uniforms.

Green uniforms have replaced white ones among British hospital surgeons, and British hospitals are also being fitted in green, instead of white, because this color is easier on the eyes of patients.

Potterville, Pa.—"For a long time I was bothered with pains in my side, and was so weak from my trouble that I could not do any lifting or hard work of any kind. If I tried to straighten out when lying down it seemed as though something would tear loose. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored my health and I am quite myself once more."—Miss HAZEL CHUBBUCK, Potterville, Penn.

Thousands of women drag along from day to day in just such a miserable condition as was Mrs. Chubbuck, or suffering from displacements, irregularities, inflammation, ulceration, backache, sideache, headache, nervousness, or "the blues."

Such women should profit by Mrs. Chubbuck's experience and try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and find relief from their sufferings as she did.

For special suggestions in regard to your ailment write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its long experience is at your service.

Naval Captains.

The saying runs that as soon as a lieutenant is made a commander he begins to carry a stick, and as soon as a commander becomes a captain he "turns religious." For justification of the latter part of this assertion there exists the undoubted fact that naval captains are mostly serious minded men who give some thought to the greater things of life. Possibly their hours of loneliness may conduce to this frame of mind, though for the most part their leisure hours are given up to study of matters connected with their calling. One well known captain there was who used to hold prayer meetings, which any member of the ship's company could attend. "Remember, there are no rates to be picked up here," the captain would warn them before the meetings started, meaning that any one who came there hoping to curry favor and thus get promotion would be disappointed. And in this the captain was always as good as his word.—London Mail.

The First Fly Fishers.

Doubtless the reason why artificial flies were originally invented was because it was impossible to use the smaller and more delicate natural flies as baits on the hook. The first fly fisher cast his eyes about him in search of something that would answer as imitating the flies upon which the trout were feeding. Feathers were naturally the first materials thought of, and the old red cock's hackle was the first of all the artificial insects, the old, old Adam of them all. The breed has been increasing several hundred years and numbers 2,000 or more at the present day. Of salmon flies alone there are several hundred patterns. These belong to the lure order mostly, as do many of the large flies used for bass and trout. The little old red hackle remains a good fly to this day and is put upon bodies of many colors, peacock hurl being perhaps as well liked as anything. Red wool is favored by many Needed Railroads.

Efforts are being made to resume the construction of branch railways in the Lonets basin of southern Russia, where, during the last years before the war, the branch and connecting lines annually completed averaged twenty-five. The development of the mining industry in the basin was always closely dependent upon the railroads. In the present state of transportation of coal in carts is disorganized and costs of export increased 700 per cent.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

A ROYAL ADVENTURESS

By EDITH O. ROSS

There is an episode in French history that is a perfect story. There is no need for the author to draw upon his imagination or to supply romance. Nor did it take place so long ago either, for it occurred during the reign of Charles X., that king of France who was deposed in 1830.

His predecessor on the throne, Louis XVIII., was childless, and upon his death his younger brother, Charles, succeeded him, Charles' son, the Duke de Berry, being heir apparent. The duke married an Italian princess, who bore him a son, the Count de Chambord. The Duke de Berry was assassinated, leaving the child count heir to the throne. At the revolution of 1830 Charles abdicated in favor of his little grandson.

The Duke of Orleans succeeded in having himself proclaimed king of the French, taking the title of Louis Philippe. Charles X. and his family went to England. Charles was not a man of much force and made no effort to recover the throne for his grandson. His daughter-in-law was made of very different stuff. When she discovered that the ex-king would make no move to recover the throne of France for her son, the little Count de Chambord, she determined to take the matter into her own hands. And here begins one of the most remarkable stories of adventure enacted by royal personages.

Leaving her son in England with his grandfather, the duchess set out to stir the Legitimist party to revolution for the purpose of recovering the throne for the child. Crossing the channel, she descended through the northern part of France, and, taking a position in a province where the people were loyal to her cause, she arranged for a rising. She was advised that the time was not favorable, but would not be dissuaded. The rising took place, but was a lamentable failure. The duchess, instead of endeavoring to secure her safety, pushed on southward by land, eluding those emissaries of the government sent out to arrest her. Her adventures, dressed as a man, on the journey alone make a thrilling chapter. She succeeded in reaching the Mediterranean and from the coast of France gained her former home, Naples.

She remained some time in Italy, but was not idle. Having arranged for a rising in favor of her son in Marseilles, she went there, her landing being the signal for the revolution. Again she was doomed to disappointment. The people did not turn out in sufficient numbers to serve the purpose. The duchess was advised to leave France, but again refused.

At Grenoble she found refuge in the house of an adherent and was kept in seclusion. She was betrayed by a man who had entered her service for that very purpose. He led a party of Orleanists to the house where she was concealed, but there was some mistake in giving the signal for her arrest, and the party withdrew. Meanwhile the duchess was warned, and when they returned she and several of her adherents had betaken themselves to a small space behind a fireplace that they had planned to enter in case of necessity.

A thorough search failed to reveal their hiding place. The party of searchers finally went away, leaving a guard in the room behind the fireplace of which the duchess and her friends were concealed. Unfortunately the night was cold, and the guard built a fire on the hearth. For two nights the concealed party suffered heat and suffocation, the duchess' dress catching fire, but on the second morning, starved and burned, they gave up the struggle and surrendered.

Great was the rejoicing of the usurper king at getting the troublesome woman into his power. He shut her up in a chateau and employed a general of the army to command the guard, but more especially to watch her with a view to learning some indiscretion which would cost her the sympathy of the French people. It was not long before word was sent to Paris that the prisoner had sinned in a way that would ruin her and render her an ineffective supporter of her son's claims to the throne. It was evident to the duchess that King Louis Philippe was employing watchers who were to make sure that the evidence against her should not be turned awry. Indeed, the poor woman was treated in a most contemptible manner.

Meanwhile the king was congratulating himself that the duchess who had given him so much trouble and uneasiness was in a position from which she would be unable to escape. He redoubled those who were to watch her, or, rather, redoubled their watchfulness.

One day the cry of a child was heard in the duchess' apartment. She announced that she had been secretly married at the time she had returned to Italy to an Italian nobleman, giving his name and title. Her enemies refused to believe the statement till she produced the record of her marriage, made by a bishop of the Roman Catholic church who had performed the ceremony.

However, by having married one not of royal blood she had placed herself in a position that rendered her unable to carry on her fight for her son's claim to the throne of France. She returned to her home in Italy, where she was joined by her husband, and from that time lived the life of a private person.

MOTHER GAVE THIS DELICATE CHILD VINOL

And He Got Well and Strong. That's True

Monaca, Pa.—"My little boy, who is the youngest of three, was weak, nervous and tired all the time, so he was most unfit at school, and nothing seemed to help him. I learned of Vinol and gave it to him. It has restored his health and strength and he has gained in weight."—Mrs. Frederick Sommers, Monaca, Pa.

Vinol is a constitutional cod liver and iron remedy for delicate, weak, ailing children. Formula on every bottle, so you know what you are giving them. Children love it.

Ephemera: Slang.

A man in middle life recalls the slang of his childhood with some such indulgent wonder as that with which an elderly woman looks at the fashion plates of her early youth. "Snide," "cheese it," "straw Katy," "spoony," "chestnut," or even those of more recent coinage—"snap," "skiddoo," "twenty-three," "20 cents." They were artificially charged with meaning, and their effervescence is irretrievably gone. "Lemon" and "lobster" are nearly as flat. With disappearance of a certain kind of early Victorian pudery has gone the vogue of such terms as "inexpressibles" for trousers. Du Maurier's once famous novel has almost reached the vanishing point in the perspective of time, and we no longer speak of feet as "Trilbys." It is not safe, however, to prophesy that because a word comes from a proper name it will fade as fades the fame or notoriety of the person. We have forgotten what "Edgarism" is, but "Fletcherize" may yet make Fletcher immortal, even as "derrick" preserves in the dictionaries the name of a once famous hangman.—Robert P. Utter in Harper's Magazine.

Paper Uniforms for Germans.

The clothing of some German prisoners recently taken by the British was of such a peculiar appearance that the Englishmen decided to analyze it. The uniforms the officers wore were found to have been made of cloth woven from leather fibre, while the enlisted men wore uniforms made from paper fibre. The fabrics resemble the regulation army cloth used for uniforms.

The Cabbage Butterfly.

The most destructive enemy of the cabbage and related crops is the cabbage butterfly. This lays its eggs upon a cabbage leaf. The eggs hatch into green caterpillars, and these eat the leaves. In 1883, says the Journal of Heredity, an ichneumon fly was imported from Europe to keep the cabbage butterfly in check. The fly lays its eggs in the body of the caterpillar; the larvae which hatch from these eggs eat the caterpillar's insides, cut their way out through the empty skin and spin cocoons from which the flies emerge.

"It is interesting to note," adds the Journal of Heredity, "that the parasite is in turn preyed upon by a super-parasite, a little chalcis fly, 'and so on down ad infinitum,' no doubt."

Efficient Birds.

The pelican is commendably regular in his habits. The parent birds catch fish, and after eating their fill deposit the others in their pouches under their bills and carry them to their young. These pouches will hold from three to eight pounds of fish.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mr. Arthur Haines, Ashton Farm, Perley, Sask., writes: "Two years ago whooping cough was very bad in this part of the country; our eight months old boy caught it and had a very severe attack. A neighbor advised the use of Dr.Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and we gave it and nothing else with splendid results. When the older brother took the whooping cough we used this medicine promptly and prevented serious trouble, as the cough passed off in two or three days."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Plaintiff and Defendant

By OSCAR COX

Having received a note from my cousin, Belle Archer, that she wished to see me very particularly, I went to her house at once. I found her on the rear porch in a hammock reading a novel. She did not rise to receive me, nor did she lay down her novel, but pointed to a letter lying on a wicker table. I took it up and perused it. It read as follows:

Miss Arabella Archer:

Dear Madam—We beg to inform you that Mr. Edward Herbert Angell has retained our services, directing us to enter suit against you for the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) for breach of promise. We should be pleased before doing so to hear from you with reference to settling the matter out of court, thus avoiding both publicity and expense. We are, very respectfully, your obedient servants,

GYMCRACK, SPINNER & MUCHMORE.

I read this letter not only with surprise, but with a smile. I believe there have been cases of a man suing a woman for breach of promise, but they have been rare. Having finished reading the epistle, I looked up at Belle, but she seemed more interested in her book than what the letter involved for her. Nor was I able to engage her attention till she had finished the chapter she was reading. Then I said:

"I dare say you have deserved this."

"I dare say I have."

"You would not hesitate to jilt an angel?"

"That's what I am accused of having done."

"Perhaps if you send the plaintiff a letter expressing contrition he will withdraw the suit."

"Perhaps he would, but I'm not contrite."

I thought for a few minutes, then, changing my tone, said:

"I suppose it must be treated seriously. Do you wish me to act for you in the matter?"

"I do."

"What evidence has Mr. Angell that you have consented to marry him?"

"I don't know that he has any."

"You mean that you have been so reckless in your numerous flirtations that you have not kept track of the men you have accepted and those you have refused?"

"That's about it."

"What course shall I pursue in this case?"

"Oh, settle it as best you can. It won't beggar me to pay at all."

Considering that Miss Archer was worth several hundred thousand dollars this was true. Angell was worth a million.

"I don't suppose," I said, "the plaintiff wants money."

"No; he wants to squeeze me."

"What!"

"He wants to make me throw over my other suitors for him."

"Oh!"

"He thinks he can bluff me."

"And you don't propose to be bluffed."

"No, I don't. You just write his lawyers for me that I'll pay the amount sued for entire and don't consider it any compliment that the damages named are so small."

I wrote Messrs. Gymcrack, Spinner & Muchmore that my client would pay the amount claimed. In due time a reply came from them inclosing a typewritten apology that Miss Archer was to sign acknowledging that she had acted very dishonorably toward the plaintiff, humbly begged his forgiveness and "she will keep her contract with him." Belle signed it, but put the word "not" between the words "will" and "keep."

It did not appear to me that Mr. Angell was making much progress in this game of bluff. I was curious to know what his next move would be, for I did not see any move that he could make. He adopted the Fabian policy—he did nothing. When sufficient time for a reply had elapsed and I received nothing like a continuance of the fight nor a disposition to capitulate I made up my mind that it would be a case of attrition. I was convinced that the couple were in love with each other and one of the two would give in in time. Which would it be?

One day I received a note from Angell's attorneys to the effect that since their client was about to be married a return of his letters to Miss Archer would be appreciated. I took the note to Belle, and I saw by her expression when she read it that she was beaten.

"This caps the bluff's climax," I remarked to give her courage.

"That we don't know. He's just mean enough to marry somebody to spite me."

"What will you do next?"

"Please write the lawyers that I will deliver Mr. Angell's letters to him in person. But I shall expect an apology from him for putting this affair between us into the hands of lawyers."

"Humph!"

"What do you mean by that?"

"Nothing. I think your decision very sensible."

"Sensible? Of course it's sensible. What do I want with the letters of a man I don't intend to marry? And am I not entitled to an apology?"

"Certainly."

A meeting was arranged between plaintiff and defendant at my office. I was supposed to be present, but when Belle came in with a satchel full of letters I slid out a back door. I remained away an hour, and when I returned a grinning student in the office told me that after much billing and cooing the lovers had departed radiantly happy.

I wonder if Angell thought he was deceiving his attorney as Belle supposed she was deceiving me.

SELF DEFENSE

DEFEAT BACKACHE AND KIDNEY TROUBLE WITH ANURIC.

Many people in Canada have suffered from rheumatism and kidney trouble and have found Anuric to be the most successful remedy to overcome these painful and dangerous ailments.

The lucky people are those who have heeded Nature's warning signal in time to correct their trouble with that new discovery of Dr. Pierce's called "Anuric." You should promptly heed these warnings, some of which are dizzy spells, backache, irregularity of the urine or the painful twinges of rheumatism, sciatica or lumbago. To delay may make possible the dangerous forms of kidney disease, such as diabetes or stone in the bladder.

To overcome these distressing conditions you should take plenty of exercise in the open air, avoid a heavy meat diet, drink freely of water and at each meal take Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets (double strength). You will, in a short time, find that you are one of the firm indorsers of An-u-ric, as are many of your neighbors.

Send Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., or Bridgeburg, Ont., 10c for trial pkg.

St. Catharines, Ont.—For several years I suffered with gravel and with uric acid, causing rheumatic pains. Nothing ever helped me until I commenced to take 'Anuric,' and the first thing I noticed was that the gravel had disappeared and has never made a reappearance. My general health has improved and I have a better nerve condition and my eyesight seems better, too. I used to have such dizzy spells at times I thought I would faint, but these no longer trouble me. My only regret is that I did not know of Anuric before."—Mrs. H. Marjoram, 124 Albert St.

Taking to The Boats

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1[illegible] by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

One hour after noon on the twelfth day of February, 1862, the brig Gull, bound from Liverpool to the Cape of Good Hope, and having forty-eight souls aboard, burned to the water's edge and sank, leaving us 350 miles off the African coast.

There was some confusion, of course, when we took to the boats, but we got away from the brig in good shape, with no one lost or hurt and with water and provisions enough to do us for a week. We were in charge of the boatswain, and, but for a terrible accident, I know we should have pulled through without mishap or suffering. He was an oldish man, a good sailor, and he had authority over all in the boat. Besides the crew, there were three young men and a woman and a girl. The woman was the girl's aunt.

It had come 9 o'clock or later, and some of the men were asleep, when the boatswain went forward and stood on the thwart with his arm around the mast to steady himself. I think he was looking about to see if he could find anything of the other boats. Just how it happened no one could tell, though three of us had our eyes on him when he suddenly pitched overboard. We were still pitching briskly about and perhaps it was a sharp drive of the boat which sent him to his death. If he rose to the surface he did not call out. He simply went right out of sight and never even called on.

Little or nothing was said that night as to who should command the boat, but morning had hardly dawned when there was a row about it. Being a lad not yet out of my apprenticeship, I was of course out of the question, but each of the other three sailors was determined to act as captain. From words they came to blows, and another horror fell upon us. The three young men were driven into the quarrel, and the six had a savage fight with such weapons as could be laid hold of. It was a dead calm, with the sea quieted down, and a couple of sharks were lying off our port quarter. No one had seen them, nor did any one see them until two of the young men were knocked overboard. It wasn't five seconds before both were seized and drawn under. This horrid climax to the row cooled the men off at once.

One of the sailors had been stabbed in the back, another badly hurt about the head, and the third young Englishman had his right arm broken.

The sailor who had been stabbed took command of the boat, and when things were settled down breakfast was served out. We had not to exceed two gallons of water and a dozen biscuits, and the day was hot and not a breath of air stirring.

The aunt, as I now heard called Mrs. Morton, took very sick, and we were terrified at our helplessness. She was soon in a high fever and raving.

About 9 o'clock the aunt sank into a stupor from which she never awakened, and all of us slept for some time. We were finally awakened by a wounded sailor getting up and calling for water. In his torment he caught sight of the man in the bow, and he rushed forward and seized him. I ran to pull him off, but before I could reach him both had gone overboard. The two other sailors sat up, asked me what happened and then fell back and slumbered as soundly as before.

It was sunrise when the sailors awoke. With a leader, these men would have suffered and endured for a week and made no complaint. They no sooner saw that the calm still continued than they began cursing and threatening, and they looked at the girl so that she cowered in terror. Presently they went forward and sat close together and talked in whispers, and the girl crept over to me and said:

"I know what they are planning; they intend to kill me!"

I gave her one of the knives and told her I would protect her to the last. The men talked for an hour or so and then lay down and went to sleep again.

I was half mad with hunger and thirst by that time, and I knew the poor girl was, if anything, worse off. We talked in low tones of the good things we had eaten and the springs we had drunk from, and we kept our heads constantly wet with the salt water to alleviate our thirst as far as it could. At 4 o'clock or soon after the men awoke and called to me. They wanted to kill the girl. I reasoned with them and told two or three deliberate falsehoods and finally prevailed upon them to wait another day. I felt they would do so and slept soundly that night. The sun came up next morning the same ball of fire, and any sailor could have told that the calm would last another day. What happened along toward noon I can never distinctly remember, for I had little reason left. There must have been a fight, but I remember none of the details. It is like trying to recall a dream of years ago. What I can remember back to was waking up in the cabin of the German steamer Bergen, very ill and very weak. She had picked up our boat the day before. In it were two living skeletons—the girl and I. We were alone, and there were two blood stained knives in the bottom of the boat to deepen the mystery. The girl pulled through as well as myself, but there was no after romance. She thanked me over and over again with tears in her eyes, but there was no love. She was a lady bred and born, and I was only a poor sailor lad. [illegible]

Military Orders.

The story goes that a raw battalion of rough backwoodsmen, who had "volunteered," once joined General Grant. He admired their fine physique, but distrusted the capacity of their uncouth commander to handle troops promptly and efficiently in the field, so he said: "Colonel, I want to see your men at work. Call them to attention and order them to march with shouldered arms in close column to the left flank." Without a moment's itation the colonel yelled to his fellow ruffians: "Boys, look wild thar! Make ready to thicken and go left endways! Tote yer guns! Git!" The maneuver proved a brilliant success, and the self elected colonel was forthwith officially commissioned.—Manchester Guardian.

Origin of "Hoosier."

While the derivation of the word Indiana from Indian is apparent, the origin of the word Hoosier applied to an inhabitant of that state is not regarded as entirely clear. The theory which has gained the greatest acceptance is that it received its present form from the vernacular rendering of the query, "Who's yer?" instead of "Who are you?" when a stranger appeared at the door of a frontier cabin. For a long time the word Hoosier was regarded as implying a reflection on the person to whom it applied, but of recent years it has found a recognised place in good literature.

National Service.

Out of 6,000 students who passed through a course of training, under the auspices of the Education Committee of the London County Council, in order to qualify for entry into munition factories, 5,750 are now employed on work of national importance.

BLIGHTY.

Comes From Ancient Indian Word "Wilayaut."

Canadians have always recognized the quality of sportsmanship as being an essential part of the fighting man. The German press used to explain away such remarkable events as Mons, when the British under terrific bombardment, with nothing but their rifle fire, held off a brigade of Prussian Guards, as being due to the Englishman's aptitude for hunting. But nowhere has the shikar or chase been practised by races more consistently than from ancient times in India. How many realize that everyday words like khaki, gymkhana, puttee, nummah (the felt saddle that takes the place of a saddle-cloth), and the Jodhpur breeches used by polo players, all had their origin in India, where pig-sticking and polo are considered, from ancient times, to be ideal training for cavalry officers.

In passing let us note 'two other Indian words that the war has made familiar. The famous Blighty-wound of the British Tommy has never been satisfactorily explained this side of the Atlantic. Bilayaut is the vernacular word for Europe, and is derived from the Urdu or north-Indian word Wilayaut, which in turn had its origin with the Arabis Wilayat, meaning a province. In the mouth of Tommy Atkins it readily corrupted to "Blighty." Now the sentimental hope of every English soldier is to return, after his service, to Blighty or England. When the war broke out more than a division of General French's "contemptible little army" was made up of time-expired soldiers, who were thus cheated out of their well-earned return to Blighty. And soon they were to learn that nothing less than a serious wound—a Blighty wound—gave them their heart's desire. The other word is now fortunately less used than when the first trench battles were fought after the Marne. At Dum-Dum, the arsenal in India, it was found necessary to invent a bullet that would stop Kipling's Fuzzy-wuzzy in the Sudan, or the charge of a lot of ghazis or fanatics gone amuck on the north-west frontier of India-Asia.

Sport and the chase, where the modern automatic rifle is not known, are the backgrounds for India's soldiers. An officer once told me how his Gurkha orderly went out after a man-eater armed only with his kukri. He tracked the tiger as only certain Indian tribes can, and forced the beast to spring at him. While it was in the air he stooped, and with his keen blade slit it open from throat to tail. There is no space left to tell of the famous deeds of these troops. But in 1857, when the mutineers were besieging Delhi, the loyal Guide Corps, three troops of cavalry and six companies of infantry, made a forced march from the Afghan frontier to Delhi, a distance of 580 miles in twenty-two days, during which they turned off the road twelve miles one night to attack a force of the enemy. This record has never been equalled by any modern body of men. At the relief of Peking, according to Sir Claude MacDonald, the first of the Allied regiments to enter the Legation quarter was the 7th Rajputs, closely followed by the 1st Sikhs. Accustomed to personal, hand-to-hand conflict, to charging home in the open with the bayonet and the lance, these troops were forced suddenly to adapt themselves to the new western trench warfare. They knew nothing of gas, of overwhelming shell fire, of air bombardments, and, together with the cold, they were seriously handicapped. But in Egypt, when they repelled the attack on the Suez Canal, in Mesopotamia, in East Africa, and at Gallipoli they have proved their mettle. And, in conclusion, there is no more magnanimous action on the part of the British during the present war, than the tardy recognition of Indian bravery by the award of the coveted Victoria Cross. Hitherto it was limited to European regiments, but a Pathan infantryman first won it in 1914, and since then it has been awarded to other Indian soldiers. At last the brave men of East and West have stood side by side.

His Happiest Day.

We have always insisted untiringly that every human word or action constitutes a point of view. We are confirmed in this by reading an answer to a question set to some smaller Eton boys some thirty-five years ago by Dr. Lyttleton. The question, which he frankly admits was intended to give scope to the greatest ignoramus amongst them, was "What has been the happiest day of your life?" The answer Dr. Lyttleton peculiarly treasured was that of a boy, positively determined to give satisfaction, who replied, "My baptism."

Sarcasm Fell Flat.

A good story is being told of Lord Bowen by Mr. Austin Dobson in his recently published "Bookman's Budget." The judge was one day summing up a case, and he was caustic. "If, gentlemen," he said to the jury, you think it likely that the prisoner was merely indulging an amiable fancy for midnight exercise on his neighbor's roof; if you think it was kindly consideration for that neighbor which led him to take off his boots, and leave them behind him before descending into the house; and if you believe that it was the innocent curiosity of the connoisseur which brought him to the silver pantry and caused him to borrow the teapot, then, gentlemen, you will acquit the prisoner." To the judge's dismay the jury did acquit the prisoner, and that instantly. The judge had made out too good a case, and the jury had no idea that his remarks were "intended sarcastic."

PIMPLES AND RUNNING SORES

Would Hold Head Down Face Was Such a Sight

Pimples are caused by the blood being out of order. Those festering and running sores appear on the forehead, on the nose, on the chin and other parts of the body, and although they are not a dangerous trouble they are very unsightly to both you and your friends.

There is only one way to get rid of this obnoxious skin trouble, and this is by giving the blood a thorough cleansing by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters.

This sterling remedy has been on the market for over 40 years, during which time we have received thousands of testimonials as to its curative powers over all skin diseases.

Mrs. Victor G. Fry, North Battleford, Sask., writes: "I used Burdock Blood Bitters when I was about eighteen. I was so bad with pimples and running sores, that when I went down town, I would hold my head down when I would see anyone coming, my face was such a sight. I got two bottles, and my face began to clear, so I kept on until I had a beautiful complexion. I have recommended it to everyone who is in a run-down condition, as it builds up the blood, and when the blood is A1 the face is clear."

The Lesser Evil.

A variation of the familiar "grind" on the sermon as an antidote for sleeplessness is this: Lord Rosebery remarked to Dr. Creighton that at times he could not sleep. The bishop replied, "I never suffer from sleeplessness, for whenever I feel weary I begin to read a sermon, and I am off in a few seconds." "Ah, my lord," rejoined Lord Rosebery, "of two evils I will choose the least. Much rather would I go without sleep than read a sermon."

Watches, When First Used In Fifteenth Century, Were Portable Clocks

THE best equipped army that ever took the field, as the British army has often been styled, is remarkably well equipped in one respect, and that is in the matter of watches. The wrist watch, which at first only with great difficulty established itself as a possibility for men, has long since swept all before it, and, with or without a luminous face, is nowadays regarded as almost an essential part of the soldier's outfit. Such a widespread use has, of course, been rendered possible only by the extraordinary progress which has been made in watchmaking in comparatively recent years. Thirty or forty years ago, the watch was still a prized possession, and its possession almost amounted to a class distinction. And yet the world had known of and used watches for many centuries. They were antedated, it is true, by clocks, but the moment that Pope Sylvester, in A.D. 996, constructed "the first clock," as he is credited with having done, watches became inevitable.

It was not, however, until the fifteenth century that watches definitely came into being. At first, they were really no more than portable clocks, and, being generally too large to be carried in the pocket, it became the fashion to suspend them by a chain or cord from the girdle. No sooner was the fashion set in motion, however, than the watchmaker began to devote himself to the matter, and to evolve new styles in watches. And so, amongst others, were evolved the globular timepieces, which came to be known as Nuremberg eggs, for the first watches, like the first clocks, were made in Germany. Then came the wonderful watches of the sixteenth century, when the watchmakers simply reveled in inventiveness, and outdid each other in the eccentricity and beauty of their designs. Nothing came amiss to them as a case for their watches, octagonal jewels, crosses, purses, little books, dogs, and shells, and, in almost every case, finely engraved. They were all in great demand amongst great ladies and great gentlemen, and Queen Elizabeth, never averse to receiving presents, was always particularly gratified when a gift took the form of a jeweled watch.

Gradually, as time went on, the watch began to assume the form it has to-day. The chain or cord from the girdle had disappeared, and the "watch pocket," in some form or another, began to appear. Meanwhile, the watch had been immeasurably improved in the matter of reliability. Reliable timepieces were greatly needed for finding longitude at sea, such as did not mind the rolling or pitching of the boat, motions which would so decisively put the grandfather clock out of action. Rewards were offered by government authorities, and, as the result, came the chronometer, which was so perfected in the early part of the nineteenth century that it has undergone little change in form since. Having reached this state of perfection, the only thing left for the watch to do was to cheapen itself. It was still a very exclusive instrument, and, clothed as it invariably was in precious metals, it never was popular, in the literal meaning of that term. There was little change in this respect until the invention of watchmaking machinery. This opened the way to the present almost unlimited possibilities in the way of cheapness, and placed watches, in the matter of indispensability, in an impregnable position.

Few people have any idea of the degree of accuracy which is obtained and attainable by the modern watch. The standard of accuracy set at the Kew Observatory, in England, where watches are officially tested, must seem remarkable to the man who finds it necessary to set his watch daily. There, if a watch would get an "A certificate," the average daily departure from the mean going rate must not exceed two seconds, except in certain specified circumstances, when it must not be more than five seconds. It must keep this up for forty-five days, and it must not mind changes of temperature, or be disturbed by any change of position.

Stevenson Improved.

Robert Louis Stevenson composed a couplet years ago which has been quoted perhaps millions of times and is familiar to most people. It runs:

"The world is so full of a number of things,
I am sure we should all be as happy as kings."

Just now kings are not very happy persons, for several of them are in hot water and troubled about many things. Margaret Widdemer, an author, is credited with the clever paraphrase of Stevenson's couplet, which means more than the original to-day. It is:

"The world is so full of a number of things,
I am sure that is what is the matter with things."

Dislike Blows.

The Italians regard a blow, even in play, as rough and brutal, and moreover unwise, seeing that it inspires ill-will and revenge. Children in Italy are educated without blows—the rod is there an instrument of instruction; they are early taught to regard blows as unworthy of Christians.

The Garter.

The dark-blue ribbon now worn by the Knights of the Garter was changed to its present shade from one much lighter in tone in the year 1622. The pictures of Charles the First by Vandyke always show the lighter shade.

The Queen Bee.

The queen is always at the mercy of the bees and is a slave instead of a ruler.

DR. J. T. EDWARDS NOW ENDORSES IT

Prominent Georgia Physician Recommends Tanlac to His Patients

Dr. J. T. Edwards, of Fayettville Ga., one of the best-known members of the medical profession in the state of Georgia, makes a statement that will undoubtedly produce a profound impression throughout America.

"In my thirty years of active practice as a licensed physician in the State of Georgia," says Dr. Edwards, "I have never seen anything to equal Tanlac as a medicine to produce results. I hear people on all sides telling of the benefits they have derived from its use.

"Tanlac is simply the talk of my town. I have no hesitancy in recommending the medicine; and as a matter of fact, I am prescribing it for my patients almost every day.

"Only a few days ago a well-known woman of Fayetteville came to me and told me about the remarkable relief her daughter had gained from the use of this medicine. She said her daughter had been confined to her bed for three years with what had been pronounced pellagra, and that after using Tanlac for a short time she was able to be about, and was on the road to recovery.

'But this is only one instance. People in all walks of life in and around our little city are giving similar indorsements to the medicine. Seldom a day passes that some one does not come to me and say something about the good results they are getting from the use of Tanlac.

"Several unusual gains in weight have been reported by some of our most prominent people, and I have treated some stubborn cases of indigestion, catarrhal conditions, and organic disorders and secured splendid results with Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd.

Teutons Must Recognize Rights of Nationalities

which had lost it during the war, Lloyd George said it was obvious that any scheme of conquest and annexations could be perpetrated within the literal interpretation of such a pledge.

He continued: "We must know what is meant, for equality of right amongst nations, small as well as great, is one of the fundamental issues this country and her allies are fighting to establish."

Reparation for Belgian towns and villages and their inhabitants, he asserted, had been repudiated emphatically by the Central Powers and the rest of the so-called offers were almost entirely a refusal of all concessions.

On one point only were they clear: Under no corcumstances would Germany's demand for the restoration of the whole of her colonies be departed from. All principles of self-determination vanished.

The Premier declared that unless treaties were to be upheld it was obvious that no treaty of peace would be worth the paper on which it was written.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash the poisons and toxins from system before putting more food into stomach.

Says inside-bathing makes anyone look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases, and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream, through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gases, and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels; thus cleansing, sweetening, and refreshing the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on inside bathing.

A Curious Gift.

Chequers, one of the great mansions of England, itself only a few miles from Disraeli's house, at Hughenden has been given, by its owner, to the British nation, as a county home for future prime ministers. The beautiful old house stands amidst the Chiltern hills, and in its parks are the remains of the famous castle reputed to have been the stronghold of Cymbelene and the birthplace of Caractacus. One of the most interesting features of the deed of gift is, however, the provision that if any prime minister does not wish to occupy it, it shall be offered for the time being, in turn, to the chancellor of the exchequer, the foreign minister, the American ambassador, the speaker of the House of Commons, the minister of agriculture, the first lord of the admiralty, the secretary of state for war, and the first commisisoner of works.

Using Pronouns.

Writing amusingly of the pronouns he, she, and it, Mr. E. V. Lucas says that we ought not to refer to Germany as "she." Germany, he says, is "not a lady, but a big bad man." Locomotives, it seems, share with ships the feminine gender, as "She's late to-day." So with motor cars, "Have you ever seen a car take a hill better than she does?" An airplane, however, in Mr. Lucas' experience, is always referred to as "it." The sun, of course, is "he," and the moon "she." "A friend tells me," the essayist concludes, "that at Charterhouse, for some unknown reason, cake is 'he.' 'I'll have another slice of "he," ' says the hungry or greedy Carthusian, to the despair of his instructor in grammar."

Control of Shipping.

The growing trend towards centralization of control in British shipping is illustrated by the fact that 61 companies, each owning more than 50,000 gross tons of ships, own between them more than 2,000 vessels, representing a tonnage of 12,000,000 gross tons, while Lloyd's register gives the total tonnage of the British mercantile marine at only 18,825,356 gross tons.

For a Rainy Day.

It is said that the ex-Czar of Russia still has on deposit in the Bank of England £35,000,000, placed there years ago in provision for the rainy day which now has come.

LLOYD GEORGE DEFINES THE WAR OBJECTIVES OF BRITISH PEOPLE

"Unless international right is recognised by insistence on payment for injury done in defiance of its canons it can never be a reality."

"The adoption of a democratic constitution by Germany would be the most convincing evidence that the old spirit of military domination was dead, but that is a question for the German people to decide."

"To turn Germany aside from schemes of military domination to devote her strength to beneficent tasks."

"Government with the consent of the governed must be the basis of any territorial settlement."

"An independent Poland, comprising all genuinely Polish elements who desire to participate, is an urgent necessity for the stability of western Europe."

"Complete restoration of the political, territorial, and economic independence of Belgium, and such reparation as could be made for the devastation of its towns and provinces."

"We mean to stand by the French democracy to the death in the demand the French make for a reconsideration of the great wrong of 1871 when Alsace-Lorraine was torn away from them."

"The restoration of Serbia, Montenegro, and the occupied parts of France, Italy, and Roumania. The complete withdrawal of alien armies and reparation for injustice done is the fundamental condition of a permanent peace."

"We regard as vital the legitimate claims of the Italians for union with those of their own race and tongue."

"We mean to press that justice be done to the men of Roumanian blood and speech in their legitimate aspirations."

"Genuine self-government on true democratic principles to those Austro-Hungarian nationalities who have long desired it."

"Arabia, Armenia, Mesopotamia, Syria, and Palestine are entitled to recognition of their separate national conditions."

"Wishes and interests of native inhabitants of German colonies must be primarily regarded at peace conference."

"Internationalisation of the passage from the Mediterranean to the Black Sea."

HEART WAS BAD . NERVES ALL GONE

Very important it is in this age to have a clear cool head, a strong heart and steady nerves.

Too much rush and bustle, work and worry, fall to the lot of women attending to their household duties and social obligations. The constant strain under which they continue day in and day out will soon shatter the strongest system. Before long the heart gets weak, flutters and palpitates, the nerves become unstrung, you start at the least sound, the pulse becomes weak and irregular, then finally comes physical breakdown or nervous prostration.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the remedy you require to strengthen your heart and steady your nerves.

Mrs. Jackson, 457 Bolivar St., Peterborough, Ont., writes: "Fifteen years ago I was so bad with my heart I could not walk across the house, my nerves were literally all gone, and I was frightened at my shadow. I commenced to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and was soon able to do my own work. I have told dozens of people about them, some as bad as I was, and to-day they are also doing their own work. If more people would take them there would not be so many weak hearts."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BRITISH AVIATORS SCORE MANY HITS IN RAIDS

Explosions Follow the Dropping of Bombs on German Positions---Impressive Service Held in French Church For Dead Americans---Artillery Activity is Reported on the Western Front.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 7.—British aviators have dropped large quantities of bombs on the Ramegnies Chin Airdrome, in Belgium, and in the vicinity of Metz, Lorraine. Bombs were dropped on the railroad station at Conflans, on the sidings northwest of Metz and on the Courcelles Station, southeast of Metz, last night. Many hits were secured. An explosion and a fire were caused at Conflans.

(By J. W. Pegler)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Jan. 6—In the simple little church of the village where Joan of Arc was born, France's plain people knelt in earnest prayer for the souls of Americans who have died for France. Scores of wooden-shoed peasants they were—women, children, old men, poilus, and even a few fur-coated aristocrats, who came to kneel beside the simple folk, united in prayer as France is united in war, for right. It was at Domremy, the birthplace of Joan of Arc—in the very church itself where she was baptized—that impressive service was held. The worshippers, rich and poor, fighting man and priest, knelt before the hallowed doorway in the snow. There they could peer through and within the crumbling portals see the Stars and Stripes and the beloved French Tricolor entwined above the simple altar. After this consecration of the spirit and invocation to Saint Joan of Arc herself, most of the worshippers visited Joan of Arc's home—a decaying little stone house surrounded by pines—richly festooned in snow. The Village Mayor, himself, conducted the visiting French officials and American correspondents to the centre of a small stone bridge spanning the [illegible] there pointed to the spot on the distant hill where Joan of Arc had her divine vision.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 7.—The Entente Allies having failed to take advantage of the period of ten days of grace, have, by their silence, rejected the programme of peace without annexations and indemnities, the Fremdenblatt of Vienna declares. The Central Powers no longer are bound to the principles they set up for a general peace. The Entente Powers alone, it says, now must bear the responsibility for the continuance of the war.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 7.—There was occasional hostile artillery activity southeast of Messines, Flanders, says to-day's official report.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 7.—When the delegates of the Central Powers arrived at Brest Litovsk to resume peace negotiations they found no Russian delegates there, according to a Vienna despatch to Zurich, forwarded by the Exchange Telegraph Company. All that awaited them was a telegram from the Russians asking for a transfer of the negotiations to Stockholm.

Vocational Training For Returned Men

On Wednesday, 16th of January, Major F. A. Good, Chief Officer for Vocational Training for men returned from service, will be in Peterborough, and may be consulted at the Empress Hotel.

Men who are looking into the proposition to make a change in occupation or who may be from casualties unfitted to follow the occupation as before service, should arrange to take the matter up with Capt. Good. He will be accompanied by Major Ranfall, Medical Officer for the Board, who will be glad to afford service to any who wish to consult with him on personal matters connected with disabilities, etc.

Remember the date, Wednesday, January 16th, and at the Empress Hotel, Peterborough.

Nursing Sister Mowry Home On Leave Of Fourteen Days Experienced 31 Air Raids

Nursing Sister Bertha Mowry, 588 Charlotte street, who has been on active service with the Royal Army Medical Corps for the past two years, arrived unexpectedly in the city this morning to spend a 14 days' leave which she obtained by serving on transport duty on the Metagama on her trip to and from Canada.

Sister Mowry enlisted in January, 1916, with the Queen's Reinforcements for Cairo, but was placed on duty in Belgium and France, where she spent 18 months, 9 of which were under canvas. While on duty in No. 3 Canadian Clearing Station, which is just seven miles from Ypres, one of the buildings of the Red Cross was deliberately bombed by the Huns. Miss Mowry's description of this incident is a "hurried departure into dugouts which are built near each hospital for the safety of the inmates." During the bombardment, which lasted only 3 minutes, 60 casualties were reported.

Air Raids.

Since July Miss Mowry has experienced 30 hostile air raids, during which, on one occasion an incendiary bomb was dropped between the wards in which Miss Mowry was working. The damage done this time amounted to one large hole in the building.

German Prisoners.

Miss Mowry's work was mostly amongst wounded Huns, Englishmen and Australian and New Zealanders, with very little experience with Canadians. The German prisoners are practically all American-Germans who speak English perfectly, none of whom displayed the air of dejection so often attributed to them in reports. "All," she said, "were happy, well fed, comfortably clothed and confident of ultimate German victory.

Interesting Souvenirs.

Miss Mowry brings with her some interesting souvenirs from the front, including Hun helmets, privates' caps, shells, also a German sand-bag, made from valuable tapestry, evidently taken from a French chateau.

The Voyage Out.

The voyage out was made with very little excitement, a strong convoy having been provided. About 3,000 passengers came, half of whom were military. Sister Mowry expects to return to the front in 14 days.

War Veterans Meet To-night

All members of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association are reminded of the general meeting in the recreations room of the armouries at 8 o'clock to-night, when the new officers will be installed. As this is the first meeting that has been held for several weeks it is hoped that there will be a large attendance.

$45,000 FIRE AT PETERBORO' CANOE FACTORY SUNDAY A.M.

Cause Unknown But May Have Originated From Motor—Fire Department Saved Annex Shops

HAD GREAT HEADWAY

The main building of the Peterborough Canoe Company on Water street was totally destroyed by fire on Sunday morning. The loss is estimated at $45,000, made up as follows: $20,000 to the building, $20,000 to the machinery and $5,000 to the stock.

Mr. Walter Barlow, night porter at the Empress Hotel, discovered the fire about 6.25 o'clock and immediately sent in an alarm. When Chief Grange and his brigade arrived the flames, which apparently had been under way for some time, were sweeping through the central shop and were issuing in long tongues through the roof. The firemen quickly laid six lines of hose from Water and George street hydrants, and Chief Grange directed the attack to confine the blaze to the main building fronting on Water sareet. This section was then hopelessly lost. When the double doors on the west side fell into the street, a gust of flame shot half way across the street into the faces of the men stationed on that side. So intense was the heat that it melted the rear windows of the Grand Opera House on the the opposite side of the street. Chief Grange's plans were entirely successful. The flames were smothered as they reached out to the new wing, which was saved, together with the paint shop, show rooms, office and the piles of lumber nearby. The firemen continued their fight until late in the morning, with a brief intermission during which they were served in pairs with hot coffee from the Empress about 10 o'clock.

Citizens Helped.

Chief Grange stated to-day that he was indebted to many citizens for their effective services voluntarily rendered. They helped materially in moving hose, canoes and lumber; without their assistance the Department would have been seriously hampered and the situation might have been extremely grave. Ex-Firemen Tennyson and Plouffe, Police Sergeant Kidd and Constable Dainnard also did splendid work.

Cause Unknown.

The origin of the fire is unknown, but it is believed to have been located at a motor in the central shop. The blaze was centred at that point when first discovered. Chief Grange expressed the opinion that it was caused by spontaneous combustion or by defective wiring in the basement. The loss is practically covered by insurance.

Sixty-five Employees.

A serious aspect of the disaster is its industrial effect. The Peterborough Canoe Company had 65 employees on its payroll and was busily engaged in the manufacture of the famous Peterborough canoes.

The east wing was used for the making of shell boxes. Although it was saved, the work was dependent upon the sawing and planing carried on in the main shop, which was reduced to an ugly tangle of wrecked machinery, tumbled walls and roof and charred timbers. The canoe models, which were kept on the second storey, were also destroyed.

Mr. W. A. Richardson, secretary-treasurer of the company, stated to-day that he was unable to ascribe the cause of the fire. The wiring had been renewed not long ago. The building will be rebuilt, it is understood, but a decision to that effect had not been made to-day owing to the many other questions demanding immediate attention. Twelve of the employees lost all their tools.

STATEMENT APPROVED

Lloyd George's Expression of Britain's War Aims is Hailed by the British Press as Eminently Satisfactory

AN IMPORTANT SERVICE

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Jan. 7.—If the country's opinion, as is probable in the present case, can be judged by the expressions in the London press, it may be said that never before has Premier Lloyd George won such universal approval as is given to his statement of Saturday concerning Great Britain's war aims. It is recognized that there will be divergence of opinion on the details like economical terms of settlement and the disposition of Germany's African colonies, but in all essentials his statement is hailed as eminently satisfactory, and the Premier is declared to have performed a most important service to the country.

All interest now is focussed on the question as to how the statement will be received in Germany, Austria-Hungary and not least, in Russia, but as yet there is nothing to satisfy this anxious curiosity.

With the exception only of the bellicose Morning Post, which however, is not opposed to the Premier's thesis, the morning newspapers of London join in the chorus of approval. The Times declares it is the most important state document since the declaration of war. It commends the moderation of the statement which, however, it thinks may disconcert some tried friends and allies and even lend itself to enemy misrepresentation.

CHICAGO HIT BY BLIZZARD

Canadian Press Despatch:

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—Chicago began to dig itself out of the drifts to-day after one of the worst blizzards in its history. The wind, which blew from forty to sixty miles an hour during twenty-four hours, abated this morning. Everywhere were evidences of the storm. There was scarcely a block in the outlying district without its stalled automobile, hood high in the snow, waiting to be shovelled out. The steamer Missouri, plying between Chicago and Milwaukee, held fast in the ice, and buffeted by the gale, limped into this port this morning like some stray iceberg. It was coated with ice and the crew, after many cruel and sleepless hours, came out of her like Esquimaux emerging from their igloos. One really serious aspect of the situation was the delay in hauling fuel to the factories which have been leading a hand-to-mouth existence in the matter of coal.

JOINT ALLIED STATEMENT OF WAR AIMS EXPECTED

Lloyd George's Epochal Speech on Saturday Was Merely a Preliminary to a Campaign of Political Warfare Against German Imperialism.

WILL HOLD CONFERENCE

(By Ed. L. Keen.)
(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Jan. 7.—The joint allied statement of war aims urged by President Wilson is impending. It is to be the great attack of the winter's political drive against German imperialism.

Premier Lloyd George's epochal speech Saturday outlining Britain's aims was merely preparatory fire. From the highest sources to-day the United Press learns this is the plan of the winter campaign by the allies—a political campaign to reach Germany's people, which in its far-reaching scope equals purely physical endeavours of the allied armies to make Germany democratic. An early conference of all Allied Prime Ministers was hinted at in official circles to-day. Such a meeting will draft the demands of democracy against autocracy. It will serve to make plain to the world that the allied battle is one of right, that no selfish considerations move them in their determination forever to remove the menace of Prussianism.

More than that it will carry to Russia's millions, now bitterly aware of German duplicity through the Brest-Litovsk farce, the full reiterated pledge of the allied democracy.

NO DELAY IN THE UNITED STATES' WAR PREPARATIONS

Although American Officials Believe That Belligerents Are Drawing Closer Together, War Plans Are Being Carried Out Rapidly

A DIPLOMATIC FIGHT

(By Carl D. Groat.)
(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.))

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. — America will proceed with her war work without a thought that peace may be drawing nearer.

Secretary of War Baker and other officials held to-day that there must be no letting down in the preparations. Peace, they said, is now up to Germany.

Lloyd George has stated the allied terms, and insofar as unofficial expressions here go, these are America's terms, too. If Germany wants to reform herself and accept these terms, the way is open. But if she wants to fight on, the allies and America are fully aware and ready for bloody sacrifices involved, all of the allies agree. They added that it would be little short of treasonable and foolhardy for this nation to slow up now, merely because of a growing conviction that the allies and the Teutons are getting more nearly together through a process of unofficial statements of peace terms. True, the authorities here, including men high in military councils, do believe that peace is coming up more rapidly than is the general belief, but if they had their way wholly, there would not even be a statement of war aims. Instead, there would be a policy of blood and iron, which would ultimately make the German lines crumble and the Kaiser beg for peace.

Some military men, however, are inclined to feel that already the war is shifting into diplomatic fields, that by the mere fact of a statement of terms from both sides, a desire for peace is manifest which sows seed for actual negotiations. Not that they think Germany is going to accept Lloyd George's terms right away, but they believe that Germany now knows that she cannot win and is willing, therefore, to go far to get an adjustment. One neutral diplomatic sized up the situation to-day as a case of peace in three to six months, or a war of three or four years. That may be said to be a more or less prevalent opinion here, though these who venture into prophecy vary in their maximum and minimum figures considerably. The thought here is that Lloyd George cleverly offset the German propaganda by disclaiming any intent to trush the German people, while at the same time he had a distinct bid for a separate Austrian peace and skilfully manoeuvred to draw the Russians back into the allied fold.

Dairymen's Convention

The 41st annual convention of the Dairymen's Association of Eastern Ontario will be held in Perth on Thursday and Friday of this week. Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P., who is a director of the Association, will attend. An interesting programme has been arranged for the occasion.

GUNNER KENYON WOUNDED

Mr. George Kenyon, 199 Sherbrooke street, has received official word that his son, Gunner Kingsley Kenyon, has been wounded. The report states that Gunner Kenyon received gunshot wound in the head on December 26th.

NO DOWN-HEARTED SOLDIERS IN THE LOCAL COMPANY

Men of "E" Company of the 1st Eastern Ontario Regiment Are Cheerfully Beginning to Learn the Rudiments of a Soldiers' Life

TO OPEN A CANTEEN

"E" Company of the 1st E. O. R. at the Armouries, has a strength of fifty-two to-day, and the number will be augmented considerably during the next few days. Peterborough's new soldiers have already begun to learn the ropes of their new life and are in the best of spirits, ready to do anything they are called upon to do, and to learn their work as quickly as possible.

The soldier's day begins at 6 o'clock, when the bugler sounds the revielle. Breakfast is at 7 o'clock, and the morning drill begins at eight o'clock. At 12 o'clock comes the dinner call, and the afternoon parade is at 1.30 o'clock.

A canteen is being arranged and will be opened at once. Ptes. Drummond and Fred Graham were elected by the men this morning as a canteen committee.

Capt. Dodds arrived in the city on Saturday night and will be attached to the local company.

[illegible] playing a hockey team and intend to make the most of their leisure hours. There is no sign of anybody being downhearted around the Peterborough Armouries.

REMARKABLE SALES AT THE BIG STORE

Big Reductions on Enormous Stock

Save and Serve! It's Our Country's Message to all patriotic citizens and The Turnbull Co. as merchants are better prepared than usual to help you "do your bit!" They Will Serve so that You Can Save.

It has always been their policy as enterprising merchants to allow no accumulations of stock from one season to another, and when these January Clearance Sales start, they will offer you hundreds of things that you can use—many of them items you must have—at price reductions that are almost unbelievable in the midst of these "High Cost" days, simply because they must have money and room to stock up with new goods.

MONDAY, JANUARY 7, 1918

IN SIGHT OF HOME.

A sad happening, that illustrates the caprice of fortune, was the death in a railway collision near Montreal, of seven returning soldiers. They were members of the first contingent that left Canada in 1914, and after three years in the fighting line, exposed to the danger of death every hour—after escaping the perils of warfare in its fiercest and most frightful forms; after escaping the perils of six thousand miles of sea, on arriving in a land of peace, they are killed—in sight of home.

One can fancy, ir rather one cannot fancy, the feelings of mothers and wives and sisters waiting with open arms for their loved ones, to have their hopes, on the eve of realization, so sadly and tragically shattered. They have spent three years of nights of fitful sleeping, mingled with ceaseless prayers, hours of human doubt and heavenly trust, and to have all hopes destroyed on the eve of a joyful homecoming—is a tragedy of human disappointment and bereavement, too infinitely sad for expression in words. Less poignant is the grief of the thousands who have received the fatal message, "killed in action." Only those of us who have felt the long-sustained alternation of hope and fear and the rending grief of certainty, can in part enter in a sense of the "sorrow's crown of sorrow" that came to the waiting and watching relatives of those seven gallant soldiers, peril proof to war, dying, not as fighting warriors, but victims of prosaic accident—in sight of home.

Hope deferred maketh the heart sick; but hope crushed breaks the heart.

GET SQUARE WITH THE WORLD.

The New Year is proverbially a time for good resolutions. But, more to the point, its opening demands good actions, if we are to provide the conditions of realizing the great, but too often, formal, wish—"A happy and prosperous New Year."

The new year is a way station of time for making a new beginning in the most important thing—helping our neighbours; and thus giving the highest service to our fellow men. We should use the new year to get a new, clean start—open a clear course in the year to come.

In business, not only commercial business, but in that of doing our duty to our fellow man, the custom should be more than it is, to start the new year with a clean financial slate—to pay and to get paid all outstanding current accounts.

It is not only good morals—obedience to the Scriptural injunction "owe no man anything" — but it's good business. Ready money is the lubricant of trade; and the machinery of business, especially commercial business, will run much more smoothly if outstanding accounts are paid.

If everybody could, or would, realize how much prompt payment of even small bills, would help everybody else, and, in the long run, himself, there would be more prompt settlement of little liabilities. Ten dollars put into city circulation by the payment of a bill of that amount, may and can be, made the medium of meeting bills aggregating thousands of dollars. You pay me, or rather, I pay you, that little amount and the ability is created to pay somebody else. The thing is as palpable as its honesty and fairness.

Things would go much better during the year 1918 if, before January is much older, all posible bills were paid. In no other way perhaps comes the spirit of the—golden rule so pat—we should pay others as we would like others to pay us. We should especially do this when our obligations are toward those whose means are so limited—incomes so small—that every dollar counts.

With everybody paying accounts promptly at the beginning of the year business will be helped, friendships strengthened, and the result will be a clear conscience and the ability to look everybody square in the eyes. Above all, we shall be doing right, dealing fairly and honourably with each other; the only way to secure individual and community happiness, and make ourselves worthy of, as well as contributory to,

A HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR.

HELPING PRODUCTION

Helping production produces prosperity. Of this fact the De Laval Company of Peterborough is an illustration. It not only manufactures many kinds of indispensable aids to dairying success, but it increases the demand for its products by helping increase the productive capacity of the daity farms of the country.

In connection with its industry, it issues for distribution amongst its clientele, an admirable brochure, containing articles on the several departments of dairying, written by the best professional dairying experts of the continent—members of staffs of the Agricultural Colleges and Dairy Schools of Canada and the United States. These articles, plentifully illustrated, and practical to a point, deal with every phase of business dairying, building up dairy herds; feeding; production of foods; qualities and value of foods, and in fine, every sort of possible information and inspiration to develop and enlarge the dairying industry of the country.

This phase of enterprise on the part of the company is a blend of selfishness and altruism. It benefits the company by enlarging the market demands for its admirable dairying machinery and appliances; at the same time it incidentally benefits the country at large by the extension, enlargement and development of one of its most important indigenous producing interests. It also is concrete emphasis of the fact that we cannot help others, without helping ourselves — morally, for certain, and materially also.

The policy of the De Laval Company is an example to our governments at a time when production, more production, and still more production, are the cry—indeed the war cry—of the hour. The company not only psomotes production by disseminating auxiliary information and inspiration, but it provines the organization and furnishes the machinery to give them effect.

Our governments supply or provide admirable information to assist farmers in greater production; invaluable information of its kind, but without means for practical application to the end desired. The government's didactic interest in production lacks directness and "punch" in application such as this time of food crisis insistently demands. There's the demand, there's the land, there's the potential element of greater production; but the means, the labour, the machinery, the organization, are lacking.

We know that, to use a familiar term, the government has its hands full; but there is nothing, perhaps, in the way of contribution of war-winning help quite as essential as greater production of food.

The problem of meeting one great essential—men for the fighting line—is practically solved; and apart from routine application of the Military Service Act, the government is left comparatively free to give attention to the more important work of stimulating and, more than that, organizing dominion wide greater production.

It will need statesmanship, energy and "go." If the government were to put into a greater production campaign the organization, the energy, the thoroughness, the enthusiasm, the appeal to the national duty and conscioussness, it put into the whirlwind Victory Loan campaign, corresponding success would no doubt follow.

The thing is to act at once; to do what needs doing. That's the principle; ways and means are to be left to expert knowledge and abundance of it is available for the employment of the government.

It is evident that there is enough civilization in Germany to put up a stiff fight with military autocracy over the peace negotiation terms with Russia.

A BARBER'S COSTLY TALK.

The case of Joshua Swan, the Toronto barber who was sent to the Ontario Reformatory for a year for saying that any man who invested in Victory Bonds was a fool, demands consideration by the Department of Justice.

Swan is a man of excellent character, and upon this ground the magistrate was inclined to let him off with sixty days' imprisonment, but the Assistant County Crown Attney pointed out that the minimum penalty under the law was one year. He will therefore be separated from his wife and family for that period for a casual remark made in the heat of argument with a canvasser.

Technically, the conviction may be right, but it is clear that the law was not intended to cover such a case. The intention is to secure the safety of the nation. Assisting the enemy by seditious speeches is an offence that ought to be punished. Swan was not engaged in any such treasonable work. He is not an agitator. He accidentally got into an argument with a canvasser, in which both became irritated, the result being that one made an imprudent remark, and the other ran off and laid an information.

The incident was a trivial one and should not have occupied the attention of a court of law. If there was an offence, it has been punished ten times over by the imprisonment Swan has already undergone, and the suffering which has been brought upon his wife and family by a few careless words.

Conduct which is really seditious and dangerous ought to be punished, and those who are guilty of it should be kept under close watch in the interests of the nation and the cause. But the law should not be used as a means of inquisition into casual conversations.

The offence also should be proved like any other offence. In this case there was a conflict of testimony. Swan denied the statements of the witness against him, and was corroborated by his wife. Nothing is more common than a disagreement as to what is said in a conversation, and the defendant should always have the benefit of the doubt.

We are glad to know that friends and customers of Swan have interested themselves in the case, and that it will be laid before the Minister of Justice. The Minister can use his own discretion, and is not bound to a technical construction of the law, and in this case he can very wisely advise the exercise of the power of releasing the prisoner and remedying a grave injustice.—Toronto Star.

MARGARINE.

Margarine—the prefix "oleo"
Latterly has been effaced,
Though no doubt in many a folio
Of the grocer's ledger traced.

Once I arrogantly rated
You below the cheapest lard;
Once your "g" enunciated
With pedantic rigor, hard.

How your elements were blended
Naught I knew; but wild surmise
Hinted horrors that offended
Squeamish and fastidious eyes.

Now this view, unjust, unfounded,
I recant with deep remorse,
Knowing you are not compounded
From the carcas of a horse.

Still with glances far from genial,
I beheld you, margarine,
And restricted you to menial
Services in my cuisine.

Still I felt myself unable,
Though you helped to fry my fish,
To endure you at the table
Nestling in the butter dish.

Now that I have clearly tracked your
Blameless progress from the nut
I proclaim your manufacture
As a boon, without a "but."

Now I trudge to streets far distant,
Humbly in the queue to stand
Till the grocer's tired assistant
Dumps the packet in my hand.

Though you lack the special savor
Of the porducts of the churn,
Still the differences in flabour
I'm beginning to unlearn.

Thoughts of Devonshire or Dorset
From my mind have vanished quite
Since the stern demands of war set
Limits to my appetite.

Butter is of course delicious:
But when that is dear and scant,
Welcome margarine, nutritious,
Palatable lubricant!—Punch.

The Problem Of Farm Labour In The Scheme Of Greater Production

The food situation calls for vigorous action. Two lines of endeavour would tend to ease the situation—the placing of more labour on the farms and the providing of more efficient equipment. In meeting the demands for labour it must be borne in mind that inexperienced help, while useful at certain seasons, cannot take the place of the boys and men who are to the manor born," or who have had farm training. Few farmers would care to trust a green hand with expensive machinery and a spirited team, and it is with teams and machinery that the greater part of the work on the modern farm is done. So far as is possible, therefore, all farm boys should be allowed to remain on the farm and be exempt from the operations of the Military Service Act, so long as they are engaged in the agricultural production. When there are more sons on any one farm than are absolutely necessary, the lads who then become liable for service, should be given the alternative of helping other farmers who are not so happily situated. Even this, however, would be merely a drop in the bucket of the farmers' total requirements if production is to be what it should be. The remainder of the help needed must come from the city.

This city help need not necessarily be inexperienced. In our towns and cities are many men who came originally from the farm, many of them attracted there since the war began by the lure of high wages in munitions plants. If at all possible these men should be induced to return to the farms for the summer season at least. To secure their services, two courses are open — conscription for production or such high prices for farm produce as will enable farmers to pay wages commensurate with those now paid by city employers of labour. In the unskilled class, high school boys have already rendered much appreciated assistance the season through and a well-organized campaign should make available much unskilled adult labour to help in harvesting the crops.

Mechanical equipment to a certain degree may be a substitute for labour. Tractors, milking machines and wider working machinery, all tend to increase the efficiency of the farm workman. The steadily advancing prices of all of this equipment, however, is proving a serious handicap to its use. These prices are at present enhanced by an almost prohibitive protective tariff. In no one way can our law makers so convincingly prove their interest in the production of food stuffs as by removing those obstructive duties which are a serious handicap on the farming business. There may even be cases where it would be wise for the government to take steps to supply tractor power, as the Ontario government has already done. Yet the best of mechanical equipment will replace only a small portion of the men who have been removed from the army of production. The first essential is man power.

We realize that we have merely touched on the outskirts of this great problem. Its solution calls for statesmanship of a high order. If anything is to be done to increase production next season, it must be done in the next two or three months. It would be a national calamity if our armies at the front were to be weakened because of a deficiency in the supply of food. It would be equally regrettable if the spirit of the people at home were to be broken by undernutrition. Yet this is the danger we face if labour is not made available to the farmer at a wage which is reasonably proportionate to the price of farm products.—Farm and Dairy.

TANK CRUISE.

Gibraltar and Greville Cross Ypres Canal Easily.

I spent a large part of yesterday with another correspondent in a Tank helping in the salvage of a crippled sister Tank from the crater area. Let us call them the good ships Greville and Gibraltar—which is not their names. Both, though splashed with bullet marks from recent fighting, were staunch and sound, but Gibraltar unhappily had an accident to her steering gear, so that while she could go straight ahead she refused to obey her helm. Having gone straight ahead as far as such a course would take her on the road towards home, she had to heave to and wait for help. And to-day Grevie hitched on with a 3-inch steel hawser, and with this assistance, both being under their own steam, the crippled ship got safely into port.

It was an interesting ride, for after the stretch of still-ploughed ground we had to cross the Ypres canal. Three years of war have made the canal a sad sight, with its battered banks, surmounted here and there with ragged shreds of trees where once was a long leafy avenue. The canal itself is cut up into small sections by a great many bridges and causeways and crossings so numerous that it is not worth while for the Germans to shell any of them. Between these obstacles a short stretch of the canal lies stagnant, half overgrown with reeds and covered with green scum, with all sorts of ugly debris thrusting up from the mud below. It is an unlovely waterway, and it is an amazing fact that Tanks can now unconcernedly tow other Tanks across it by the newly-made causeways in bread daylight.

Then we came by what had once been a country lane, where Gibraltar in some of her ungainly veerings took liberties with the remnants of the hedgerow trees. Then there was open meadow land, somewhat shell pitted, but still green, with patches of thistles in their down and clumps of ragwort. We ignored the shell-holes and made a sad mess of the ragwort and thistles. At a bit of swampy land the monsters became amphibious and churned their way through mud and water with as little trouble as would a dogcart on macadam.

It was my first trip on something approaching battle ground inside a Tank, and it has immensely increased my admiration for them and for the men who go down in them to battle. For a summer outing a man might reasonably prefer a caravan, for they are not luxuriously appointed. But the manageability of the great beasts is wonderful, and they waddled together in nonchalance over shell-holes and hummocks and things which would make any caravan shed its tires in horror.

As we were about to start a Gotha seroplane came rather impudently overhead, and seemed to look at us. One of our own airmen came along and the enemy made for home, but we hoped that when he got there he would not tell his guns there was Tank salving going on and the exact place where. Apparently he did not, for apart from the noise of the guns it was a peaceful and very novel, if jolty, summer ride.

Having left our Tank in safe waters we visited poor Ypres, which grows more battered and sadder in its beauty every day.—Cor. London Times.

An Evident Alternative.

"She married him in spite of great opposition, didn't she?"

"Yes. If her marriage doesn't turn out well she'll only have herself to blame."

"Good gracious! Why? What's to prevent her blaming him?"

LINKING MALAY STATES.

Five Hundred Miles of New Road in Orient Opens in April.

By the linking up of the Federated Malay States railways (which now extend northward to the Siamese border) with the southern railway system of Siam, through rail communication has been established from Singapore to Bangkok, a distance of nearly 500 miles. It is proposed to open the line for through passenger and freight traffic in April of next year, this length of time being required for perfecting the roadbed and securing the necessary rolling stock, which has been unobtainable owing to war conditions. Passengers will then be able to make a continuous trip by rail between the capital and chief port of the Straits Settlements and the capital of Siam, thus effecting a considerable saving in distance and time over the sea route, which requires at present from three to four days between Singapore and Bangkok.

The railway from Prai, opposite the Island of Penang, to the Siamese border, is the property of the Federated Malay States Government. The railway fro mPerlis (one of the non-federated Malay States) border to Bangkok has been built by the Siamese Government, and will be operated by the Siamese Railway Department. It is intended, at the opening of the line for through traffic in April next, to commence with a weekly express service in either direction, the journey from Penang to Bangkok occupying 36 hours.

The Federated Malay States Government proposes to construct deep-water wharves at Prai for the use of ocean-going ships, and it is anticipated that as a result there will be a considerable increase of trade between Penang and Bangkok, the present railway connection shortening the distance from Bangkok to Europe by something like five days. It will also shorten the European mail service to Bangkok by causing the mails to be discharged at Penang instead of at Singapore, whence they will be forwarded by rail to Bangkok. Tourists from Singapore and Penang to Bangkok will further have the opportunity of going by train through an interesting and comparatively unknown country, and returning by boat to Singapore to continue their journey eastward.

Two Questions.

"Why do you weep over the sorrows of people in whom you have no interest when you go to the theater?" asked the man.

"I don't know," replied the woman. "Why do you cheer wildly when a man with whom you are not acquainted slides to second base?"

Things for You to Consider:—

When you buy a suit of clothes, a dress or groceries, etc., you try to get the most for your money—DON'T YOU? Then, in selecting a home, it is only common justice to yourself that you do the same thing. At the present time there is offered for sale a number of good homes in this city, and at prices that you will not make any mistake in picking up, for instance—

$2,500 buys a two story brick house with plumbing and furnace. Also a large lot and stable.

$2,000 buys a modern house, except furnace. Owner leaving city.

$3,500 buys a modern brick house, hardwood floors, hot water heating, garage, etc.

$2,600 buys a very central house, with plumbing and furnace.

$2,500 buys 25 acres; good buildings and land; owner would like to exchange for 100 acres.

$3,600 buys 50 acres; good buildings, close to the city.

LINDSAY JUNIORS PLAY HERE ON FRIDAY

The local hockey season will be opened on Friday night, when the Lindsay Midgets will clash with the Peterborough juniors in a junior O.H.A. fixture. It should be a battle royal. Lindsay won the opening game on their own ice by 8 to 5, but the young Petes are confident they can turn the tables on Friday night. Junior hockey always provides a real game and under the six man style with a substitute allowed, the pace is faster than ever. The teams are well matched and the game will be well worth seeing. A big crowd should turn out and encourage the youngsters in the first home game of the season.

Canadiens Beat The Senators

MONTREAL, Jan. 6.—Canadiens won from Ottawa by 6 to 5 in the scheduled National Hockey League game at the Jubilee Rink here Saturday night. The game was played on ice unfamilar to both teams, in consequence of the destruction of the Arena by fire last week, and on a smaller surface than that of the Arena. It was witnessed by the largest crowd of spectators at any hockey match in Montreal so far this season, and was an exceptionally close and interesting contest. Seventeen minutes overtime play was required to bring a decision.

Music & Drama

WHICH ONE SHALL I MARRY?

A large audience saw and thoroughly enjoyed Ralph Kettering's impressive allegorical play, "Which One Shall I Marry?" at the Grand Opera House on Saturday night. The drama deals with what it calls "the biggest question in every woman's life," that of matrimony. Agnes Moran, a stenographer, and the daughter of a poor labbrer, is proposed to by John Bland, a millionaire manufacturer, and also by Jack Hart, a workman in Bland's steel mill. Unable to decide the question of whether she will marry for wealth or love, she asks for power to look into the future. The middle portion of the play deals with what might have happened and reveals what her life would be with each of the suitors for her hand. This glimpse into the life ahead enables her to settle the question.

The play was splendidly acted — Walter Davis especially scored in the part of Jack Hart, and Ruth Lee was delightful as Agnes Moran. Rich comedy was supplied by Ed. Brennan as Mike Moran, and by Lottie Emons as Mrs. Mike.

The scene settings were lavish, no fewer than eleven scenes being used.

Peterboro is very fortunate in the theatrical attractions it is receiving this year. On Monday next local theatre goers will have an opportunity of seeing Elsa Ryan in "Out There," which comes to the Grand after playing this week at the Princess Theatre in Toronto. Another big attraction to be seen here shortly is "A Daughter of the Sun," which appears at the Grand in Toronto next week.

Fire Destroys Otonabee Home

A brick dwelling house belonging to Mr. John Carey, of Otonabee, was totally destroyed by fire early this morning. The cause of the fire is unknown. The house, which is a total los, was valued at over two thousand dollars. A few of the contents were saved. The fire broke out about two o'clock an dthe family had to make a hurried departure. Mr. Carey resides on a hundred acre farm about one mile north of Drummond station.

PTE. JOHNSTON REPORTED ILL

Pte. Wm. Johnston, a Chemong member of the old 93rd Battalion, is officially reported ill, according to to-day's casualty list. Pte. Johnston, who was well known as a guide around Burleigh Falls, was among the first Indians to enlist with the Peterborough County Battalion.

WANTED TO GO IN SON'S PLACE

Special to the Examiner.

TORONTO, Jan. 7.—"Let me go in my son's place," asked the father of M. O. Killacky, in Judge Winchester's appeal court to-day. "My son is making more money than I am," he continued. "Let me go and he will support the family."

"Get a better job," advised Mr. Snow, the military representative.

"You get me a job where I will get half the pay you get as military representative and I will let my boy go". Exemption was refused.

BREWING.

LONDON.—The Food Controller has issued an order permitting brewers to increase their present output by 20 per cent. in the first quarter of the New Year. The order also permits an additional increase of 13⅓ per cent. for brewers supplying "necessitous munition areas."

FIREMAN TOOK REVENGE

Turned in Three False Alarms to Spite His Comrades

QUEBEC, Jan. 7.—Fireman Alphonse Cote of the Quebec Fire Department, is in jail awaiting sentence for having in two hours sounded three false alarms last Saturday night, when the temperature was 31 below zero.

Eugene Leclare, Fire Commissioner, declares that the law will be vigorously enforced. What would have happened, he said, had a fire broken out at the time in a large factory or in a religious institution where there are thousands of lives to be saved? The city was exposed to the possibility of an unprecedented disaster. Any one who sounded a false alarm, he said, should go to the penitentiary for life.

The facts against Cote, who is a young man of 23, were brought out at an inquiry held by Judge Langelier. He was charged with having turned in the alarms in revenge for punishment that had been awarded him. At first he denied the charge and attempted to brazen it out, but under cross-examination he confessed everything.

As a result of the alarms at a time of severe cold, about fifteen firemen had their feet, hands and faces frozen. Several horses died from fatigue.

Lost $50,000,000 in Ships In an Hour's Sea Fight In Great Jutland Battle

FIFTY million dollars — more gold than one thousand strong men could well carry; a sum which would maintain 4,000 families in reasonable comfort for ever; and much greater than the entire expenditure on many of our smaller wars. Such is the estimated cost of a single hour's fight between the British and the German fleets engaged at anything like their full strength.

That this is no exaggerated estimate is proved by the fact that the Jutland battle, in which only a portion of the two fleets took part, cost over $200,000,000, without counting the value of the lives sacrificed in it. And, incredible as such a statement must seem, it becomes intelligible when we consider that a single well-directed shot can sink in a few minutes a battleship that has cost more than $10,000,000 to build and equip.

In the Jutland battle, Britain lost three battle cruisers — the Queen Mary, Indefatigable, and Invincible —the aggregate value of which exceeded $26,000,000. In addition to this, she lost three cruisers—Defence, Warrior, and Black Prince—whose cost was $18,000,000; and eight smaller vessels, whose value ranged from $500,000 to $1,000,000. Thus, her own bill of costs, in destroyed ships of war alone, amounted to more than $50,000,000.

The German loss was greater still, for it included four ships—the Kaiser, Hindenberg, Lutzow, and Derfflinger—not one of which cost less than $1,120,000; these four vessels alone representing $50,000,000. To these we must add the Pommern, $6,200,000; the Elbing, Wiesbaden, and Rostock, $2,000,000 each; the Frauenlob, $1,200,000; nine destroyers, $6,000,000; and one submarine at $500,000—making a grand total of $70,000,000.

Thus in ships known to have been destroyed the actual money loss in this one battle amounted to nearly $200,000,000!

But the number of ships damaged and disabled was still larger, and the cost of repairing them must have amounted to a very large sum. The precise amount it is naturally impossible to ascertain; but, according to expert estimate, it could not be less than $35,000,000, thus raising our bill of damages to $165,000,000.

And there are some formidable items to follow. What of the mountains of ammunition expended in the battle? Every time a 12-inch gun is fired, with its 850-pound shell and its 207 pounds of cordite, $500 is dissipated. The Indefatigable and Invincible each carried eight 12-inch guns, in addition to sixteen of 4-inch. Each 12-inch gun could fire three rounds in two minutes; so that, assuming the maximum rate of firing, the expenditure on ammunition would be at the rate of $6,000 a minute for one ship alone. For the Queen Mary, with her eight 13.5-inch guns, the expenditure would be greater still.

When it is considered that in the Jutland battle some forty-five vessels were engaged for ten hours or so, we can understand that the bill for ammunition must have amounted to millions of pounds; and can even credit the estimate of $37,500,000 given by an expert.

Then there is the cost of fuel. A battle-cruiser at full speed consumes 1,000 tons of fuel in a day; and when we consider the hours of fighting, the long distances covered to and from the scene of the battle, and the number of ships engaged in both fleets, an allowance of $450,000 does not seem excessive.

Thus, adding the items together, we reach a total of over $700,000,000 for the actual money loss in this one battle in which only portions of the two fleets were engaged. If we add $100,000,000, the estimated value to the nations of the lives lost, we reach the appalling total of over $300,000,000 as the cost of a few hours' modern fighting on the sea.

Buried Treasure.

There have always been treasure seekers diligently endeavoring to discover and bring to light the wealth hidden by their predecessors. Only a few years ago a princess of the royal blood of Britain was seeking for gold in the depth of the sea. She—it was the Princess Louise—had a right to the hulks of the vessels of the ill-fated Spanish Armada which went down off the Isle of Mull during their scared and hurricane-driven flight round the British Isles. She had little more luck than her ancestors, who had been working at that treasure-trove since the 17th century, for only a few old cannon and a small number of coins were brought to the surface.

In the days when Drake sailed the seas a Spanish galleon always meant plenty of gold to the British sailor, and romance and tradition have taken nothing from their lustre, so that wreckers and treasure-hunters are practically always at work at some one or other of the ancient Spanish wrecks that lie all round the coasts of Europe.

It is not generally known that when Queen Victoria died she left to the Princess Beatrice her rights to the gold in the ships of the Spanish Armada lying at the bottom of the English channel. How rich a trove that is may be judged from the fact that longshoremen all along the south coast make a practice of seeking for the coins that a sou'wester drives on to the beach out of these same waters.—Tit-Bits.

Belgian Women Dig German Trenches

MANY OF THEM BETWEEN 17 AND 35 PUT TO WORK AT FRONT—MEN AND BOYS UNDER FIRE.

Washington, January 4.— Instances of Belgian women between the ages of 17 and 35 being compelled by the Germans to dig trenches, are narrated in an official communication which was made public to-day by the Belgian Legation. The despatch follows:

"The German military authorities in occupied Belgium are compelling women to perform the most rough and dangerous work. At Ingelmunster, a town situated between Roulers and Courtrai, many women between the ages of 17 and 35 have been compelled to report to the 'Kommand Autur,' a card of identification was there given to each of them, and it is said that they were compelled to follow the German soldiers and do washing for the army. These unfortunate women were taken to Heule, near Courtrai, where they were given shovels and forced to dig trenches on the new line. Instances of the same kind have happened in other villages.

"All men between the ages of 17 and 45 in the localities between Courtrai and Deynze have been sent to an unknown destination. In the neighborhood of Bruges it is stated that all men between the ages of 16 and 40 without exception, have been requisitioned for German military work. At Bruges, men of all classes, especially of the laboring class, are compelled to work for the German authorities. When requisitioned, these men are divided into three classes — first, those who refuse to work; second, those who accept work, and third, those who accept military work.

"Men of the first class are pitilessly imprisoned, given insufficient food and after several days are sent to the front very close to the trenches. Many of them have been wounded or killed. It is easy to understand that some of the men, terrified by what they have seen, weakened by starvation, worried by the condition of their families and privation, finally consented to sign a so-called voluntary engagement." They were then sent to one of the ports where they unloaded ships and were given 3 marks a day, or if they have been induced to 'consent" to military work, they are sent to the front, where they dig trenches, etc., and earn from 6 to 10 marks a day. Sometimes the women also have been compelled by force when necessary to work for Germans. They are employed in repairing equipments, and in making cartridges.

"The majority of the 190 men deported from Auvelais have been sent back to their homes. A great number of them were ill and in a condition of extreme weakness. About twenty of their companions died at Cassel, Prussia. The city of Ghent has been punished by the closure of all taverns on account of the fact that a large number of workmen, among whom were many citizens in Ghent, had refused to do forced labor in the neighborhood of Courtrai."

CLOTHING WILL BE SHORT VERY SOON ALL OVER WORLD

Economy Board's Work in United States is Only Just Begun.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Stay-at-homes of all fighting nations, the United States included, may soon go about in strange get-ups so that their armies may be properly clothed. This has been the experience of the Teuton Powers, and Government data to-day reveals a world shortage of civilian clothing.

The situation has led the Defence Council's economy board to curtail shoe and apparel styles and materials. Cutting 25 per cent. of wool and an equal amount of leather from shoes now being made for next fall trade, and eliminating all feminine fripperies in duds are only starters in what the Board will do.

Shoes and clothes are so scarce in Austria-Hungary and Germany that the Government is seriously considering a citizen's suggestion that civilian dead, rich or poor, great or humble, be buried in gingham shirts instead of their "Sunday best" so that the "needy living may have their apparel."

The United States economy board's proposed order for "low-heeled shoes and shoes only in black and two shades of tan; black, grey and blue fabric only for men's and women's apparel; only one grade and colour of silk, and no patch pockets or pleats," is nothing compared with the restrictions in Europe, most of whose "peacock alleys," when trod at all, are trod by a very dowdy lot of birds.

The Central Powers, Government data shows, have limited the amount of clothing each man, woman, and child may possess, even stipulating the number and quality of handkerchiefs. Much of the clothing is made of woven paper. Even that is scarce and costly.

No Shoes of Leather Now.

Leather shoes are unknown outside the army. It is next to impossible to get any kind. Forbidden to use everything else, shoe manufacturers bought up family tablecloths and doylies and lined wooden shoes with them. The Government stopped that, seizing the tablecloths for Government use.

Shoe cards are issued to the populace, but as often as not are worthless, because the dealers have no shoes.

When shoes exist they are made of wood, paper and sail cloth. Five and six dollars a pair is the cheapest for any of them. They wear but a short time.

Herr Hartmaier, of the Austro-German chief distribution department, recently announced that shoes from now on would be made in three qualities, rough, medium, and better. The better shoe will be "entirely of paper uppers and thin wooden soles."

IT is always safe to send a Dominion Express Money Order. Five dollars costs three cents.

OVER ONE THOUSAND TONS OF COAL FOR PETERBORO

Last week the twenty cars of coal came into Peterborough over the tracks of the Grand Trunk railway. In addition to this at least five cars were handled by the Canadian Pacific railway, bringing the approximate total up to well over one thousand tons of coal for this city in one week. One dealer brought in a car containing forty tons and he candidly admitted that he made over one hundred deliveries out of this car. The coal was doled out in five hundred pounds and even smaller lots. In another week this same dealer will have to do this work all over again, and yet the people are wondering why the cost of coal is soaring and the delivery end of the business is breaking down. It has frequently been suggested that the dealers pool their orders, if such a miracle were possible and combine to minimize a delivery and continuat dupliication.

Brass polished with oil and rotten stone will have a deep rich yellow tone.

Mr. R. J. Soden's Reason For Declining To Take Part In A Partisan Election At This Time

As stated in Saturday's issue of the Review, I have, for reasons that seem good and sufficient to me, decided that until the present war is over I will not take part in any purely partisan election.

Briefly my reasons for taking this position may be summed up as follows:

After better than three years of war Canada finds itself face to face with the fact that the issue which means life or death to the Allied countries, Canada included, still hangs precariously in the balance. In spite of the sacrifices of life, money, time and material which they have all made, the year 1918 opens with anything but the desired prospect for the Entente Allies.

No thinking person in Ontario or the Canadian Dominions will deny that in order to assure victory in the future, we must put away for the time being the thoughts of all else, and bend every effort, strain every faculty, mental and physical, in rendering, promptly and wisely, the most efficient and needed help to our own men at the Front and to the Allied nations. In other words, we must each and all, as one, concentrate on victory, decisive and soon.

To render this aid most effectively and in the wisest manner, we need above all else, among the the people themselves, the spirit of unity. The need of Ontario, the need of the Dominion above all else, both for to-day and for the full further period of this war is sanity of thought and unity of action.

Party issues fought out on the hustings tend to destroy all this and to sow ill feeling and discord where and when peace and unity are demanded of us, one and all. For this reason alone, were it all, I would take no part in a party political contest at this time.

But besides this, there is at present no great or outstanding issue in the province or this riding that calls for the turmoil or expense of an election.

Were an election on in this riding to-morrow, it would be necessary (as pointed out by Mr. J. H. Burnham) for an energetic candidate to spend lavishly and employ many canvassers to "stir up" the electorate. Would it not be more patriotic, wise and inestimably more helpful, to avoid, if possible, an unnecessary election, thus allowing the energetic would-be candidate to donate the same amount of money to assist in winning the war, or to purchase its equivalent in the next issue of Victory bonds, which issue, unless all signs fail, cannot be long delayed.

But as stated above, there are no large issues for the provincial parties or candidates to fight over.

On temperance legislation, Hydro-Electric, and good roads and war expenditure the two parties are a unit; nor is there any reason to doubt that no matter who may be chosen to replace the Hon. N. W. Rowell, the Liberal party has no intention of altering its attitude on these, the measures which involve most that concerns the province.

In the face of the above, it does seem to me like a useless expenditure of time, money and energy to insist on an election in this riding. If we must go through the form of an election in order to satisfy constitutional law, let the election entail as little waste of time, money, and energy as possible.

Thoughtful men and women, both Liberal and Conservative, are opposed to a party political contest at this time, and I sincerely trust that the good commonsense of the community will prevail and that a satisfactory solution of the petty differences of party will be found and the turmoil and ill feeling of a party fight avoided.—Yours truly,

R. J. Soden.

FIRM UNDERTONE ON STOCK MARKET

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Jan. 7.—The stock market developed a firm undertone today. Premier Lloyd George's speech was well received and its results, it is believed, will be seen in the near future. Home funds and allied bonds were stronger and diamonds were leading features. Rubber, oil and shipping stocks were steadily supported. Money was in good supply and discount rails were quiet.

Catholic Sunday Schools Discontinued During Coal Shortage

On account of the shortage of fuel it was announced in the Catholic churches yesterday that until further notice both the Sunday school classes held in the Separate Schools and the Sunday afternoon service would be discontinued. This includes the advanced classes, which have been held in the churches for the older students and the boys and girls who are working. At the Cathedral the daily morning mass will be celebrated in the small vestry instead of the body of the church.

The City Treasurer will take orders for Hardwood, delivered. This wood is of the very best. 4 feet green maple and beech. 2d-4

German Coal Bins Are Empty And The People Are Suffering

Kaiser Tells His Dupes That He Must Accept This Privation Also —Mountains of Coal Lie Untouched at the Mouths of Shaft

THEY FREEZE SO HE CAN GET MORE GUNS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—The German coal bins are empty. The German Government's only reply to the frozen cry of the populace for coal, wood—anything to keep them warm—is a proclamation saying relief is impossible, according to official Government advices here to-day.

The Kaiser has called on his people to "accept this privation also, in the consciousness that thereby they are giving our soldiers at the front the things they most need—guns and guns." I declared that "without civilian sacrifice of coal the Italian victory would have been impossible."

Despite this the Austro-German populace is becoming increasingly restive and angry. The Berlin Landlords' Association has so advised the Government and counselled it to "go easy."

Lack of Transportation.

The Austro-German coal crisis is just as it is in this country—broken down transportation. Most of the coal produced goes to munition factories. Some of these are running only part time for lack of coal. Poor and inefficient food and lack of tools has seriously reduced the miners' output. Eighteen thousand men were withdrawn from the front to help, but, according to Minister of Public Works Von Holmann in the Austrian House hearing, "though the mines' man has been increased 16 per cent., the output has only increased 2 per cent."

Mountains of coal lie untouched at the mouths of the shafts for lack of waggons to haul it. Practically every waggon in Germany and Austria-Hungary has been sent to the front.

Warm Bath Once a Week.

All railroad trains and the Berlin Subway are cold as barns. No one is allowed to bathe in warm water more than once a week, the advices state. The Eisnach-Rastenburg Railroad has quit running for lack of coal. The Schoenburg Town Council appropriated $144,000 to buy coal for the poor "whenever possible."

The Dusseldorf gas supply is so short it is cut off from 8 to 11 a.m, from 1.30 until dusk, and from 11 p.m. until 5.30 a.m. The gas is odourless and dangerous to use. The Government is tearing out gas, light, and heating fixtures in all but two rooms and the kitchens of private houses to prevent prohibited lighting and heating.

READY AGAIN FOR BUSINESS

Toronto Ladies' Tailoring Co. Resumes Regular Business After Fire—In Better Shape Than Ever

The Toronto Ladies' Tailoring Co., corner Brock and George streets, have risen, Phoenix like, out of the debris of the late fire, which destroyed many of their goods and disfigured the interior of their store premises. Workmen have been engaged for some time in refitting and redecorating their show room. New ceiling and wall papers have been put on; the counters, show cases and shelving renewed and neatly grained in light oak; and the show windows, doors and floors improved.

Mr. Deuch, senior member of the firm, is now busy preparing for the spring work. His fire sale cleared most of the damaged goods away, and only a few garments are left to be disposed of. The factory is in good running order, as the fire did not reach that portion of the premises. The machines have been overhauled and put in good efficiency for the early spring orders, and the machine men have resumed their places ready for the new advanced spring work.

JAPAN STAYS WITH ALLIES.

Mexico City, January 7. — If the enemy proposes a separate peace, no matter how advantageous, Japan will reject it, Baron Fugitaro Otori, the new Japanese Minister to Mexico, declared on Saturday in a statement concerning the attitude of his country. Japan, he said, would remain on the side of the allies, and was co-operating in the war to the fullest extent. Being one of the signatories of the treaty of London, Japan, the minister added, would not look upon that treaty as a scrap of paper.

NINE-YEAR-OLD GIRL SLOWLY PETRIFYING

All Tissue and Cartilege Turning Into Bone—Death Certain.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 7.—"Progressive myositis ossificans," one of the rarest pathological manifestations known to science, has put its appearance again.

In plain every-day English "progressive myositis ossification" means gradual transformation of tissue and cartilege into bone. A little nine-year-old girl, whose name is withheld, is now in the Jefferson Hospital awaiting the day when she will be completely petrified. This, according to surgeons studying the case, is probably but a few years off.

The cause—the second of its kind known to Dr. John Chalmers Da Costa—came to this city from a Wilmington (Del.) hospital, as soon as the nature of the ailment became established. Prof. W. W. Hawke has the child under special observation, and will conduct a series of experiments to analyze the patient's digestive processes.

The disease is thought to be caused by the improper functioning of the parathyriods, small masses of gland-like epithelium lying beneath the thyroid glands in the neck. It is the parathyroid glands which control the supply of lime salts or bone-building elements to the body, and if these glands are removed death invariably follows:

The child appears normal to the untrained eye, but when one touches the muscles of the neck, arms and back they are as rigid and hard as stone. The disease attacks progressively all the voluntary muscles of the body. The involuntary muscles are unaffected, death resulting from inability to eat or move any portion of the body.

Dr. Da Costa places the outside limit to the age which the child may attain at 20 years.

Peterborough Churches Observe Sunday As Special Day Of Prayer And Thanksgiving

King's Proclamation Was Read at St. John's Church—Rev. Canon Davidson Delivers An Inspiring Message —Reference to the Draftees

Yesterday, Peterboro took its part in the appeal for Divine aid and guidance in the prosecution of the war, and its successful conclusion in the interests of the democratic nations who are striving to overcome militarism and Prussian domination. National services of prayer and thanksgiving were held in all the local churches. At St. John's church Major J. C. Davidson officiated for the first time since his return from overseas, where he has been doing duty as chaplain to the Canadian and British forces. The church was filled to capacity and the national aspects of the occasion was the subject of special reference by Canon Davidson. Members of the Great War Veterans were present in a body; also a number of returned Peterboro officers, including Col. T. W. Young, Col. J. Mills and Major S. T. Medd.

READ PROCLAMATION.

The service opened with the reading by Colonel Mills, of the King's proclamation setting aside yesterday as a day of national prayer and thanksgiving.

The morning lesson was read by Major S. T. Medd. This was followed by an inspiring sermon based on a text taken from 1. Samuel, seventh chapter and twelfth verse: "Then Samuel took a stone and set it between Mizpeh and Shen, and called the name of it Eben-ezer, saying, Hitherto hath the Lord helped us."

"Confidence is essential to success," said Canon Davidson, in his opening remarks. "It was a spirit of confidence that inspired Samuel, the spiritual leader of the Israelites. He summed up the whole thing and knowing that God was with him in defeat or victory, set up a stone, proclaiming God's assistance. During the time which it has been my duty to be absent from you I have put to the test the great principle as represented in this text. I look back upon my labours with a spirit of thankfulness that I am permitted to return and meet you all once again. Hitherto hath God helped us on our future.

CRITICAL PERIOD.

"Our King has called us together to-day to contribute our spiritual resources. We are now at a critical period of the war. With Russia out of the war, and America not yet in a position to take a very active part we must needs look upon the present with some misgiving. If we can but hold out for another six months all will be well. It is at this critical hour that King George has summoned us together.

"Let us think for a moment on what our confidence is based. The Germans, and we speak of them in this House of Prayer without hostility, look upon God as one who specially favours them, and will back them against all comers. They forget that God looks down upon us all as one great family. We strive not so much to get God on our side as to get ourselves on God's side. This all finds reflection in our prayers. Our prayer is, 'that Thou will take the cause into Thine own hands, and judge between us and our enemies.'

Referring to the draftees who are now going forward to reinforce the men overseas, Canon Davidson said, "These men will go forward in the strength of the Lord with the knowledge that the people who send them will back them up in the great work that is before them. It will mean a new confidence to the men overseas, who are war-weary, as you may know."

THE EVENING SERVICE.

At the evening service the church was again crowded. A good representation of the Great War Veterans' Association marched to St. John's church headed by he band of the Salvation Army, and occupied the pews at the front of the church.

As in the morning, the service was opened by the reading of the King's proclamation, Mr. J. A. Aylmer performing this function. The first lesson was read by Mr. H. Rush.

In his inspiring address Major Davidson spoke on the subject of co-operation. In referring to what the people at home could do for the boys overseas, the speaker emphasized the necessity of writing as many letters as possible. The duty of the citizens of Peterboro to the returned men was strongly pointed out by Major Davidson who did not think that it should be necessary for the men who had faced the perils and difficulties at the front, to have to appeal for funds to provide them with a place where they could meet in comfort. The money that was needed for that purpose should be readily forthcoming.

During the offertory, the solo, "Arm, Arm, ye Brave," from "Judas Maccabeus," was splendidly sung by Mr. Thos. Ward.

The musical part of the services was well permeated with the spirit of the day. "God Save the King," "O Canada," "Hail, Columbia," "Marsellaise," Russian Hymn, all found a place.

The much-discussed and oft-omitted verse of the National Anthem was used twice yesterday. It is as follows:

O Lord, our God, arise,
Scatter our enemies,
And make them fall.
Confound their politics,
Frustrate their knavish tricks;
On Thee our hopes we fix—
God save us all.

The First Line of Defense—Your first line of defense in any undertaking is a sound, well-nourished body. Real preparedness for the day's work calls for a well-balanced ration. The whole wheat is the most perfectly balanced ration given to man. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is 100 per cent. whole wheat, nothing added to it, nothing wasted or thrown away. Two or three of these crisp little loaves of baked whole wheat, eaten with milk and a little fruit, make a complete, nourishing satisfying breakfast, lunch or dinner at a cost of only a few cents. Made in Canada.

CIGARS WILL BE DEARER.

London, Ont., January 7. — London manufacturers of sweet biscuits, soda biscuits and confectionery novelties Saturday directed instructions to their branches throughout the Dominion to increase prices forthwith. The advance on sodas and kindred lines will be one cent a pound, while to the consumer the advance in sweet biscuits will mean from two to five cents a pound.

Cigar manufacturers have also announced an advance in the price of all brands of cigars. The increase raises such sorts as sold before the war at $48 to $55 a thousand, to $65 a thousand. Thus cigars which were formerly obtainable at four for a quarter, and which of late have sold at three for a quarter, now pass to the level of the ten-cent straight.

HINT TO CALIFORNIA SLACKER

Newman was considerably stirred up Tuesday when early arrivals discovered that an effigy of one of its prominent citizens had been hung on Fresno street during the night. The effigy bore a placard stating that the said prominent citizen had contributed nothing to the Red Cross, nothing to the Y.M.C.A., and had bought no Liberty Bonds. The placard also bore the legend, "Pro-Germans, Beware!" The placard was signed: "Knights of Liberty." A similar incident occurred at Lodi only a few days ago, when a well known citizen was hung in effigy for the same reasons. — From the Luis Obispo Tribune.

Presentation To William Logan

On Friday evening William Logan (an employee of the Fitzgerald Carriage Co.) was presented with an address, and a safety razor, on his leaving for Kingston to enter military service.

THE ADDRESS.

To William Logan: Please accept from us this safety razor, and at any time you use it think of the friends you have left behind in Peterboro, and those you worked with alongside for the past two years. Hoping to have the pleasure of seeing you again in your old place, and may the war end before you are in the thick of it. Wishing you every good luck. Your fellow-workers and kind friends.

219 MONTREALERS FAIL TO REPORT IN 1ST DRAFT

Of These, 135 are French and 84 English Speaking Canadians.

MONTREAL, Jan. 6.—The authorities here had to deal with a number of cases of desertion under the Military Service Act. Two hundred and nineteen men called up in the first draft failed to report. It was said at military headquarters that probably a number of these men have already enrolled themselves instead of waiting until called. A number of men, however, are thought to be trying to evade service. Of the number missing 84 are British and 135 French.

Salvation Army Will Hold Special Prayers Weekly

The Day of Prayer at the Salvation Army yesterday was a real prayer day. Special addresses were given and special times of supplicating at the throne of God were spent.

A day when special prayer will be made has been arranged for each Wednesday afternoon at 3.30 at the S. A. Temple, Simcoe Street. Everybody will be welcomed and a special invitation is given to relatives of soldiers who want to join with others in prayer for national and personal peace and prosperity.

Special times for prayer in each service are being arranged for some time to come.

Services At Murray Street Church

There were very large congregations at both services at the Murray Street Baptist Church yesterday. Sixteen laymen assisted at the services: A. S. Zavitz, L. J. Petrit, Dr. Scott, T. G. Gillespie, W. Aldridge, D. Thompson, T. Waller, D W Lewis, C. B. Routley, Jos. Wearing, T. F. Matthews, Dr. Mann, B. R. Matthews, R. C. Reid, R. Harding, and E. Elcome

The music was of the highest order. At the communion service the gathering was so large the church communion set was inadequate, and the deacons and others went unserved.

Sudden Death Of Ald. Smith

Well Known Member of City Council Passes Away This Afternoon

News of the sudden death of Ald. John H. Smith, 444 Rogers Street, who passed away this afternoon at 3 o'clock, will come as a great shock to the entire city.

Ald. Smith had not been in perfect health for some time, but it was not until Saturday that he found it necessary to remain in bed, where he passed away from heart failure. He was a man of an unusual number of public connections, having for many years served as a valued member of the City Council and of the School Board. He had been employed by the William Hamilton Company for many years.

He leaves of the immediate family, his wife, one son, Harry, of Victoria University, at present at home, one brother, A. A. Smith, of Young's Point, and one sister, Annie of Detroit.

The funeral announcement will be made later.

British Victory in Arabia

Canadian Press Despatch.

LONDON, Jan. 7.—An official report received from Aden, the British port on the southern coast of Arabia, says that the British destroyed the defences of Hatum, on Saturday. Severe casualties were inflicted on the enemy.

Aden is a heavily fortified British protectorate at the entrance to the Red Sea. There have been infrequent reports of fighting in this region, but neither the British nor Turks have had large forces engaged. The British effort in this instance was probably for the purpose of strengthening their defensive position.

Annual Poultry Show Opens In The Market Hall

The gathering chorus in the Market Hall this afternoon announced the growing number of the exhibits in the annual exhibition of the Poultry Association. Among the exhibitors are the following from out of town: J. W. Caldwell, F. Brown and R. Fox of Port Hope; Bert Letts and Harry Daniels of Lindsay, and Messrs. Munroe of Grafton, Cox of Colborne, Whitting of Orillia, Curtis Brothers of Warkworth and others. The local poultry fanciers were out in full force. George Buller had a fine showing, Archie Brault had twenty White Wyandottes and B. Everson 22 included in their entries. The last exhibits will be received at 9 o'clock tonight, and judging begins to-morrow morning.

J. H. Menshall of Brantford and Joseph Bennett of Toronto have been secured as judges.

IS BACK FROM OVERSEAS SERVICE

Pte. T. W. Bryan Returns Home This Morning

Another former member of the 93rd Battalion returned from overseas in the person of Pte. Thomas W. Bryan of Smith Township.

Pte. Bryan went overseas with the 93rd, and went to France with a draft to the 21st Battalion. After serving for three months in the trenches with the Eastern Ontario Battalion, he was transferred to the 1st Canadian Labour Battalion, being with that unit until the end of November, after the capture of Passchendaele by the Canadians.

Pte. Bryan is invalided home, suffering from rheumatism.

OBITUARY

DR. SAMUEL SHERIN.

Mrs. Dawson Kennedy, 600 Water street, received a telegram this morning informing her of the death in Chicago of her brother, Dr. Samuel Sherin.

MICHAEL V. MALONEY.

Very sad circumstances attended the death of Michael Vincent Maloney, the little two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Maloney, 181 Lock Street, who passed away on Sunday, 6th January. Just one week ago Mr. Maloney lost his only other little son, John, from the same illness.

The funeral took place this morning to St. Peter's Cemetery.

ALBERT E. LECH.

Mr. Albert E. Lech, son of the late William Lech, of Peterborough, died last night in Windsor after a brief illness of pneumonia, according to the telegraphic message received to-day by his brother, Mr. K. G. Lech. The deceased was well known and highly respected in this city. Ten years ago he moved to Windsor and built up the leading hardware business of that town. He is survived by his wife and two daughters, Mrs. Fred Brown, of Montreal, and Miss Amy Lech, at home. The funeral arrangements will be announced later.

WILLIAM MASSIE.

(Cobourg World.)

With the closing day of the old year a deep gloom was cast over Cobourg in the sudden and unexpected death of Mr. Wm. Massie. Mr. Massie, although able to attend to business as usual, had not been feeling well for some little time. He was an old and trusted employee of the Crossen Car Company, and on Monday was attending to some work which was going on at the shops, when he was suddenly stricken with a weak spell. A physician was immediately summoned, but he passed away in a few minutes. The blow was a severe one to his wife and family with whom the deepest sympathy is felt. Besides his widow, formerly Miss Tripp, Mr. Massie is survived by one son, Mr. Douglas Massie, Montreal, and two daughters, Miss Mae Massie, Montreal, and Miss Muriel Massie who has been attending Normal school at Peterborough.

JOHN HENRY HELM HAS PASSED AWAY SUDDENLY

Man. Director Midland Loan & Savings Co., Prominent In Several Lines

PORT HOPE, Jan. 7.—One of Port Hope's most prominent and public-spirited citizens, Mr. John Henry Helm, passed away suddenly at the hospital here Saturday. He had been in failing health for some time, but was not confined to bed until Thursday, when he developed pleuro-pneumonia and he was taken to the hospital on Saturday. He was born in Cobourg in 1845, and was educated in Victoria College. When quite a young man he moved to Port Hope, and was engaged in the foundry and machine business with his father, the late John Helm, taking over the same when the latter retired. He was married to Emily L. Bell on September 1, 1868. For the past fifteen years he has been Managing Director of the Midland Loan & Savings Company.

He was a member of the Executive Commitee of the Land Mortgage Companies Association of Ontario. He always took an active part in municipal affairs, being a Public School Trustee, Treasurer of the Benevolent Society, a Director of the Port Hope Gas Company, and a member of the Hospital Board. He was an Anglican and a Liberal.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 7.—Independent Socialists in Germany have sent a message to Bolsheviki Foreign Minister Trotsky, advising him not to accept the German terms, and to avoid a separate peace, according to a report received here to-day.

CASUALTIES FOR THE WEEK ARE HEAVY

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Jan. 7.—The British casualties reported during the week ending to-day totalled 18,998. The losses were divided as follows:

Officers killed or died of wounds, 113; men, 3,832.

Officers wounded or missing, 448, men, 14,605.

For the virtual doubling of British casualties over the previous week, when the total was 9,951, the sharp fighting just before New Year's Day in the vicinity of Welsh Ridge, on the Cambrai front, south of Marcoing, may have been largely responsible. It is possible also that the belated reports on casualties in the Palestine, Italian and other war theatres, may have gone to swell the total considerably.

SPECIAL PRAYERS FOR VICTORY IN CATHOLIC CHURCHES YESTERDAY

In the three Catholic churches yesterday the wishes of King George that the day be observed in prayer and thanksgiving were fervently responded to. Reference was made to the proclamation, special prayers were offered by the congregations, led by the pastors and at St. Peter's Cathedral by Bishop O'Brien.

Particular emphasis was placed upon the necessity of prayer that God's blessing may rest upon the arms of the soldiers and ensure victory for the Allies. His Majesty's request to his people to unite in petition to God for success was an inspiring act, Bishop O'Brien stated at the Cathedral service, and further urged that prayers for the cause of the Allies be continued.

COAL OIL HEATERS ALL GONE

"Standard" Couldn't Supply an Order From John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. — John D. Rockefeller, jr., has been obliged to close his New York home and move into his father's home at Tarrytown, N.Y., because the Standard Oil Co. was unable to provide him with oil stove heaters. They did not have any left to give him. Mr. Rockefeller's home and those of several other wealthy New Yorkers adjoining have a common central heating plant, but lack of coal forced it to close down. He sent a requisition to the Standard Oil Company, in which he and his father are heaviest stockholders, for 36 oil stoves.

"Supply exhausted. Can't get them for you or anybody else," was the answer. Whereupon Mr. Rockefeller, with a shiver, decided to move.

Had Bronchitis FOR THREE YEARS

COULD GET NO RELIEF

Bronchitis is generally the result of a cold caused by exposure to wet and inclement weather. It begins with a tightness across the chest, difficulty in breathing, and a wheezing sound comes from the lungs. There is also a raising of phlegm from the lungs, especially in the morning. This is at first white, but later becomes of a greenish or yellowish color, and is occasionally streaked with blood.

On the first sign of bronchitis you should check it immediately by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and thereby prevent it becoming chronic and perhaps turning into some more serious lung trouble.

Mr. Theodore P. Beers, Upper Main River, N.B., writes: "I was troubled with bronchitis for three years, and could get no relief. I was always worse when I got wet. I tried lots of different medicines, but none did me any good until a friend told me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I got three bottles and before I had them half used I was better.

"My mother is now using it for asthma. It is a great medicine and we never want to be without it.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c; manufactured only by the T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE ELECTIONS IN ENNISMORE

Mr. D. Holland Was Elected Reeve —Tie Vote For Two of the Candidates

"One of the cleanest elections ever held in Ennismore," was the way in which a resident of that community expressed himself regarding the municipal contest accounted for yesterday. Mr. Daniel Holland was elected reeve over Mr. Michael Perdue by a majority of forty-five votes. The vote for councillors was as follows:

Clayton Telford	133
Thomas Cavanagh	121
William Harrington	101
Edward Sullivan	96
P. Garvey	96
Eugene Maloney	93

Mr. Garvey resigned in favour of Mr. Sullivan so that the first four men named were elected.

Deputy-Reeve.

In Smith township Mr. J. A. Middleton was elected Deputy-Reeve over Mr. C. E. Moore.

The rest of the Council was returned by acclamation.

SWITZERLAND IN "BONDAGE."

Her Vulnerable Spot Dependence Upon Outsiders' Coal and Food.

Since the great war began the military system of Switzerland has frequently been praised as an effective defence against foreign invasion without the evils of German militarism.

If it had appeared advantageous for them to attack France by passing through Switzerland, there is abundant evidence that the German armies would not have hesitated to invade the country as they invaded Belgium. Although Belgium is a flat country while Switzerland is mountainous, the natural barriers of Switzerland are on the Italian and French borders, while along the German boundary the land would present few obstacles to an invading army.

Switzerland was the playground of Europe, in winter as well as in summer, and a traveller seeing a hundred hotel omnibuses outside the railroad station in Lucerne would feel sure that the principal industry of the country was running hotels. There are, however, large manufacturing interests in Switzerland, in addition to the making of watches, cheese, and wood carving, whose fame is world-wide. Switzerland was taking a leading position in the manufacture of silks, and in making dyes was perhaps the leading rival of Germany.

When war began Germany turned to the Swiss factories, just as France and England turned to America, for help in making munitions, and the hotel servants who were not serving in the army found a big demand for labor in the factories.

The weakness in the economic position of Switzerland is in the fact that a large part of her food and all the coal for her factories must be imported. The only neighbor that can furnish coal is Germany, and the Swiss find themselves obliged to buy millions of dollars worth of German bonds in order to be permitted to buy the German coal that is indispensable.

There are no coal mines in Switzerland, but there is "white coal" or water power in abundance that can be transformed into light, heat, and power. An electric railway climbs a tunnel inside the Jungfrau mountain. Halfway on the journey a good hot luncheon is served at the restaurant, in a station hollowed out from the rocks. The temperature of the tunnel in this snow-covered mountain is but little above the freezing point, even in summer, but the trains are lighted, heated, and driven up the mountain, and the cooking and heating at the restaurant are all accomplished by the utilization of the icy cold water running down the mountain side as water power to generate electricity.

Few countries in the world are so well supplied with potential water power as Switzerland, and with this power fully developed she need never again see her industries at the mercy of a neighbor who may become at any time an alient enemy.

A Parson's Adviser.

Old Neale, the parish clerk of Toddington, was a great character. He occupied the lowest tier of the "three decker" pulpit and recited the responses in so loud a tone that there was nothing left for the congregation to do.

In my first week at Toddington the whole Wednesday evening service devolved on me. Neale, having taken stock of the new curate, remarked:

"There are two baptisms tonight." This was sufficiently alarming, but my nervousness was increased when he added: "Take care you don't brain the children against the corner of the seat. It's bin done afore now.'

When I reached the font I perceived that the corner of the semihigh pew was indeed in dangerous proximity.—"Lively Recollections," by Canon Sharpe.

Tattoo Marks.

In some countries tattooing is adopted for several purposes. For example, in Samoa when a woman is married several tattoo marks are placed on her, and both in Fiji and Samoa the birth of each child is registered in this way on the mother's hand. At Tahiti serious crimes are punished by tattooing a mark upon the forehead of the delinquent.

Comb Out Men For Army From Luxury Trades

Britain Will Begin Process at Once to Get Needed Reinforcements —Amicable Agreement Reached by Government and Labour Organization—Raise the Exemption Limit to 32 Years.

LONDON, Jan. 8.— Complete and amicable agreement between the Government and the trades unionists and labourites on British "man power," was announced yesterday as the result of last week's conference.

The "combing out" process of British workmen is to begin at once. Foremost in the agreement was the decision to raise the exemption limit, in essential industries from 25 to 32 years of age. Transfer of workmen from so-called "luxury trades" to essential industries will begin at once, under special provisions as to dilution by a certain percentage of female labour.

The conference was called specifically to guard against possible hampering or sowing up of Britain's war manufacturing machinery by further drafts of labour.

Since doing so he has had no need of an operation or even of a doctor as the trouble has completely left him. I cannot find words to speak our gratitude for his cure."

John McIntosh Elected Reeve Of North Monaghan Yesterday

His Majority Over Reeve Rye 99—Deputy Reeve Bell Returned by Small Majority and Two New Councillors Elected, Fred Wilson and Herb. Forster—Thos. Henry Also Elected.

The municipal elections in North Monaghan yesterday reversed the results of a year ago, returning Mr. John McIntosh to the reeveship with a majority of 99 over the total vote polled by Reeve Harold B. Rye.

In a way, the election was a bundle of surprises. Not only did Mr. McIntosh "come back" with a majority much greater than that by which he was defeated in 1917, but Deputy-Reeve Bell was re-elected with only 13 votes to spare over Robert Dobbin, who was one of the township's Councillors last year. The results reveal the ascendancy of the rural section, but the tabulated figures clearly indicate that the suburban voters gave their support to the farmer candidates more generously than at the last elections.

Mr. Fred Wilson, of Springville, headed the Council with 203 votes, only one more than Mr. Herb. Forster received. Neither of these men were in the Council last year. Mr. Wilson is a newcomer, and Mr. Forster has been out for several years after reaching the position of Deputy-Reeve. Mr. Thomas Henry is the sole surviving 1917 Councillor, thanks to the big vote he polled at May's School, where his Byersville neighbours saved the day for him.

The Clarady district is unrepresented as a result of Reeve Rye's defeat. Mr. Andrew Kent, of Lansdowne Street, was the only other representative of that section. He made a fairly good showing, backed by the ballots marked for him at Grady's store, but the other divisions apparently overlooked him, and the Council is complete as follows:

Reeve McIntosh, Deputy-Reeve Bell, and Councillors Wilson, Forster, and Henry.

Mr. John Williams, of last year's board, was defeated, practically by Mr. Forster, who shared with Mr. Henry the bulk of the Byersville ballots. Mr. Williams made no effort to canvass, and was content to let the ratepayers decide their representatives without any solicitation from him.

Three of the 1917 group only Deputy-Reeve Bell and Councillor Henry survived yesterday's election.

The results follow:

FOR REEVE,

	McIntosh	Rye.
Town Hall	83	12
May's School	113	76
Grady's Store	83	92
	279	180

Majority for McIntosh, 99.

FOR DEPUTY-REEVE.

	Bell	Dobbin
Grady's Store	95	56
Town Hall	33	60
May's School	83	82
	211	198

Majority for Bell, 13.

FOR COUNCIL.

	T. Hall	May's	Grady's	Tl.
WILSON	77	66	60	203
FORSTER	31	97	74	202
HENRY	21	106	70	197
Kent	28	36	98	162
Williams	13	69	54	136

LAST YEAR'S RESULTS.

Comparisons with last year's figures show that there were 17 more votes cast yesterday than a year ago in deciding the reeveship. The 1917 table was as follows:

FOR REEVE,

	McIntosh	Rye.
Grady's	45	141
Town Hall	91	4
May's School	82	79
	218	224

Majority for Rye, 6.

FOR DEPUTY-REEVE.

	Bell	Robson
Grady's	151	36
Town Hall	13	82
May's School	84	78
	248	196

Majority for Bell, 52.

The First Standard Ship Designed by the British Has Proved Successful

THE first of the standardized ships built at the order of the British overnment for the purpose of carrying cargo, has made her trial trip with great success. She has now passed her final tests and has been put into commission.

In designing these standardized ships, the chief points that have been aimed at have been the provision of a good type of cargo-carrier with a high speed and requiring a minimum expenditure of time and material for their construction. This first ship has been completed and loaded ready to put to sea, in less than six months. She belongs to class A, being 8,000 tons deadweight carrying capacity, and having a single deck. Class B is of the same tonnage, but with two decks, and smaller types, named C and D are to be constructed of 5,000 and 3,000 tons of deadweight respectively. All the chief shipbuilders in the United Kingdom are busy constructing these vessels of which there is to be a large output. Not only the hull, but also the machinery and engines are to be standardized, which will obviate delays. The ships are to be built capable of doing the maximum number of knots required for the service in which they are to run. The work of loading and discharging the cargo will be greatly simplified by the provision of very large hatchways, rendering the ships most self-trimming. Simplification is the keynote of their construction in order to produce speedy and economical working. No difficulty is anticipated in selling the vessels into the private merchant marine after the war. Great improvements have been devised in the accommodation provided for the crew. The berths are to be aft in the poop, instead of in the forecastle, and each cubicle is to contain only two berths. Sleeping and messing accommodation are to be entirely separated. A bathroom, steam heating and other improvements are also a feature of the vessels.

Sir Joseph Maclay, controller of shipping, stated that every shipyard was busy on the production of these standardized ships, which were being built for the nation in a time of need, and it was felt that the workmen and employers alike would put forth of their best to produce with the utmost rapidity what was absolutely necessary to carry on the war. The original idea of the standardized ships had been to use as little steel as possible and to insure rapid delivery. The first ship had been built in practically five months, but it was expected that others would be turned out in about four or four and a half months. Some of the ships were specially adapted for carrying grain, being single deckers, others, with twin decks, would be suitable for any class of cargo. Sir Joseph remarked upon the general tendency towards standardization that was to be seen in a number of other manufactures in the country besides shipping. It made matters simpler for every one, and also tended towards economy.

Sir Leo Money, M.P., parliamentary secretary to the shipping control department, said that this ship marked the first step in the great program of shipbuilding which was designed, in combination with the great work of the navy in its offensive against submarines, to bring Great Britain to the happy point at which gains in new ships would compensate for losses. At the same time, America would be similarly developing her magnificent resources and thus they would have the assurance that within a certain period the shipping of the Allies would exhibit a gain instead of a loss, in spite of all the efforts of an unscrupulous enemy. The men who were building these ships were working for the nation, and it was the public and no one else who would get the benefits.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread. the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying, and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Changing the Diet. — It is quite probable that the changes in diet demanded by the necessity now existing will affect over 85 per cent. of the people of all countries except those that live almost exclusively upon fish and vegetables. The diet of even the vegetarians is affected because they have been very free in the use of wheat foods and of milk and butter. One of the greatest dangers to be overcome in making these necessary changes will be the tendency to overeat of certain dishes that are recommended as substitutes for meat. Many people will suffer with hyperacidity, and although they do not recognize the cause, will complain of gas in the stomach, of flatulence, and palpitation of the heart. Many cases indeed will be gravely diagnosed as valvular heart trouble, while as a matter of fact it is merely a case of over-eating of certain foods that are incompatible, and in trying to rid the system of the toxins, the vital forces are doing their best by changing the solid matter into gases and expel them, but sometimes these gases are not easily expelled, but pass from the stomach to the intestines, and from there to the ascending colon, and from there to the transverse colon where they frequently are held until this part of the colon is distended to two or four times its normal size.

The sufferer complains of bloating, and as the distended colon lies directly below the heart, the pressure upon that organ becomes so great as to seriously interfere with its action. Deadly fear then enters the brain, and this aids in paralyzing the action of the nerves, and so aggravates the condition that death sometimes results and the death certificate says, "Heart failure."

Now, as a matter of fact, the heart did fail but that was not the cause of death. Instead of accusing the poor, over-worked and badly crowded heart let us accuse the head that refused to profit by the simple and practical experience of dietician and whenever an excess of acidity appears with the resultant gas and flatulence, not only change the diet, but cut down on the quantity.

It is quite probable that few people really know the difference between hunger and appetite. A true hunger is a natural condition exhibited by all animal and plant life when nourishment is needed. Appetite is an entirely different proposition. No human being ever had a natural hunger for tobacco or tea, coffee, alcohol, pickled or salted olives; but in all cases where those things are craved, it is the result of an appetite unnaturally created, and in all cases of acidity, especially where it has progressed to such a point that constantly increasing doses of bicarbonate of soda are required to "sweeten the stomach" or various digestive tablets must be constantly used, then you must call a halt on these unnatural condiments, cut down on the quantity eaten, find out the proper combinations of food, and live naturally or you are liable first to gastric ulcer and this progressing under continued abuse in combinations and quantity of food finally becomes a cancer, or the fermenting process passes on to the colon and the ballooning of its transverse portion results in the so-called heart trouble.

Now, just a few hints. Don't eat a larger portion of baked beans than you would of roast beef or steak. When you eat beans, don't at the same meal eat cheese, squash, pumpkin or sweet potato. Instead eat an abundance of raw fresh vegetables, and chew them thoroughly.

Among the raw vegetables best suited to the solid nourishment of beans are cabbage, lettuce, spinach, celery, parsley, tomatoes, carrots and cucumbers. With some of these there may be combined in salad form, ripe apples and bananas with a dressing made principally of olive oil, a few drops of lemon juice, a liberal dash of red pepper and a little salt. Hygia salad dressing, however, is preferred in most cases. It is made as follows:

Junice of half a lemon, two eggs, two teaspoonfuls olive oil, one cup whipped cream, and salt and sugar to taste. In making this dressing a good cook will use extreme care, and first separate the yolks from the whites of the eggs, then beat the yolks thoroughly, then add the oil and lemon juice very slowly, and of course stirring rapidly all the while. The whites of the eggs should be thoroughly whipped and added with the salt and sugar, after which beat all together with the whipped cream.

This dressing keeps well if thoroughly covered and kept in the refrigerator. I must frankly state just here that this salad dressing is not demanded by natural hunger but is a harmless and pleasing substitute for other and harmful things for which an unnatural appetite has been acquired.

CLUB NOTES.

Dear Doctor: I would like to have done as you suggested about going south, but our finances do not allow it this winter. Next summer I will see to it that we get fresh vegetables, if God gives us rain. I have in the meantime purchased some vegetables and fruit, and besides that I eat health bread, toast and milk. I never eat meat and not any salty food. I feel well and good, better than I have for several years. I am continuing with the exercises, that is the gymnastic exercises, have also read a great deal in the Home Health Club books. As I now feel entirely well and strong I wish to thank you from the bottom of my heart. If I ever get sick again I will turn to you for advice. Mrs. J.H.

(Answer): I am indeed glad to receive the news of your restoration to health. I want to congratulate you upon the successful manner in which you have so successfully carried out and pepper on it, at least once during each day. You should eat it with a teaspoon so as to be sure and get all of the olive oil on it.

One of the rules of the Home Health Club is to recommend its methods of treatment to others after having received benefit from it yourself, and they in turn will tell their friends. By so doing you will not only have received benefit from the Club yourself but will have the satisfaction of having helped others. Write me whenever you wish to do so as I am always glad to hear from my readers and am very much interested in their cases and their success.

Try Magnesia For Stomach Trouble

It Neutralizes Acidity. Prevents Food Fermentation.

Doubtless, if you are a sufferer from indigestion, you have already tried pepsin, bismuth, soda, charcoal, drugs and various digestive aids and you know these things will not cure your trouble—in some cases do not even give relief.

But before giving up hope and deciding you are a chronic dyspeptic just try the effect of a little magnesia—not the ordinary carbonate, citrate, oxide or milk, but the pure bisurated magnesia which you can obtain from practically any druggist in either powdered or tablet form. Take a teaspoonful of the powder or two compressed tablets with a little water after your next meal, and see what a difference this makes. It will instantly neutralize the dangerous, harmful acid in your stomach which now causes your food to ferment and sour, making gas, wind, flatulence, heartburn, and the bloated or heavy lumpy feeling that seems to follow most everything you eat.

You will find that, provided you take a little bisurated magnesia immediately after a meal, you can enjoy almost anything and enjoy it without any danger of pain or discomfort to follow and moreover the continued use of the bisurated magnesia cannot injure the stomach in any way so long as there are any symptoms of acid indigestion.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Saving of A Household

By EVERETT P. CLARKE

When Helen announced to me that her mother must come to live with us I knew at once that we had come down with a severe case of mother-in-law. There was no escape from the matter. Mrs. Goldwin had been living with a sister who had died, and she was now alone. Helen was her only child, and to refuse the old lady would be sacrilegious. For me to refuse my wife's desire would be equally so. I consented, well knowing that if the mother-in-law remained with us long enough I should be obliged to go elsewhere.

"How does your mother stand on the votes for women question?" I asked Helen.

"She's a vigorous anti."

Since I made no reply to this Helen wanted to know why I asked and when I gave no satisfactory reply said that this would not make any difference, since we were both indifferent on the subject.

Mrs. Goldwin came and saw and conquered. There was no reason for our not getting on pleasantly together except that for forty years she had managed her household and she was too old to go into any one else's house and relinquish the habit. If our maid did not suit her the maid must leave. This kept my wife changing servants and me in misery. We finally gave up trying to keep one, Helen saying that she thought that, with her mother's help, she could easily do the work herself.

This made matters worse, because Mrs. Goldwin insisted on having everything done her way, and Helen was obliged to do it all over again. The old lady might have made possible our going out occasionally evenings by taking care of our little girl, two years old, but she positively declined to take upon herself such responsibility, declaring that "if the the child should get the croup what would I do?" Nevertheless when Helen was present her mother insisted on directing her in her care of the child.

Something must be done. It wouldn't do for me to tell Helen that I was concocting a plan to get rid of her mother. In that case I stood a good chance of being the one to leave. I was obliged to keep my own counsel. One day I announced to Helen that my Aunt Martha needed a home. There were many reasons why we should take her in. What she and Mrs. Goldwin paid us for board would pay our house rent and leave us something over. Then, too, her dear mother would have a companion, and it was quite likely that the two of them would consent to take care of Lucy while we saw something of the world in the evening.

Helen didn't see it in that light, and for the first time I was obliged to gain my own way by domineering. But I thought that it was better to risk a break at this time than have one certainly later, for I am not one of those patient, long-bearing men who will suffer my life and my wife's life to be spoiled by some one who had no business to spoil it.

Aunt Martha came. At first it appeared that the reason I had given for her coming showed my wisdom. Miss Goldwin took a great fancy to my aunt, and it seemed that the two old ladies would become very chummy.

I knew better.

At the second dinner we all had together I said, "Aunt Martha, what's news in the suffragist camp?"

Helen looked at me with wide open eyes. Evidently she saw my plan. She crouched as one waiting for a storm to burst.

"You don't mean," said Mrs. Goldwin, "that you are in favor of women voting?"

"I certainly am," replied Aunt Martha, setting her lower jaw.

"That certainly can't make any difference to you two," interposed Helen. "You don't have to discuss the suffrage question."

"Certainly not," I put in, well knowing that I had thrown a bomb between them with a fuse attached that would certainly bring about an explosion sooner or later.

The two ladies maintained for some time a discreet silence. Whether they would have continued to do so I don't know, but I do know that they would not if I could prevent. The next day at dinner I said:

"Aunt Martha, I see by the morning's paper a statement that in those states which have adopted woman's suffrage"—

"Charles!"

My wife looked a demand that I desist. I desisted. Having touched a match to the fuse, I waited for the explosion.

It came.

"I have seen those statements," said Mrs. Goldwin, "and they are conclusive."

"I, too, have seen them," said my aunt, "and they are absolutely false."

Fearing that my presence might dampen the argument, I left the table. The next day when I came home from business Helen told me that my aunt must leave. I took the ground that if either left it should be her mother.

There was a divided household, but not for long, I being for a compromise—that is, that both ladies should find other abodes—and in time secured it.

Helen and I are still living together in peace and comfort and connubial bliss.

Isn't This True?

When you "feel mean" — dull, tired, nervous, bad digestion, no appetite—

Don't you find out, afterwards, that your bowels were not acting freely and naturally?

Due, of course, to a liver gone on a strike.

Take two or three pills—one. After that, only one, until your're all right.

LIVER TROUBLE and HEARTBURN

CURED BY

MILLBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

When the liver is torpid and inflamed it cannot furnish bile to the bowels, causing them to become bound and costive. The symptoms are a feeling of fullness or weight in the right side, and shooting pains in the same region, pains between the shoulders, yellowness of the skin and eyes, floating specks before the eyes, coated tongue, bad taste in the morning, heartburn, water brash, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills gently unlock the secretions, clear away all effete and waste matter from the system, and give tone and vitality to the whole intestinal track, and are by far the safest and quickest remedy for all diseases or disorders of the liver.

Mrs. A. Cummings, Manchester, Ont., writes: "I have used Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills some time, and can faithfully recommend them to anyone suffering from heartburn and liver trouble. I tried a great many other remedies but they only relieved me for a time. I believe Laxa-Liver Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from liver troubles."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Truth Is Stranger Than Fiction

By RUTH GRAHAM

When a story is ready made there is nothing to do but tell it. This tale, the incidents of which really happened, is one of the improbable kind which go to prove that truth is stranger than fiction. The only change in it from the truth is the names of the actors and the locations.

We must go back to that period when a German army was thrown into Belgium; when the French gathered their forces to defend their capital and the English threw across the channel what troops were available to assist their allies. Yet it was not there that our story begins, but in a colony of the British empire. War had not yet opened when a girl and her mother in Canada were discussing a ball dress for the former, though the girl was more interested in the expected appearance at the ball of an Englishman than in her apparel.

"I hear," said Edith Warren to her mother, "that a son of the MacDermotts has come out from bonny Scotland to see his father and mother. Maybe he will be at the Scotia ball this evening."

"I think," replied her mother, "that you had better wear your pink silk to the ball, Edith. It is just the shade for your complexion."

Edith wore her pink silk to the Scotia ball and met Ian MacDermott, a captain in a Scotch regiment. Whether it was the dress or Edith's beauty or her charming manners that won the captain there is no record. Certain it is that she won him, and he carried her back with him to Scotland from her home in America on a honeymoon trip.

Scarcely had the newly wedded pair got settled in their home in Edinburgh when England declared war against Germany and threw a force across the channel into France. The honeymoon of the MacDermotts had not ended before the captain bade an adieu to his bride and went in command of his company to the front.

One night the English and Germans met in a hot fight. MacDermott's regiment was obliged to give ground before a superior force. The captain was struck by a fragment of a shell and left on the field among the dead and wounded. Then the British rallied and recovered the lost ground.

When it became possible for the Red Cross and the army surgeons to rescue the wounded a surgeon, coming upon the body of Captain MacDermott, took the identification tag from it and reported him dead.

It was a sharp blow to the bride when she received news of the death of her husband. She gave up her home in Edinburgh and removed to another locality, but only temporarily, for she designed to return to her parents in America. She was not able to leave at once, but as soon as arrangements could be made she sailed from a Scotch port for New York.

There was the usual bustle upon the sailing of a steamer. Mrs. MacDermott, in deep mourning, stood on the deck looking out upon the country in which so much happiness had been expected, grieving over the wreck of her hopes. The announcement had been made that all who were to go ashore must leave. When time had expired for this an order was given to draw in the gangplank.

At this moment an auto came dashing up on the dock, sounding signals for persons to get out of the way. Evidently some belated passenger had arrived, and the hauling in of the gangplank ceased. An officer in uniform jumped from the car and hurried aboard the ship.

A thrill shot through the breast of the woman in mourning. She saw in the newcomer her husband. Was she dreaming? Impossible! Had she become demented by the shock of passing so suddenly from a bride to a widow? Her brain was in a whirl until the officer, coming up on the deck, spied her and, running toward her, clasped her in his arms.

* * * * * * *

We left Captain MacDermott on the field of battle, the identification tag being taken from his body. Later while the work of removing the wounded was in progress a surgeon coming upon MacDermott saw signs of life in him. The captain was removed to a field hospital. Then he was sent across the channel and placed in a regularly organized hospital for the sick and wounded of the war. There he lay for a long while unconscious.

In time Captain MacDermott was brought round and was discharged from the hospital. He made all possible haste to his home in Scotland to find that his wife had given up her home and gone elsewhere, but where she had gone he was not informed. His only means of ascertaining her location seemed to be to send a cablegram to her relatives in America. This he did and received a reply that she was about to sail from Glasgow for home.

Such is the romance of a bride and groom which if told in a story book would subject the author to a charge of inventing what was so improbable as not to be legitimate fiction. In the war between the states there were cases of soldiers reported dead who were not even wounded. But nowadays every soldier carries on his person his name and other information concerning him. It would seem that the old causes of error are by this eliminated. Yet Captain MacDermott's being discovered insensible permitted the tag to tell a false story which was a long while being contradicted.

The Lesser Evil.

"Lushman declared he would rather go to jail than pay his divorced wife alimony."

"Did she let him?"

"Yes; she said she'd much rather see him save his money behind bars than spend it over them."

The Spirit of the Times.

It is an age of artificial devices. Rare, indeed, is the man and rarer still the woman in whose physical makeup there is not something false, either eyes or teeth or hair.

No Chance.

Mrs. Jones—It's queer that baby doesn't talk. She's almost two years old and hasn't spoken a word yet. Mr. Jones—I know, dear, but do you ever give baby a chance?

A sharp tongue is the only edged tool that grows keener with constant use.—Irving.

Submarine Has Failed.

Frank Simonds, the great war expert, has written an article for Farm and Fireside in which he says: "Half the advantage of superior German preparedness was swept away when the British fleet made it possible to transform America into the factory and granary of the Allies. It will be the verdict of history that the defeat of Germany was made in the United States, at least the Germans already attribute to American help the protraction of the war. This is the contribution of sea power.

"Against sea power Germany had devised the submarine, or rather she had relied upon the submarine. In her plans it played the part of the old privateer. It was a commerce destroyer, and what it undertook to do was to prey upon commerce, upon the commerce on which depended the very life of Great Britain, since without imports she would starve to death. Yet despite all the sensational successes of the submarine, it has failed in its purpose. It has not isolated Britain, it has not produced starvation, it has not even interrupted the flow of munitions or of supplies for the Allied armies. It has sunk many merchantmen, but it will not be the deciding factor in the war."

The High Hatbox.

If you keep your hatbox on a high shelf in a closet you may find the following suggestion worth trying: Slit open the two upright edges of one side of the hatbox, so that when the cover is raised this side will drop down as if on hinges. This will allow you to remove or replace the hat without taking the box from the shelf.

People Who Rarely Wink.

There are people who rarely wink. How they manage to get along without doing so is a marvel, but somehow or other they do. Some eyes are naturally more moist than others, and the very moist eye does not so much need the assistance of the lids to keep the eyeball bright. It is a constitutional matter, for winking, though under the control of the will, is done so quickly that it is practically an involuntary action. Men wink when they feel that the eye is uncomfortably dry, and when it does not become dry the necessity for winking is not felt.

TELL YOUR WIFE CORNS LIFT OFF

Doesn't hurt a bit to lift corns or calluses off with fingers

Not a twinge of pain or soreness before applying, or afterwards. This may sound like a dream to corn-pestered men and women who have been cutting, filing and wearing torturous plasters. Yes! Corns lift out and calluses peel off as if by magic.

A small bottle of freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store. Apply a few drops directly upon your tender corn or callus, and instantly the soreness disappears; then shortly the corn or callus will be so loose that it lifts off.

Freezone dries instantly. It doesn't eat our the corn or callus, but just shrivels it up so it lifts away without even irritating the surrounding skin. Women should keep a tiny bottle handy on the dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.

Children In New York Invest $41,292 In War Stamps

That the seeds of thrift have taken root in the minds of the 800,000 school children of New York is shown in the first report submitted by Henry R. M. Cook, auditor of the Board of Education, to Frederick W. Allen, director of War Savings for New York.

It shows that up to December 21st the pupils have invested $41,292.52 in Thrift and War Savings Stamps. This contribution toward New York's quota of 10,000,000 is considered notable in view of the fact that the Red Cross drive, the campaign for Jewish charities, and other war relief work, and the demands of the Christmas season went forward at the same time.

"I know of no single instance which has done more to prove the patriotism of the children and of their teachers, who have spared no pains to explain the aims and purposes of the War Savings campaign and of the Thrift movement in general, than in the success of the campaign among schol children," said Director Allen.

Third Offensive Against Turks Started By British

Success Reported in Arabia Where Prisoners and Guns Were Captured---Peace Negotiations Have Been Resumed at Brest Litovisk, Berlin Announces--British Post is Raided by Enemy Party

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, January 8.—A third offensive against the Turks has been started by British expeditionary forces, according to official reports received to-day. In Arabia in the vicinity of Shanin the British troops yesterday captured sixty-two Turks and several guns.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 8.—There is no indication this far of the manner in which Premier Lloyd George's definition of war aims has been received in Russia or even whether his speech has been published there. The Bolshevik press of Petrograd continues to attack Great Britain and her Allies, the Pra Vda and the Izvestia accusing Lloyd George of desiring to have the Russians make peace with the Central Powers so as to give the Allies free hand to negotiate to their own advantage. M. Farbman, former London correspondent of the Petrograd Bourse Gazette, writes for the London Press that the Premier's statement of war aims has widened and deepened the gulf between the west and revolutionary Russia instead of bridging it. The Premier's reference to Russia, says M. Farbman, will be interpreted there as giving Germany a free hand to deal with Russia as she desires. The writer accuses the Premier of throwing over Russia in childish petulence and vindictiveness because the Bolsheviki have been guilty of a breach of diplomatic decorum.

(By W. S. Forrest.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, January 8.—The substitution of paper pulp "fibre tissues" for surgical dressings, compresses and bandages in war hospitals in France may result from a test soon to be made in a certain war zone hospital. The enormous demand for cotton and linen dressings during the three years of war has begun to create difficulty in obtaining an ample supply. Experiments in New York some time ago with the new fibre tissue are declared here to have given results equal to either cotton or linen. A ton of tissue manufactured specially for a well-known New York surgeon now in France is on its way from Oregon to the war zone. If the experiments soon to be made here are deemed successful, any quantity can be manufactured in France. As cotton, which furnishes material for most surgical dressings is not grown in France, the saving in ocean tonnage on this article alone, it is believed may be highly important if the tissue is generally adopted. The new dressing, it is said, has not only equal softness with others, but can be manufactured quicker and at much less expense.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, January 8.—Bolsheviki Foreign Minister Trotsky has arrived at Brest-Litovsk and peace negotiations are to be resumed this afternoon, according to Berlin despatches to-day.

Fourteen Conditions of Peace Stated By President Wilson

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, January 8.—The President to-day presented the following necessary elements of world peace:

1. Open covenants of peace without private international understandings.
2. Absolute freedom of seas in peace or war as they may be closed by international action.
3. The removal of all economic barriers and the establishment of equality of trade conditions among nations.
4. Guarantees for the reduction of national armaments to the lowest point consistent with domestic safety.
5. Impartial adjustment of all colonial claims based upon the principle that the peoples concerned have equal weight with the interest of government.
6. The evacuation of all Russian territory.
7. The evacuation of Belgium without any attempt to limit sovereignty.
8. All French territory to be freed and restored and reparation made for the taking of Alsace-Lorraine.
9. The readjustment of Italy's fronties.
10. The freest opportunity for autonomous development of the peoples of Austria-Hungary.
11. The evacuation of Roumania Serbia and Montenegro with access to the seas for Serbia.
12. Secure sovereignty for Turkey's portion of the Ottoman Empire. With the Dardanelles permanently opened to all nations.
13. The establishment of an independent Polish state.
14. General association of nations for guarantees of political independence and territorial integrity to large and small states alike.

"For such arrangements of covenants," said the President in conclusion, "we are willing to fight and continue to fight until they are achieved. But only because we wish the right to prevail and desire a just and stable peace."

Such a programme, he said, removed the chief provocations.

SAYS SPEECH HAS WIDENED THE GULF

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, January 8.—"Instead of bridging Lloyd George's speech has widened the gulf between the west and revolutionary Russia," declared M. Farbaman, a well known Russian journalist, in to-day's Chronicle. "He deplores the lack of consultation with the Allies," the writer continued. "So does Russia—but her conscience is clear. She fought literally to the bitter end, she piled up mountains of corpses and poured out rivers of blood, her casualties were more than all others put together. Whoever washes his hands of her must know that Russia is no longer able to fight—and is threatened with the loss of her colonies if she doesn't fight in denial of the whole of the Allies' principles."

USE OF PRIVATE CARS BY MINISTERS CAUSES CRITICISM

Four Were Used to Carry Messrs. Carvell, Reid, Ballantyne and Mewburn to Halifax, With the Result That Forty Tons of Coal Were Used

SCHWAB'S EXAMPLE

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 8. — The use and abuse of private railroad cars comes in for comment by both Ottawa newspapers. The comment is based on criticism which has appeared in the press recently in connection with two incidents.

It has been stated that four private cars were utilized to take Hon. Messrs. Carvell, Reid, Ballantyne and Mewburn to Halifax a couple of weeks ago, and that a special section of the Ocean Limited had to be made up for the purpose. Apart from the waste of motive power thus involved, it is contended that upwards of forty tons of coal were utilized in transit.

Further criticism was heard concerning the use by Darcey Scott of the Railway Board of a private car for the purpose of visiting his summer residence up the Gatineau. It was alleged that the car remained for several days, consuming coal at the place in fuestion.

The Ottawa Journal, speaking generally of the use of private cars, points out that Charles M. Schwab, President of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, has decided not to use a private car until after the war, and declares that Socialism feeds upon the abuse of the privilege.

Tudor To Lead

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The Australian Cabinet, headed by William Morris Hughes, has resigned, acordng to a Reuter's despatch from Melbourne. Frank G. Tudor, the Labour leader, has been summoned to form a new ministry.

Since the defeat of the government's conscription bill in Australia, it has been reported that Premier Hughes probably would resign.

On the defeat of the conscription bill in November, 1916, Premier Hughes tendered the resignation of his Cabinet. A new Cabinet, however, was formed, with Hughes as Premier. Last fall he again brought up the conscription bill and in the referendum shortly berfore Christmas, conscription was defeated by a majority greater than in 1916. The majority against conscription was nearly 200,000, Australian soldiers giving a majority against the bill also. Frank G. Tudor was Minister of Trade and Customs in the Fisher Cabinet, which resigned in the spring of 1909.

Splendid Sum From The Empire

Thanks to the great kindness of Dr. F. L. Robinson, who placed the Empire Theatre at the disposal of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Great War Veterans' Association, well over $100 was realised for the clubroom fund yesterday afternoon and evening.

Dr. Robinson turned over the theatre and his splendid programme of films to the Auxiliary, and the proceeds were all devoted to the Veterans' fund.

Major Davidson, who was warmly welcomed, gave an interesting address in the afternoon and Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., addressed the audience in the evening.

The affair was a great success and was another illustration of the patriotic spirit of Dr. Robinson, who, for the past three years, has repeatedly given the proceeds of his theatre for such purposes.

Thanks are also due to Miss Flowers and Mr. Cyril Devey, who presided at the piano in the afternoon and evening respectively.

A GERMAN OFFENSIVE

United States Secretary of War Baker Says Expected Attack Will Be Greatest Enemy Has Tried But Expresses Confidence in the British and French

ASSAULT DELAYED

Canadian Press Despatch:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—An expected German offensive in the west, Secretary Baker's weekly war review today says, "will possibly be their greatest asault, "but the British and the French armies can be relied upon to withstand the shock. Summarizing the situation on the eve of the possible great offensive, Secretary Baker confidently points out that through sixteen fierce battles of great magnitude the British and French have steadily pushed ahead with methodical and cumulative gains. The expected offensive, he points out, probably is being delayed for massing great supplies of munitions, guns and troops, and the Germans may be expected to strain every fibre of their remaining strength

LIBERAL EXECUTIVE MET LAST NIGHT

Committee Appointed to Meet Conservative Executive Relative to Avoiding Election

As a direct result of certain expressions of opinion published in the local press by prominent members of the Conservative party of West Peterborough relative to the political situation in this riding, where a strong desire was ehown to avoid a party election here, the executive of the West Peterborough Liberal Association met last night.

President J. J. Hartley was in the chair and Mr. J. A. O'Brien acted as secretary.

After discussing the matter, a committee composed of President Hartley, Messrs .George E. Elliott, G. Walter Green, Jos. Wearing, and G. G. Gladman was appointed to meet the executive of the West Peterborough Conservative Association, if the latter so desire, to further discuss the matter jointly with a view of amicably arranging matters so as to avoid an election in this riding, and to report back to the Liberal Executive.

E. K. GRAHAM RECEIVES BONUS PROMISED BY COUNCIL LAST YEAR

The bonus of $500 offered by the city to E. K. Graham, contractor, for the removal of garbage last year, to cover the increased cost of labour, was confirmed by the Council last night. It is understood that Mr. Graham will sell his effects by auction shortly and take up farming near Uxbridge.

A Deputation To Point Out Labour Difficulties In West

Will Tell the Government That It Is Not So Much a Question of Breaking Up Virgin Land as It Is to Work the Farms Already Under Cultivation

TO IMPORT CHINESE?

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 8.—Western men are due in Ottawa this week to present to the Government certain proposals for the supply of labour necessary to make possible increased or even sustained production. They will tell the Government that at this point it is not so much a matter of breaking up millions of acres of land as yet untouched by the plow in the west as a question of working to capacity the farms already under cultivation.

They will also say that Austrians and men of German origin who are exempt from military service are coolly holding up the farmer for from $4.50 to $5 per day and can't be got to work at all in winter, so affluent have they become from the earnings of summer. Exactly what the proposals of the western men are in detail cannot yet be ascertained as ministers here do not themselves know when questioned as to how the problem of labour can be met.

Ministers hint at "importation." When Chinese are mentioned the ministers do not shake their heads or demur to any appreciable extent.

"I, maybe," said one. "Why not?"

As a matter of fact it is not at all without realm of possibilities that indentured Chinese of the stalwart Mongolian type now working behind the lines in France may be brought to the Dominion. The bringing of these men in is fraught with difficulty, it is admitted, but so is the winning of the war. Canadian labour, it is recognized, must be protected, and should the scheme be adopted every precaution must be taken so that they shall be returned to their native countries as soon as the present labour emergency is over.

CONSCRIPTED LABOUR.

It is fairly obvious that men cannot be conscripted individually for farm work. To place a conscripted individual on a farm would mean that he would have to be under the surveillance of the farmer all the time. Military discipline is necessary for conscription, but men could be conscripted and organized in platoons or companies for farm work. With the aid of motor tractors, large sections of unbroken land could be torn up and placed under crop. These gangs could even be used to put in crops on farms already under cultivation, where the dearth of labour is resulting in increased acreage being put under grass and not wheat. It has been stated that draftees under the Military Service Act might be diverted to the farms instead of the trenches. It is not considered at all likely here that such action will be taken.

Category A men are needed overseas for the reinforcements of Canadians. It might be, however, that men of other categories in the first class would be conscripted for the farms.

"Just look around," remarked a member of the government in the cafe of a prominent Ottawa hotel the other day. "Look at the waiters." These fellows might just as well be feeding hogs as feeding people. There are lots of women who could take their places here. It has been suggested that steps might be taken to do away with needless duplication of places catering to public wants so that men could thus be released for farms.

Among other suggestions is one that Canada secure German prisoners now eating their heads off in the British internment camps.

These prisoners have to be fed with food brought from the Dominion and it is pointed out that much precious cargo space could be saved if, instead they were fed here. They would, of course, have to be continually under guard while engaged in their labour.

"If we could bring back a few hundred of these fellows on each boat that comes over," remarked a man the other day, "it might go a long way towards insuring returned ships against submarine depredations.

The plans of western men will be submitted this week in all probability.

City Council's Tribute To Late Aldermen John H. Smith, And Condolence To Bereaved Family

Moved by Alderman Weir,
Seconded by Alderman Saunders,—

That this Council has learned with keen regret of the death this afternoon of Alderman John H. Smith. The late Alderman Smith was a native and a life-long resident of Peterborough, and gave to the public good service as a member of the Village Council of Ashburnham, when the East Ward was a separate municipality, and later as a member of the Board of Education of the City, and during last year as a representative of the East Ward in this Council. He was most regular in his attendance at the meetings of the Council and Committees, and natural ability and excellent mechanical training, as well as his experience, made him a valuable member. Personally the members of this Council mourn the lass of a good-hearted friend and public-spirited citizen. We also desire to extend to Mrs. Smith and her son the deep sympathy of the Council in their very sad and sudden bereavement, and in doing so we can assure them that we voice the sympathy of the whole community.

Carried.

ENEMY'S REPLY TO LLOYD GEORGE IS EAGERLY AWAITED

Meanwhile However the Bolshevik Manoeuvre Has Thrown Germany Into Political Turmoil—Between Militarist and Non-Militarist Leaders

RESIGNATIONS THREATENED

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Jan. 8.— A reply from the Central Powers to the statement of the British war aims made by Premier Lloyd George Saturday is awaited here with the greatest interest. It is believed that Germany and her allies cannot decline to reply in some form and to make the reply more straightforward and definite than any previous statement of their aims. But if German papers correctly mirror the situation there, the test which the Bolsheviki have made of Germany's attitude toward the principle of no annexations, has thrown Germany into a political turmoil. Advices from capitals of neutral countries bordering on Germany show that the opinion prevalent there is that one of the most severe national crisis in the history of Germany is developing as a result of different views between militarist and non-militarist leaders regarding the government's attitude toward Russia. It is reported generally that General Von Ludendorff as leader of the former group, actually has gone so far as to threaten the resignation of himself and Field Marshal Von Hindenburg.

First Mail For Europe In Two Weeks

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—The first mail to leave for Europe in two weeks was on its way to-day.

Liners and merchant ships which have been tied up for that time due to lack of coal, received a good supply during the past 24 hours, and sailings will be resumed as rapidly as possible.

This will relieve the condition at the docks and piers, where thousands of tons of supplies have been tied up.

Every ship arriving or departing from New York will soon be examined, as at Halifax or other ports of call. A special searching squad of 600 men is being organized to board every ship as it enters or prepares to leave this port.

GOOD HEALTH

Is impossible without good eyesight. Eye strains are the direct cause of all sorts of nervous disorders. Distressing headaches are one of the most common symptoms. See Dr. Lacey, 410 George Street. Open Wednesday evening.

A PRESENTATION FROM WAR VETERANS TO THEIR PRESIDENT

Comrade H. J. Staunton Receives Handsome Dinner Set as a Wedding Gift—Officers Installed at Last Night's Meeting of the Association

DECIDE ON TAG DAY

An interesting feature at the regular meeting of the Great War Veterans' Association in the recreation room of the armouries last night was the presentation of a dinner set to President H. J. Staunton as a wedding gift from the members of the Association.

Secretary Whatley made the presentation, and in doing so remarked that it was the first opportunity that the Association had had as a body to congratulate Comrade Staunton on his recent marriage and to wish him many happy years of married life. The members had learned to admire and respect him as their president and they asked him to accept the gift as a tangible proof of their sentiment, at the same time hoping that every happiness might attend himself and Mrs. Staunton.

The presentation was loudly applauded by the members.

In reply Comrade Staunton expressed his sincere thanks to the members for their useful and splendid gift.

Thos. Miller, W. O., formerly of the 93rd Battalion, was present at the meeting and considerable business was done.

The installation of the new officers was the first item on the programme, the following being installed and the duties of each officer being explained to the meeting:

President—Comrade H. J. Staunton.
Vice-Pres.—Comrade W. Perks.
Secretary—Comrade S. Whatley.
Treasurer—Comrade G. Coleman.
Fin.-Sec.—Comrade F. Haggart.
Sergt. at Arms—Comrade J. Coppick.

Executive committee— Comrades E. Mesley, J. A. McNabb, J. Bacon, Walter Hughes and G. Fallen.

Auditors—Comrades Fred Long and G. Fallen.

Relief committee— Comrades J. C. Smith, J. Coppick, J. Bacon and M. J. Gahagan.

Seven applications for membership were read and favourably passed upon by the meeting. Among new members thus admitted was Sergt.-Major Thos. Miller, Co. O. formerly of the 93rd Battalion.

Nine members were nominated for the five positions on the Entertainment committee and on a ballot being taken the following were declared elected: Comrade W. Hughes, chairman; Comrades Geo. Coleman, Gilbert Dyer and Kelly.

On motion of Comrade R. H. Muir, it was decided that the G. W. V. A. should hold their annual tag day this year on April 22, the anniversary of the second Battle of Ypres.

The question of the 93rd Band instruments was again discussed, and it was decided that as many members as possible should form a deputation to wait upon the City Council at the meeting of that body on Monday night and that Lieut.-Col. Johnston and Comrade W. Hughes should be the spokesmen of the deputation.

In this connection it should be not-

CO-OPERATION.

Rev. Canon Davidson, in his excellent sermon at the special service of intercession in St. John's, on Sunday night, used as his text something not to be found as a word in Holy Scripture—"cooperation" —but something that, in spirit, comprehends the whole divine plan of the relations between man and his Creator and King. Cooperation has been applied in Peterborough and Canada to the work of war-winning, and in the field of war to victory-winning.

In ecclesiastical and human relationships, it is the one thing needful, in both fact and spirit, to bring realisation of the brotherhood of man and the fatherhood of God—to give us and humanity at large, the essence, the full fruits, of what we are fighting for in this terrible war—truth, and justice, and righteousness. These find their highest meaning in social and human relations, and if a close, an intense, and real human relationship, fellowship and neighbour-ship is not established and its spirit expressed in our daily associations as neighbours, fellow men and fellow citizens, the conditions are not created for the most effective and beneficent cooperation in making the world better, which after all, is the sole and real object of Christianity, and its handmaid, Christian civilization.

We cannot effectively cooperate in all the various activities our responsibilities of Christian citizenship impose, unless our hearts are right towards each other, unless they beat in sympathy and harmony. We are divided by political, racial, social and —saddest of all—religious discords. We are inclined too much to give them prominence and permit them to become elements in influencing our lives and relationships, to the destruction, or at any rate, impairment, of the social, civic and national harmony, without which the highest moral good and greatest material good are impossible of attainment.

Judging from the character and influence of one or two intercessory services on Sunday as ordained by the King; and adding to them the character and influence of hundreds of thousands of such services, attended by millions of worshippers throughout our vast Empire, all lifting to the one throne of grace one prayer, we cannot but have regard to the unspeakable potency and influence of the grandest form of cooperation, as a type and model, of all subordinate forms. What more than such a day can show the weakness and insignificance of our petty denominational divisions, the thinness of the comparatively trivial theological hedges that separate us; and overwhelm us with a universal sense of the oneness of our common Christianity, and inspire the yearning and resolve for closer and more practical Christian co-operation as the essential antecedent, as the best and truest cooperation in all our human relations, political, civic and social? With this realized the golden age of the world and humanity would be at hand; would be here.

The talk of peace fills the air; but the action of war still goes on, and must go on, till peace on right principles is possible.

THE TRENT CANAL.

The Trent Canal is approaching completion and if, when it is finished, it lends itself to as much commercial profit, in the next generation, as it has done to political exploitation in the past generation, it will well justify its cost. For the past thirty years, or more, the Trent Canal has been a crutch upon which politicians tried to limp into election. More broken promises have been made from time to time in its name, than is that of any other political device in the history of the country.

Not only that but it has been made a medium of distribution of political patronage. The last expiring effort in this direction was that of Mr. E. Guss Porter, the newly-made Unionist representative of West Hastings. He demanded the head of an humble "axeman" employed on the Trent Canal because he had voted against him.

This is a sad retrogression to abuse of patronage on the Trent Canal. But it appears old habits die hard, and that possibly Mr. Porter felt that a recent notable "clean-up" in the Trent Canal in which the chief "offender" lost his position, was only a little make-believe, another form of making political capital out of the Trent Canal. The chief "offender" was dismissed; but the bona fides of the penalty was neutralized by his being given a more lucrative position under the same government he was considered, and semi-judicially pronounced, unworthy to serve. Anyway Mr. Porter has tried once more to work the political game; and if he is permitted to "get away with it" the Union government is not living up to its pledge of non-partizan administration of the public service. If it lives up to its creed we may expect that in respect of many other things, as of the Trent Canal, the wicked politicians will cease from troubling and the weary waterway will be at rest—and used to bring cordwood to Peterborough from the north country in relief of the fuel scarcity that threatens again next winter.

The Union government announces a big programme of shipbuilding; the cart before the horse. Better inaugurate a big programme of production so that the ships will have something to carry, when they are built.

ESTABLISH WAR ARCHIVES.

It is to be hoped that the suggestion of Mr. Mowat, chairman of the Library Board, to which attention was called by the letter of Mr. Dela Fosse in Saturday's issue, will be noted and acted upon by those concerned — namely that letters and documents relating to the war received by relatives of those at the front, will be deposited at the Public Library for purposes of collocation, preservation and for future reference. Much valuable history is weakened or made imperfect by loss or failure to preserve in accessible form documents and data relating to large events. By depositing the letters or documents referred to, they will be preserved and tabulated, available for future reference. They will be matters of rare interest when the general, and especially, the local history of Peterborough's participation in the war, comes to be written. Where sentimental reasons give reluctance to the surrender of original documents or letters, certified copies, though less desirable than the original, will be considered satisfactory. General compliance with the request to deposit local war documents and letters in the Public Library, will result in the accumulation of a great deal, not only of valuable historical material, but of material of a patriotic and sentimental value.

The reports from the war front indicate that the Canadians are in the thick of it again, and we may count upon hearing that they maintain their record.

EX.-ALD. G. EVANS MAY ENTER THE CITY COUNCIL

The death of Ald. J. H. Smith has created a vacancy in the new 1918 Council which will have to be filled. Ex-Ald. George Evans is looked upon as a likely candidate, with a strong possibility of securing the representation by acclamation.

When hope looks backward it is transformed into regret.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier The Man of The Hour in Canada

The Toronto Globe Wednesday issued a call for unity of race and creed in Canada. It quotes La Presse of Montreal as saying: "Like his English-speaking fellow-citizens, the French-Canadian desires to see Canada the most beautiful country, as well as the richest of the universe. Nine times out of ten the Englishman who comes in contact with the French-Canadian makes a friend of him at once. We could, in fact, multiply such cases, so let us, as much as possible, pull down the wall between the two races."

The Globe itself says:

"Canadians of both races must broaden their view-point. They must earnestly strive to understand and appreciate the position of 'the other fellow.' They must eschew the unwholesome narrowness of the racialist and the creed-bigot. They must sternly set their faces against the perverted pleas of the professional agitator."

We have pointed out during the recent election that the life's work of Sir Wilfrid Laurier has been to abolish race and creed distinctions in Canada, and make of them one united Canadian people. This was amply proved by Professor Skelton, in his recent work, "The Day of Sir Wilfrid Laurier," several selections from which were published during the contest.

These quotations prove the absolute independence of Sir Wilfrid Laurier at every period of his life. No matter where the threat might come from, he was always true to Britsh ideals.

The recent election has strengthened his position as the champion of British liberty and British institutons in Canada. Looking back at his unstained record, who can imagine him a party to an unjust franchise act? Who can imagine him deliberately setting to work to govern Canada, or the Canadian people, against the will of the Canadian people?

He has been for many years past, and is now, more than ever, not only the first citizen of Canada, but the truest interpreter of British freedom. It is known that his influence was not confined to Canada. His was the broad vision that took in the whole Empire. While his opponents were plotting how they could upset him at an election, he was doing his best to strengthen the ties that bind the colonies to the British Empire. To him, is due, in large measure, the loyal stand taken by Louis Botha in South Africa. If there has been weakness anywhere, either in Africa or Canada, or any other part of the British Empire, it is not chargeable to either Louis Botha of Dutch descent, or Wilfrid Laurier of French descent. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was not fairly treated by the Borden government. The people of Canada were not fairly treated by the Borden government. Is it any wonder that in this week's Literary Digest we find the Prussian franchise proposed, taking on some of the features of our own wartime franchise act. The Berlin Vorwaerts says: "This deprives a great number of Prussian citizens of their franchise." The Bremen Weser Zeitung says: "The disadvantages of the restrictions cannot be under-rated." While Dr. Strobel, an independent Socialist deputy, says: "Peace would soon be achieved if Prussianized Germany were so reformed that it could be regarded as belonging to the world's culture." The military party's history as illustrated by the ultimatum to Serbia shows that of necessity foreign countries can have no faith in the German government so long as it finds its support in the present ruling classes.

The very thing this province thought it got rid of away back in 1837, was "ruling classes," but there are those who would turn back the hand of time and for a very short time let us hope a parliament elected by an unjust franchise act will remain in power in Canada. The true Briton is Sir Wilfrid Laurier, always just; the man of the hour in Canada; who will continue to answer the call in Canada for a united Canada freed from race and creed prejudice, is Sir Wilfrid Laurier. There should be no division between French and British. To use the question long ago asked by Richard Lalor Shiel, the Irish orator, and apply it: Did not th blood of Great Britain and of France flow in the same stream and drench the same field? When the chill morning dawned their dead lay cold and stark together. The green corn of spring now breaks from their commingled dust, the dew of heaven falls upon their union in the grave."

Surely there should never be anything allowed to separate them, or their descendants. They have died for each other. There is no man, in either France or England, truer to democracy and humanity than Wilfrid Laurier, and no man who will stand higher in the estimation of all Canada when the complete story of the war is written.—London Advertiser.

COUNCIL PLEASED WITH THE WORK OF FIRE DEPT.

"I think Chief Grange and his men handled the Canoe Factory fire very satisfactorily," Ald. Dobbin commented at last night's meeting of the Council.

"They did good work," Mayor-elect Duncan added, "but it occurred to me that, with so much hose in use, they might have had trouble if another fire had broken out at that time.

Ald. Dobbin stated that the apparatus that signalled to the pumping station was out of order. When the hydrants were opened the pressure at the station dropped, but the engineer immediately ran it up again, but had to telephone down town for information of the cause of the decreased pressure. This apparatus will be immediately repaired.

CANON DAVIDSON AUTHOR OF BROCHURE

Book Has Just Been Issued By Publishers

LONDON, Dec. 20.—"Can England's Church Win England's Manhood?" is the title of a brochure just issued by Macmillan & Co., Ltd., the author of which is Major the Rev. J. C. Davidson, of Peterborough, Ont. This book is the outcome of studies in camp, field and hospital while on active service, of the spiritual condition of British soldiers, and it has been warmly commended by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Gwynne, C.M.G., Deputy Chaplain General. The author, who has recently returned to Canada at the urgent request of his parishioners, does not attach his name to the publication, but remains anonymous under "An Army Chaplain."

Normal School Literary Society

On Monday afternoon, 7th January, a meeting of the Normal School Literary Society was held.

The programme consisted of "A Mock Trial," presented by the pupils. The jury, consisting of members of the school, were first called to the front, presenting their excuses. The plaintiff was then cross-examined.

The trial was very humorous, and called for roars of laughter from the audience.

SHOULD RETURN CONDUCT MONEY

Word is coming to some of those applying for exemption that their exemption has been disallowed by one tribunal and subsequently a letter will follow stating that their claim has been allowed. In some cases where their claim has been allowed, conduct money is being sent, together with a summons to report at Kingston. As the exemption frees them from this requirement it would be advisable to return the conduct money to Kingston. The confusion is the result of the different appointments made by the government for the benefit of the farmers and will straighten itself out. In the meantime it is well to observe caution.

Effect of Address

Canadian Press Despatch:

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—The market halted again during the mid-day while the President's address was in the course of publication. Immediately after, however, selling set in, the leaders reacting one to four points from early maximums, his was followed by irregular rallies.

93rd Man Dies

Another member of the 93rd Battalion has made the supreme sacrifice overseas, in the person of Pte. R. Anderson of Hiawatha, who is today officially reported died of wounds. Pte. Anderson was reported wounded a few days ago. He enlisted here in December, 1915, and after going overseas with the 93rd, was transferred to a Canadian Infantry Battalion at the front.

Letters Are Appreciated

Pte. Geo. S. Carter Says Soldiers Look Forward to the Coming of the Mail

A local friend has received the following interesting letter from Pte. George S. Carter, formerly of the letter-carriers' staff at the Peterborough Post Office, who went overseas with the 39th Battalion:

No. 412125, C Coy.,
France, 16th Dec., 1917.

Dear Mrs. ——,

A few lines to let you know I am still well, and to thank you and Mrs. Robinson for the nice parcel you sent. I received it O.K. It is and everything in it was O.K. It is not very often that I hear from anybody on my old route; you see it is nearly three years since I used to bring your mail, and I am just as pleased to get mail as you used to be. That is one thing the boys all look forward to every day, and if the orderly corporal doesn't bring lots of mail, he sometimes doesn't get very kind words.

I will write Mrs. Robinson a letter during the week. I often get a letter from Mrs. Dean, on Charlotte Street, and I also got a card from Mrs. Turner on Gilmour Street.

Well, Mrs. ——, I am glad to say that I am getting along fine, and so far have been very lucky. I was in some very hot fighting (taken out by censor), went (taken out by censor), went (taken out by censor) officer. I was one of the lucky nine, but I had a close call. I got buried up to my neck, but two lads stopped and dug me out. Lieut. Gordon Hall, who used to live next to Mrs. Robinson, was wounded in the forehead and in the ear; he was about a dozen yards from me when a shell exploded and hit him.

I have seen quite enough of war, and I am ready to come home any time, and I hope it won't be long before all the boys are home again. I am glad to say that we are getting very nice weather for this time of the year. There are lots of things I should like to tell you, but the censor might burn the letter; so I must wait until I get back on my old job again.

Well, Mrs. ——, I guess I must ring off this time. So, wishing you and all a merry Christmas and a happy, peaceful New Year.—I remain, yours sincerely,

Pte. Geo. S. Carter.

PETERBORO' SOLDIER GASSED SECOND TIME

Mrs. Thomas Miller, Reid street, has received word by letter that her husband, Signaller Thomas Miller, has been gassed and is now in a hospital in England. This is the second time that Signaller Miller has been gassed. He was also wounded on one occasion.

Incinerator May Have To Be Closed Down

Another break in the operation of the incinerator is in prospect. The old difficulty of broken arches in the internal layout of the incinerator will necessitate more repairs. The plant may have to be closed down for a whole week.

For some time past the work at the plant has been progressing smoothly, due, it is claimed by the sanitary inspector, to changes in the operating staff. The building was thoroughly cleaned out and the accumulation of garbage cleaned up and destroyed.

The temporary closing down of the plant will prove a serious handicap, as the refuse collected by the garbage contractor is very heavy at this season of the year.

May Abolish Representatives

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 8. — The Government has under consideration the abolition of agricultural representatives on the exemption tribunals. These representatives were provided for by order-in-council during the first week of December. It is stated that the system has been found unwieldy. The question will be discussed by the War committee of the Cabinet, and it is expected that some more workable method will be devised.

Wilson Agrees With Lloyd George

Canadian Press Despatch:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.— President Wilson to-day, addressing Congress, delivered a restatement of war aims in agreement with the recent declaration by the British Premier, Lloyd George. The President presented a definite programme for world peace, containing fourteen specific considerations.

Another Quota Here To-morrow

Major Watt, in command of E Company, 1st E. O. R., at the Armouries, does not expect any additions to his strength to-day, but a large quota of new soldiers is looked for to-morrow. Quite a number of Peterborough draftees left yesterday for Kingston to report for service, and they will be among the number to return to-morrow. Drill is being carried on morning and afternoon, and the men already here are making good progress under the direction of the Sergeants who came here from headquarters.

Negotations Broken Off

Canadian Press Despatch:

STRATFORD, Ont., Jan. 8.— John Semple, chairman of the Board of Federated Trades, which has been negotiating with the Grand Trunk since last November for various concessions, announced to-day that negotiations had been broken off, his committee having failed to reach an agreement with the company. A Board of Conciliation has been asked for. Thirteen hundred boiler makers, blacksmiths and other G.T.R. shop men are affected.

PLEADED GUILTY TO THIEF OF CHICKENS

Robert Simpson, an East City resident, pleaded guilty this morning to the theft of thirteen chickens from two homes and was remanded for a week for sentence. Another Ashburnham man reports the loss of twenty chickens which disappeared recently. The detectives got Simpson after a brief investigation and found a bag of hens that had been thrown over a fence near his home. They had been gagged evidently when they had been grabbed from their roosts.

Drastic Measures Coming

The nemesis of lax enforcement of the dog by-law, in the city's careless and inefficient attempts to combat the spread of rabies, was foreshadowed in the serious and official announcement to the Council last night that drastic measures must be employed to stamp out this contagion.

Recent investigations carried out in this district by representatives of the Department at Ottawa, and by the examination of dogs' heads that were sent to Ottawa and Toronto, have established beyond question the fact that rabies is prevalent in this district, and to such an extent that stringent regulations must be put into effect.

It may be forecasted that dogs must soon be kept chained up, and that the police will be empowered to shoot on sight those dogs that are allowed to wander the streets.

The question was transferred to the new Council, and in the meantime certain legal information will be forwarded defining the city's authority.

The Council was advised last night that a by-law should be made as complete as possible, plugging the loopholes that would give any dogs the liberty of the streets. Citizens who have valuable animals will always keep them at home, and only the mongrels and curs are allowed at large. The homeless Rovers and Fidos should be tipped off to the storm that will break upon them soon if the present determination of the Council doesn't falter as it did a year ago.

SAYS BRITISH WERE REPULSED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

BERLIN, Jan. 8.— The repulse of English companies which attacked at dusk east of Bullecourt, was announced in to-day's official statement.

VETERANS THANK THOSE WHO ASSISTED IN CHRISTMAS TREAT

Financial Statement Presented at Regular Meeting Last Night Shows Credit Balance—Many People Helped to Make the Event a Splendid Success.

At the regular meeting of the Great War Veterans' Association, held last evening in the recreation room of the armouries, Secretary Whatley presented a report in connection with the Christmas treat for the families of Peterborough soldiers. As will be seen there was a balance on the right side of the ledger, which will be turned over to the relief fund of the Association.

The report was as follows:

Receipts—
Great War Vet. Ass.	$ 100.00
G. N. Gordon, Esq.	50.00

Total	$ 321.15

Mr. Richard Hall donated $10 worth of toys, and Mr. Dawson gave a crate of oranges, while Mr. Dunsford did the express work free of charge.

Much credit is due to the members of the Association who worked so assiduously to ensure success, and the result reflects great credit on them.

I feel I cannot let the occasion pass without mentioning the ladies, who so ably assisted us. Much of the success of the treat is due to their co-operation and I trust the members will appreciate their efforts in the usual way.

Our thanks are also due to Adjt. and Mrs. McElhiney for their splendid support, especially in granting us the use of the Temple, besides receiving a splendid donation of $25. Our thanks are also due to the members of the band, who provided us with music during the afternoon.

I should also like to mention G. N. Gordon, Esq., who originated the idea of giving the treat, besides giving us a splendid donation of $50. He took an active part to ensure that every success attended our efforts, and I cannot but feel that a great deal of our success was in a measure due to him for the able manner in which he supported us.

Our thanks are due to those who so kindly subscribed, and I trust that the coming Christmas will be an even greater success than the one just passed, and that peace will also be one of the blessings of the coming Yuletide.

Yours fraternally,
SIDNEY WHATLEY,
Secretary

A Presentation From War Veterans

ed that Lieut.-Col. Johnston has set the city a good example inasmuch as this week he is turning over to the War Veterans a number of articles formerly belonging to the 93rd Battalion, including two large and two small drums and eight bugles.

A hearty vote of thanks was passed to all those who helped in making the Christmas treat a success, and to Dr. F. L. Robinson for his great kindness in placing the Empire Theatre at the disposal of the Veterans yesterday, the result being a splendid contribution towards the club-room fund of the veterans.

Mr. R. J. Devey, who will shortly present "A Greek Slave" in aid of the Great War Veterans, waited upon the meeting and was warmly received by the members who appreciated the work he is doing for them. Mr. Devey asked for the services of five or six veterans in connection with the performance and there was no lack of volunteers.

The Executive of the Great War Veterans will meet to-night in the Barrie Building.

A Simple Way To Remove Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look an feel a hundred times better.

Peterboro' Boy Joins U. S. Army

Poetical Seizure From the Pen of J. W. Woods

Chicago, Jan. 7. — John W. Woods, formerly of Peterboro, Ont., a popular member of the Canadian Club of Chicago, left recently with the U. S. Ordnance Dept., for service in France. From a cantonment in Ohio, en route, he sent the following lines:

"Here I am still in Columbus,
In the State of Ohio,
Don't know how long I'll be here,
And it's doubtful where we go;
They've done most everything to us
That they could possibly dare,
I've been occulated, vaccinated,
And you see how they cut my hair.

They don't care how they use us,
For we're common army goats,
But I guess we ship right out of here
When we get our overcoats.
We do nothing but eat and sleep;
I feel like I am in a trance,
I wish I was on the briny deep
And on my way to France."

Pains In The Small Of The Back

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 8.—"Pains in the small of the back" is the way hosts of people describe their sufferings, not knowing that the pains are in reality the kidneys. Pains in the back, weak back, lame back, backache—these are the first indications of kidney trouble. They are the warning which nature gives you. If you heed at once you can be cured. Neglect will soon put you at the mercy of the most painful and fatal of diseases.

Women as well as men have kidney disease, and may well feel anxious when the kidney pains make themselves felt in the small of the back.

Because Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills give you prompt relief from backache, it is well worth your while to take them. But they do more than this. They regulate and invigorate the action of the kidneys and ensure a return to health of these important organs.

Mr James Malley, 488 Crawford Street, Toronto, Ont., writes: "I had been troubled with lame back for nine or ten years, and although I had tried other remedies, they were of no benefit to me whatever. Through reading the advertisements in your booklets for Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, I commenced taking these, and found that they were the best I ever used. I took about a dozen boxes in all, and am now completely cured. I can highly recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

("This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. James Malley, 488 Crawford Street, and believe his statement with regard to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct.—John Dunn, J.P.")

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

City's Limited Supply Of Coal Will Be Sold To Those Families Whose Needs Are Most Urgent

The Council last night decided upon a definite plan for the delivery of whatever coal is received at the Municipal Fuel Depot. Many citizens have paid in advance for coal which has not been supplied them, for the simple reason that the shipments were insufficient to fill the orders. Recently a car of nut coal strayed into the city's fuel depot, and the committee was in a quandry whether to fill the long-standing orders or to provide the needs of those citizens who are actually without coal. The Council instructed Aldermen Dobbin and Stratton, who are supervising the city's deliveries to sell supplies to persons whose needs, investigation shows, are most urgent.

Mayor Duffus presided, with the following members present: Mayor-elect Duncan, Aldermen Langford, Weir, Stratton, Dobbin, McIntyre, Saunders, Taylor and Chief Thompson and City Treasurer Adams.

Chief Thompson reported that the immediate demands had been supplied for the present, but he expected that in a day or two the orders would be repeated. The Chief stated that there had been a number of complaints that fuel merchants had refused orders because they were not from regular customers. This was contrary to the Fuel Controller's regulations. One dealer had cancelled two hundred orders, some of which he had on file since last summer.

Ald. Dobbin—"We opened up our car of coal this morning and sold 16 or 18 lots. The city has quite a list of citizens who have paid for coal, and we intended to deliver to them from this car. If what you say is correct we should not give priority to these "customers," but deliver to the most urgent cases."

Chief Thompson replied that many of the dealers' customers had deposited their cash with him for coal, but could not be supplied.

Mayor Duffus suggested that the city should deliver to those citizens who had paid in advance and now are out of coal. If they had supplies they should not get coal until they need it.

Ald. Weir advocated the simple system of supplying first those who need fuel in the worst way.

Ald. Langford moved, seconded by Ald. McIntyre, that the homes of from frost. They have been very pa for coal be visited, and that the money be refunded those who have a fair supply and that deliveries be made to emergent cases.

City Treasurer Adams—"We have six hundred names on the list."

Chief Thompson — "I couldn't think of it. The men would be working night and day"

Mr. Adams — "Practically everyone on our list is short of coal. They are clamoring for it, and in one house the pipes burst the other day would make up the extra price.

tient and do not wish to create a difficulty for the city.

Ald. Dobbin proposed that all the money be returned to those citizens who have deposited it with the City Treasurer.

Mr. Adams — "One man refused that offer on Saturday. He said he would have to pay more for coal; he would accept the refund if the city would make up the extra price."

The motion was changed to read "that the city coal be delivered to those persons who, on the investigation of their premises, are found to need it most," and carried.

WOOD CHEAPER.

It was decided to reduce the price of the city's hardwood from $11.25 to $10.75. This is green maple and birch and is first-class body wood, not a collection of scraggy limbs. Moreover, the city will guarantee a full 128 cubic feet, and not 100 or thereabouts, which it is alleged is generally delivered as the result of careless loading.

Mr. Joseph Gray offered the city soft, mixed wood, composed of ash, tamarac, soft maple, etc., at $7.25 a cord. The Council decided to order a sample car, and may contract for the entire 200 cords that are available.

ELSA RYAN COMING IN "OUT THERE"

A Powerful War Drama Which Ran For Two Years in New York

"Out There," which is described as a play of inspiration and of patriotism, will be offered at the Grand Opera House next Monday, January 14, by a powerful New York and London company, including Elsa Ryan. It comes here with a message, for it is not solely entertainment, but a play of ideas for thinking people, and it drives home a lesson which is vibrant and of the hour. With the great war as its background, it tells in a simple and direct style a story of patriotism that must move the most callous heart to throbs of devotion and duty. J. Hartley Manners, the author, who also wrote "Peg O' My Heart," has taken for his centre figure a poor drudge in a London tenement, a girl of a sodden family, whose mother is a gin-toper, brother a prize-fighter, and sister, an airy creature, whose one desire in life is to parade the street in cheap finery, and of this material has constructed a play of absorbing interest and poignant appeal. Laurette Taylor scored the hit of her life in "Out There," in New York, and played it for two seasons in that city alone. Yielding to a demand of cities for the play where Miss Taylor could not appear, Klaw and Erlanger and George C. Tyler sanctioned a second company, which will be seen there with all the original New York scenery, costumes, properties and electrical effects. The selection of Elsie Ryan for the leading role, was made by Miss Taylor, herself, as she was the first actress after Miss Taylor to play the role of [illegible] "Peg O' My Heart." She has an ideal personality for the touching role of 'aunted Annie, the child of the slums, whose one desire is to do her bit for her country in the great war.

FROZEN FISH ARE AS FRESH AS WHEN TAKEN OUT OF WATER

That there is a prejudice against frozen fish Zin the minds of many Canadian housewives, and that this prejudice is utterly unwarranted and unjustifiable, were statements made by Mrs. Jean Muldrew, Domestic Science expert of the Food Controller's Office in an address upon Food Conservation. Mrs. Muldrew urged her hearers to a better understanding of the proper method of defrosting fish so that the flavour would be retained.

"Frozen fish," said the speaker, "possesses the same food value exactly as fresh fish, and is handled for distribution much more cheaply. Increased demand for frozen fish will bring an increased supply. Housewives should ask their dealers for frozen fish and use it freely as a substitute for beef and bacon. The prejudice that has arisen against it is due to the improper methods frequently followed in defrosting frozen fish. There is no necessity of pouring hot water on a frozen fish. Soak it in cold water, and only long enough to draw out the frost. On no account use hot water. A few minutes' immersion in a bowl of cold water is sufficient for a small fish. Larger ones take longer in proportion. But don't leave it soaking too long, and cook it immediately. If you boil it, use the same water in which you defrosted it, and save all of the natural flavour thereby.

"A winter-caught fish in the northern or north-western lakes is frozen a few minutes after it leaves the water, and glazed over with ice. It is shipped that way, sold that way in the fish store, and is consequently an absolutely fresh fish when it reaches the consumer's kitchen. It is as fresh as a fish cooked at a camp fire on the shore a few minutes after it is caught. All processes of decay and deterioration have been forestalled and suspended, for the winter-caught fish is frozen almost the moment it is lifted out of the water. If defrosted properly and cooked promptly, it is positively as fine in flavour and as nutritious as a food as a fish caught right off the hook or straight from the net.

Mrs. Muldrew argued that fishermen would supply more frozen fish to the Canadian market if the demand warranted so doing, and it lay with consumers to increase the supply by insisting that their dealers provide for their requirements.

NERVES ARE EXHAUSTED.

When you have frequent headaches, find yourself easily irritated and annoyed, feel discouraged and down-hearted, cannot rest and sleep well, and find appetite fickle and digestion bad, you may know that the nerves are in bad condition. Don't wait for these symptoms to become chronic but start in early with the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and head off disaster.

The primary competition in this district for the Ontario Tankard will be played at Lindsay on 15th January, commencing at 2.30 p.m.

A general meeting of the club has been called for Thursday, 10th January, at 7.30 o'clock, to decide whether open and local bonspiels shall be held this season or not. A large attendance is expected.

With the near approach of the Tankard and District Cup games, there is some feeling that the personnel of the rinks should be definitely determined as soon as possible. Last season the rinks had a little practice together before the primary competitions.

BOWLING On Water St. Alleys

PRINTERS WIN TWO FROM THE GROCERS.

Last night, in a Ten-Pin League match at Water Street Alleys, the Printers won two of three games from the Grocers.

Grocers won the first game by a two-pin margin. The Printers won the next two by good margins.

The total pinnage was: Printers 2,460, Grocers 2,331. The Printers' best spasm was an 825 total in the first game, while the Grocers rolled an 827 total.

Henderson and Anderson, for the Printers, were the only 500 markers, their totals being 523 and 516. Gillespie was high for the Grocers with a total of 492.

The scores were as follows:

Printers.

Anderson	192	165	150—516
Smith	152	168	150—470
Lacheur	141	139	185—465
Cairns	166	173	147—486
Henderson	174	178	171—523
	825	823	812—2460

Grocers.

Heard	147	172	138—457
Gillespie	195	125	172—492
Boyd	166	158	153—477
Ross	157	140	146—443
Fitzpatrick	162	161	141—462
	827	756	748—2331

To-night the De Laval and the C.G.I. teams meet in a League fixture.

Last week's prize for three highest games of 10-pins was won by Anderson of the Printers, with a 632 total. Some of the scores:

Anderson	206	214	212—632
Anderson	209	247	174—630
Dawson	213	204	200—617
Bishop	182	183	231—596
Phillips	234	202	154—580

HOCKEY PRACTICE.

Every George Street man expected out to hockey practice to-night (Tuesday), from 7 to 8 o'clock

HOCKEY PERMITTED ONLY FROM 6 TO 8 P.M. ON THE PUBLIC RINKS

Hockey has been restricted on the public skating rinks to two hours a day, from 6 p.m. until 8 p.m. The small boy and his hockey stick have monopolized all the open air rinks, and the children for whom the ice was principally prepared, have been forced to the sides. Henceforth, the fledging hockeyists will have to confine their games to the prescribed hours each evening. This also applies to Saturday. Only skating will be permitted in the morning and afternoon.

CONSERVING COAL IN LINDSAY

Library May Be Closed—Churches Co-operate

LINDSAY, Jan. 8.—Recent agitation in Lindsay has done much towards the movement to conserve fuel. In fact citizens have been lead to think more seriously and a greater effort is being made to minimize wastefulness and curtail heat.

LIBRARY MAY BE CLOSED.

It is stated that the Public Library may be closed on certain days in the week, and the hours made shorter, and it is also suggested by some citizens that the school hours be reduced during winter months so as to conserve fuel.

CHURCHES CO-OPERATE.

The churches in Lindsay have responded well to the call to save. The congregations of the Baptist and St. Andrew's Churches held services in the school rooms Sunday, and at a special meeting of the official Board of the Cambridge Street Methodist Church it was decided to withdraw all week-night services during the winter months, including choir practice, prayer meeting, Mission societies' Ladies' Aid, etc.

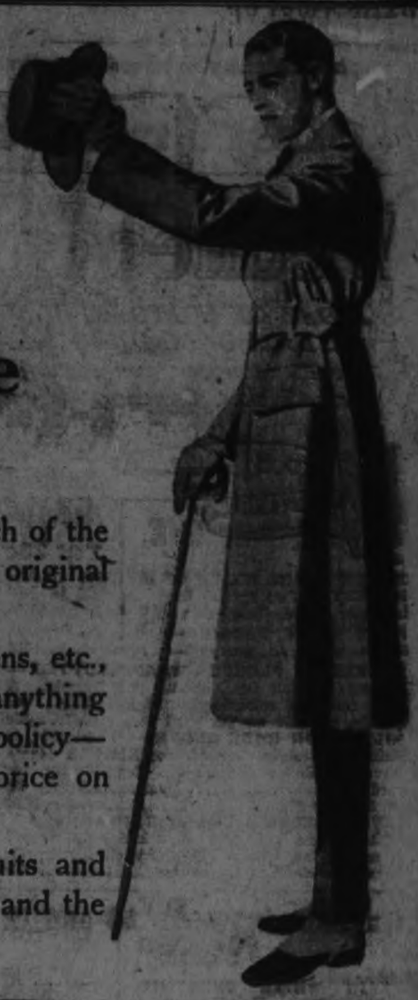
The Real Sale Is Ready

Annual January Sale at FRANK JENNE'S



Remarkable reductions in view of the fact that much of the men's wear I sell cannot be reproduced or replaced at its original cost.

Many of the articles of men's wear---in woollens, linens, etc., are not now to be had at any price---none can be bought at anything like which I originally paid for them. Yet I continue my policy—and make a sweeping reduction from the plain marked price on everything in the Store.

Underwear—Shirts---Collars---Hosiery---Cravats---Suits and Overcoats---reduced in the face of the greatest scarcity and the highest prices in a hundred years.

NO MORE CANDY AND AUTOMOBILES IN PARIS

PARIS, Jan. 8.—Three drastic measures for the conservation of food and other supplies have been decided upon by the Minister of Provisions, Victor Boret. All shops of confectioners and pastry cooks are to be closed, restrictions will be placed on restaurants which charge high prices to prevent them from outbidding the more popular establishments in purchasing supplies and the private use of automobiles will be prohibited.

These measures will be put into effect as soon as the Senate passes the bill, already voted by the Chamber of Deputies, which confers on the Minister power to enforce his decrees by the infliction of penalties.

Car Situation

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 8.— The car situation in Canada despite the effort of the Railway Board to remedy it, is still very acute. The movement of pulp wood paper, lumber, etc., from the Dominion to the United States as a consequence is being seriously impeded, and representations are being made by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association to the War Board and Railway Commission to the end that the situation may be remedied. It is estimated that the excess of Canadian cars in the United States over American cars in Canada is about 20,000. The reason appears to be the preponderance of Canadian exports to the United States over the imports from the United States, especially in the line of bulky commodities.

Annual Meeting Of The Exhibition

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibtion will be held in the City Council Chambers, on the 21st day of January, 1918, at 1 o'clock, when it is hoped that all those who are interested in the Exhibition will be present to discuss important questions that will come up at this meeting.

If the Peterborough Central Exhibition is to get into a commanding position in the Province as a big district fair it will require to be taken hold of immediately with that object in view.

Peterborough is well located for fair purposes and there are immense possibilities ahead of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition with proper grounds, equipment and organization.

Will all those who are members, and others who are not members, be on hand and take part in the business.

A meeting of the directors will be held in the City Council Chambers, Monday, January 14th, at 8 o'clock, to clean up all unfinished business from last year.

COUNCIL'S RESOLUTION REQUIRING VOTES FOR AT LEAST 4 ALDERMEN SHOULD PUT AN END TO PLUMPING

A desultory discussion at last night's meeting of the Council on the subject of the election of aldermen by the general vote finally produced a resolution which should effectually prevent plumping, a practice that has been considered the bane of aldermanic elections by general vote. Henceforth, each elector must vote for at least four candidates, otherwise a ballot will be automatically invalidated. Next year the elector must vote for four out of twelve candidates to be elected, but thereafter he (and likewise she) must vote for four out of a total of six aldermen elected. This measure must receive the approval of the Legislature, and will be included in the City's bill which will be presented at the next session.

Ald. McIntyre introduced the by-law question with a reference to a rumour that a deputation was preparing to wait upon the Council for the purpose of shelving the by-law that revives the general voting system.

Mayor Duffus remarked that he did not believe that any member of the Council would vote to defeat the wishes registered by a majority of the ratepayers. The Mayor then proposed the resolution to prevent plumping and found the whole Council in favour of it.

The City's Bill will also ask the Legislature to approve of the election of six aldermen for two years next January. At present this point is not clearly determined and is understood to require the election of twelve, six of whom would receive two year terms

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS CONTINUED

AMSTERDAM, January 8.—Maximilian S. Arden, in the Die Zukunft, Scatchingly condemns the Austro-German plans for annexations in the East. He declares that a broad chasm still yawns between the two parties at Brest-Litovsk, and that if the demands of the Central Powers to annex or join the territories in question to the two last empires in Europe, then there will again be only an armistice, and there will be no lasting and honourable peace with Russia which country will not eternally wear Lenine's red livery or be satisfied with disintegration and communistic dwarf communities.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, January 8.—A number of ships loaded with supplies for the Allies, which have been delayed here for more than two weeks because of lack of coal, sailed to-day for European ports. One of the steamers carried the first mail to leave here in seventeen days. Many vessels are still idle at the docks here awaiting fuel.

LONDON, January 8.—An enemy party raided one of our posts yesterday noon in the neighbourhood of Flesquieres, the War Office announces. One of our men is missing. Hostile artillery showed some activity during the night in the neighbourhoods of Bullecourt and Passchendaele.

FUNERAL WILL BE HELD TO-MORROW

The funeral of the late Ald. J. H. Smith, who passed away yesterday at his home, 444 Rogers street, will be held on Wednesday afternoon at two-thirty o'clock. At this hour a short service will be held at the family residence, after which the cortege will leave for Little Lake cemetery, where interment will take place.

Private G. T. Dickson, of Campbellford, brother-in-law of the deceased, is in the city to attend the funeral. Pte. Dickson is a member of the 59th Battalion and recently returned from overseas.

PRIZE WINNERS AT POULTRY SHOW

The tenth annual exhibition of the Peterborough Poultry Association today passed into the second stage of its three-day show. The entrants number about eight hundred, and chief among the local prize-winners is Mr. Archie Breault, with a class of seventy-five white Wyandottes and Mr. George Buller, with a large pen of Rhode Island Reds.

Breault won four firsts, including two silver cups, while Buller won a silver cup and everything else in the Rhode Island class.

The judges are J. H. Minshall, of Brantford, and J. Bennet, of Toronto.

To-night Miss Yates, of the Guelph Agricultural College will truss a bird and give a practical demonstration on handling poultry.

The recipe for Onion Chowder, mentioned above, is as follows:

Onion Chowder.

3 quarts boiling water
1 pint minced onion
1 quart potatoes cut in dice
1 1-2 teaspoons salt
1-2 teaspoon pepper
3 tablespoons butter substitute
1 tablespoon fine herbs.

Cook the onion and butter substitute together for half an hour, but cook them slowly so that the onion will not brown. At the end of this time add the boiling water, potatoes, and salt and pepper. Cook one hour longer, then add the fine herbs and serve.

SOLDIER GETS LIFE TERM FOR ASSAULT ON DRIVER

CAMP LEWIS, Tacoma, Wash., Jan. 8.—Private George Pidd, B company, Ninety-fourth infantry, formerly Salt Lake City, was to-day dishonorably discharged from the National Army and sentenced to hard labour for the rest of his life at Leavenworth Penitentiary for striking Lawrence Berquist, a Tacoma taxicab driver, with an iron bar.

The motive was robbery, according to Pidd's confession which declared that he sought additional funds to provide for his wife.

USED FOR SHAVING.

Many men are troubled, more particularly in the cold weather, with a sort of roughness of the skin or eczema caused by shaving. The application of Dr. Chase's Ointment after the shave soon cures the trouble and by using it after each shave you keep the skin soft and prevent irritation and soreness. Because of its antiseptic qualities this ointment prevents and cures Barber's Itch.

EMERGENCY COAL IS GIVEN TO MR. HARRIS

OTTAWA, Jan. 5.—That Mr. C. A. McGrath, Dominion Fuel Controller, who has been in Washington and New York for some days, in connection with the fuel situation, has succeeded in arranging for a number of emergency shipments of coal to Canada, was the important statement made by Mr. C. W. Peterson, the assistant fuel controller.

Mr. Peterson explained that, while there is undoubtedly a shortage of coal in some districts, there must be a large supply in the country and the problem is largely one of transportation and distribution. The assistant fuel controller said that a considerable qquantity of premium coal for quick delivery to fill emergency calls had been placed at the disposal of Mr. Harris of Toronto, the representative of the fuel controller for Ontario. That supply was now being used to meet the requirements of cities and towns where the need for coal is great.

Mr. Peterson does not consider that the situation has become so acute as to call for the most drastic measures that could be enforced.

Seventeen out of thirty-four of the Separate schools in the city have been closed for lack of fuel. A dozen carloads of coal are said to be on the way to the capital.

BRITISH, FRENCH AND ITALIANS FACE STARVATION: PLEA SENT TO AMERICA BY LORD RHONDDA

Situation Causes Deepest Concern in Washington—Only Comfort Is That Central Powers Are In Even Worse Plight Than Allies.

COMPULSORY RATIONING

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 9—The food situation in the allied countries of Europe is graver than it has been at any time since the beginning of the war, and is causing American government officials deep concern. Official reports picture extreme food shortage in England, France and Italy.

The fact that conditions in Germany and Austria are far worse, offers the only ground for optimism in viewing the situation.

In England and France the situation is described as critical, in a cablegram to the Food Administration from Lord Rhondda, the British Food Controller, which ended with these words:

"I view the situation with grave anxiety."

Yesterday a cablegram from the French government said that the wheat crop had been requisitioned, and that the bread ration would be cut to allow only seven ounces of bread daily to all persons except the very poor and those doing hard manual labour. In Italy conditions are not as good, perhaps, as in either England or France.

Compulsory rationing will be started in England immediately, with meats the first commodity to be put under control. Distribution of butter and margarine will be taken in hand next and other foods will be added as they become scarcer. All of the principal foodstuffs will be rationed by April.

"I have repeatedly said in public and private that there is no reason for immediate alarm, although there is every reason for strict economy, and pecuniary measures," said Lord Rhondda's message. "These statements in some instances have been twisted into a declaration that there is plenty of food in England and France.

"The food position in this country, and I understand in France also, can without exaggeration be described as critical and anxious. As I am now unable to avoid compulsory rationing, I fear it will have to come with long queues of people waiting in the severe weather in practicallyt every town in England for the daily necessaries of life."

Compulsory control of foodstuffs in England, France and Italy was insisted on by the American delegates to the Paris conference and was promised at that time.

sible, ask the Food Controller that he use his influence with the Government to have sufficient of this labour retained here during the next summer in order that the farms may be worked to their limit.

EMPTY CARS COMING.

As a result of representations made by the Canadian Railways War Board to the American railway authorities at Washington, the United States railways have been ordered to send nearly six thousand empty box cars to Canada, and deliveries of these cars will be accomplished as speedily as the line to the south can move them out of the congested district. With these cars available, the Canadian railways will be in a position to move a great deal of the freight which has been delayed in Canada awaiting cars to move it to the United States.

FIFTY CARS DAILY FROM TORONTO

With a view to expediting the movement of traffic between Toronto and Montreal, the Canadian Railways War Board directed the Canadian Northern Railway to accept fifty cars of freight per day from the other lines at Toronto for movement East.

Action taken towards remedying the coal shortage in the Dominion was also reported. The Government railways have been ordered to run only one train a day between Halifax and Montreal, it was stated, while it was also announced that the accumulation of traffic, consisting principally of coal coming into Canada at the American frontier, was entirely cleared up, and in so far as it was in the power of the Dominion lines fuel was being delivered freely. The shortage of flat cars for the movement of munitions and other important material in Ontario, it was stated, had been met by the rushing of 300 idle cars from the West.

REDUCTION OF PASSENGER LINES.

Supplementing the saving in coal consumption which the railays have already accomplished, an order was issued yesterday by the Michigan Central Railroad calling for a reduction in the passenger service of that line in Ontario, which at present is in excess of the needs of necessary travel.

In Western Canada the action taken by the Canadian Railways War Board to increase the movement of coal from the mines to the prairie [illegible] and grain, it was said, has had the effect of greatly diminishing the shortages which were reported a few weeks ago. On one of the lines which it was claimed should have moved more coal there has been an increase in the movement of no less than 70 per cent, and a number of the mine operators have advised that they are now receiving good service from the railways.

NEED 20,000 LABORERS TO PULL UP THE RAILS

War Board Decides to Ask the Govt. to Take Up 1,500 to 2,000 Miles

C. N. R. TO ACCEPT CARS

MONTREAL, Jan. 9.—In order to secure the rails required to keep the main arteries of traffic in good condition it was decided at a meeting of the Canadian War Board, held here yesterday to petition the Government to take up the metal on lines that are not vital. This work will entail the removal of 1,500 to 2,000 miles of rails, and the Government will be asked to hold over certain classes of labour continually passing through Canada to Europe to handle it. Some 20,000 labourers will be wanted, and their wages, about $50,000 a day, will be spent in this country.

The Canadian Railways War Board, furthermore, in view of the growing scarcity in food supplies and the Imperial necessity that Canada produce every bushel of grain pos-

President's Address Is Applauded

Canadian Press Despatch:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The practical agreement of fundamentals in the President's programme with those expressed by Premier Lloyd George made an immediate and profound impression upon all who heard him. Coming at a moment when Germany faces the demands of her Socialists for the abandonment of any programme of annexations and indemnities, and also faces a failure of the peace negotiations at Brest-Litovsk, the President's pronouncement developed its tremendous importance as he spoke it word by word to the crowded chamber, crowded with legislators, diplomats and officials who gave the closest attention. Although the address was punctuated liberally by applause there was one great demonstration when the President declared France must have right for wrong in Alsace-Lorraine. At that the entire assembly rose, applauded and cheered. Loud and enthusiastic praise for the address was given generally in Congress.

GRAIN MARKET

There was a rather substantial break in oats yesterday in both the Chicago and Winnipeg markets. Free selling soon brought to light the fact that Government agents were re-selling oats in large quantities. The result was a sudden decline in prices. The Toronto cash situation is also easier, due to the belief that receipts will begin to increase rapidly in consequence of good sleighing conditions in the country. The car situation, however, is still a handicap.

Maximum Prices Of Potatoes May Be Fixed

Ottawa. — Higher prices for potatoes than those now prevailing will not be permitted. The Food Controller is sending a letter to this effect to all wholesale handlers of potatoes, saying that any attefpt to secure higher prices will be dealt with promptly. If retail dealers should attemp to charge an unreasonable profit on potatoes, the Food Controller is prepared to fix the margin of profit, and if necessary to fix the maximum prices. In a statement issued here Mr. Hanna said that a recent survey of the situation by his office indicates that there is still a large supply of that there is sill a large supply of potatoes in the hand of the growers and dealers to meet a continuous and heavy demand until the 1918 crop is available.

Alkali In Shampoos Bad For Washing Hair

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

ARMY OFFICERS CLEAN STREETS OF PETROGRAD

PETROGRAD, Jan. 8.—The teachers in the Petrograd primary and secondary school have gone on strike as a protest against the failure to call together the constituent assembly. The Moscow teacher, have also gone on strike for the same reason. Only thirty-one of the four thousand working universities are unaffected.

Former army officers in Petrograd have organized a union, and are accepting work as baggage handlers and street cleaners. Unemployed educated men, especially lawyers' clerks and former officials are also organizing a union and will offer their services as labourers.

Scandal Ruined Brilliant Career

FEW men have entered British politics with brighter prospects of eminence in public life than did Charles W. Dilke. He was endowed with talents of a high order, including art gifts of rare quality and personal charm. His failure in early middle life to continue in the course that had opened so auspiciously, while due to perfectly natural causes, was a bitter disappointment to his many and influential friends.

Descended in direct line from three ancestors of the same name as his own, Charles Wentworth Dilke was a highly favored youth. Educated at Cambridge, he began, as early as the age of twenty-three, to attract attention. In that year (1866) he wrote a book called "Greater Britain," which was the fruit of a tour around the world. In Boston he met Emerson, Agassiz, Holmes, Lowell, Asa Gray, and others of eminence. In his book he wrote of these men as "undoubtedly the most distinguished then collected in any city in the world." The young man's idea of a future "Greater Britain" is expressed as "a conception, however imperfect, of the grandeur of our race, already girdling the earth, which it is destined perhaps eventually to overspread." But political ambitions were soon to absorb the young man's thoughts. At the age of twenty-four he entered the lists for election to Parliament and spoke vigorously and persistently in his own behalf.

As a radical he was elected by a close vote, less than two hundred votes over the next highest candidate in a total of four contestants. His parliamentary service was not conspicuous. He disregarded party allegiance in many notable instances. His campaign was boisterous, and even threatened by riots. Labouchere was led to warn the young man of his political perils. He suffered social isolation but gained the renewed friendship of a young woman, Miss Katherine Shell, whom he married in 1872. The marriage was unfortunate. And his diary expresses substantial agreement with the judgment of a mutual friend, a Miss Courtney, that "though neither of them was in love with the other, they would get on admirably." Whether or not they did so is not recorded. Lady Dilke's health was poor, and after giving birth to a son, she died in 1874.

Like many other public men of his time, Dilke was a persistent and prolific diarist. An interesting glimpse of the lighter side of Gladstone's character is revealed by Dilke's biographer. It reveals a not generally known tendency of Gladstone's mind at infrequent times. "It would be impossible to give a true account of Mr. Gladstone without recalling the manner in which, however absorbed he might be in his subject, he would break off to discuss some amusing triviality. When we were talking once of the real inner views of French statesmen with regard to our occupation of Egypt, some chance expression suddenly directed Mr. Gladstone's mind to the subject of rowing, and he began recalling in the most amusing way incidents of his own Eton days of some 68 or 69 years previously, shivering at the thought of his sculling in cold weather against strong stretches of the stream near Monkey Island.

But it was Disraeli who really fascinated Dilke, as he did so many other men. "Lord Beaconsfield told me that he had been very anxious to meet me, since he had taken the liberty of writing about me without my leave in his novel, 'Endymion.'" At dinner, "Dizzy said a good many rather good things—as, for example, that he should like to get married again for the purpose of comparing the presents that he would get from his friends with the beggarly ones that he had got when he had married."

As president of the Local Government Board in Gladstone's Cabinet, Dilke served for two years and eight months, being only thirty-nine when he entered the cabinet. This was nearly the crimax of his career. In 1884 he became privately engaged to Mrs. Mark Pattison, widow of the rector of Lincoln College. In the following spring they were married, not in Christ Church Cathedral, Oxford, as originally planned, but in the parish church at Chelsea, with Joseph Chamberlain as best man. Between the dates of the engagement and the marriage the blow fell which practically ended Dilke's political career. The wife of a Liberal member of Parliament had confessed to her husband that she had been unfaithful to him with Sir Charles immediately after marriage. Dilke's fiancee was, at the time, recovering from illness in India. Dilke protested his innocence, and in reply to Chamberlain's letter to her Mrs. Pattison telegraphed back full assurance of her loyalty and trust and at the same time telegraphed to the Times her engagement to Sir Charles. The divorce suit, which named Dilke as co-respondent, severed the marriage tie, but as the court had ruled that he was no party to the suit he could appear only as a witness and could not be represented by counsel. Dilke worked for years in the effort to get a rehearing, but without effect. In 1886, at the general election, Dilke was beaten and so left Parliament, where he had served for eighteen years. In 1885 he had married Mrs. Pattison. He died in 1911.

Women, Prepare!

Thousands of women in Canada have overcome their sufferings, and have been cured of woman's ills by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This temperance medicine, though started nearly half a century ago, sells most widely to-day. It can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid, and every woman who suffers from backache, headache, nervousness, should take this "Prescription" of Dr. Pierce's. It is prepared from nature's roots and herbs and does not contain a particle of alcohol or any narcotic. It's not a secret prescription for its ingredients are printed on wrapper. Send 10c for trial package to Dr. V. M. Pierce, Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., or Bridgeburg, Ont.

Hamilton, Ont.—"When I reached the critical period I was a nervous wreck and suffered with hot flashes and dizzy spells. 'Favorite Prescription' relieved me of all these ailments and brought me through this trying time safely. For woman of middle age there is no tonic equal to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and I never hesitate to recommend it to my friends."—Mrs. Annie Soulis, 41 Hess St. N.

Stratford, Ont.—"I was greatly benefited by taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription; it was before twins came. I had become all run-down, was nauseated, very nervous and weak, and suffered with backache. Was not able to do anything for three months, when I began taking 'Favorite Prescription.' It soon gave me relief and it was not long when I was strong and healthy. 'Favorite Prescription' was surely a great help to me and I am glad to recommend it."—Mrs. E. J. Mantle, 61 Kent Lane.

THE TONIC THAT BRINGS HEALTH

"Fruit-a-tives" Builds Up The Whole System

Those who take "Fruit-a-tives" for the first time, are often astonished at the way it builds them up and makes them feel better all over. They may be taking "Fruit-a-tives" for some specific disease, as Constipation, Indigestion, Chronic Headaches or Neuralgia, Kidney or Bladder Trouble, Rheumatism or Pain in the Back. And they find when "Fruit-a-tives" has cured the disease, that they feel better and stronger in every way. This is due to the wonderful tonic properties of these famous tablets, made from fruit juices.

Deer Roam Exmoor.

Even the war's needs have scarcely touched Exmoor. The uplands remain an unspoiled heirloom of the past—a place where the wearied brain of the city worker finds that rare rest of open space swept by the free sea wind, where in every direction the eye ranges over unadulating wild country fading, gold upon gold, to the blue horizon, beyond which even on the clearest days there rise only faint cloudy outlines of the highest hills of distant countries.

Thus, sometimes with glasses you may trace the shape of the Malvern heights; but over all the rest of the luvisible landscape you know that the air comes to your lungs fresh and unbreathed by men.

On this free table land it is appropriate that the wild red deer should have found in our far south-west one of the last strongholds in Britain. Over a space twenty-five miles in width and many more in depth the antlered stags still fight for their harems as their ancestors fought before men had learned to fashion weapons of rough stone. They still bellow out their prehistoric challenge, and the silent hinds gather dutifully to the summons as of old.

When the stags shall have dropped their antlers for the year, and the hinds, conscious of coming maternity, shall be stealing apart to secret places amid the heather and bracken, where they will lay their precious speckled burdens down, will the whirlwind of war be over and our men be coming home again? There has been next to no hunting on Exmoor for many months now, only just enough to keep the stags down, and the meets have been ill attended.

Visitors have been few, and the dwellers on Exmoor have had other things to think about. Man here easily becomes merged in his surroundings, only one of the slow-moving specks that the buzzard, circling aloft on level pinions and fan-spread, barred tail, looks down upon. Unweariedly, with scarcely a wing flap, the great bird patrols the sky, and to the listener below its slurred cry of all the vowels, "a-e-i-o-u," seems to emphasize the solitude of the scene.

So, too, the croak of the rare raven, perched on some inaccessible summit above a precipitous gorge which the human pedestrian scales far below, sounds like the forbidding voice of the guardian spirit of the docks.

Further on, where the headland, crested with jumbled crags like a devil's rockery, fronts the sea, a little of white feathers may mark the "stance" on which luckless seagulls and pigeons are dismembered by a peregrine.—London Times.

"Cat and Fiddle."

The house that gave rise to the sign that afterwards became the "Cat and Fiddle" was situated in the east end of Piccadilly, and was opened soon after that famous London street was first built. It was occupied by a Frenchwoman who, being passionately fond of her tabby, inscribed over her door the words, "Voici un Chat Fidele." Hence the Londoners came to call it "Cat and Fiddle," and many other shops adopted the name.

The Boy's Wits Were Keen.

A boy with a grindstone called to a merchant's clerk, "Any knives or scissors to grind?"

"Don't think we have," replied the clerk facetiously, "but can you sharpen wits?"

"Yes, if you've got any!" was the prompt reply, leaving the interrogator to produce the article.

ALLIES TO WIN.

American Educationalist Pays Tribute to the British.

"Subtle attacks, whether by word or deed, which encourage the enemy and endanger the lives of soldiers on sea and land should be suppressed. The success of pacific efforts for peace without victory would mean the sacrifice for nothing on the part of those who have fought or died in the war.

"We can gather strength by keeping clearly in mind the righteousness of our cause. Von Bissing has said 'We must keep Belgium as a conquered province for the sake of the war which is to come.' But this is a war to end war and it must be waged to a successful finish. We are fighting for liberty and democracy, and we shall win. This is the only conclusion that can justly be drawn from all that may be seen within the war zone."

It was thus that Dr. Benjamin Rand of Harvard University summed up the European situation. Dr. Rand has returned recently from abroad, where he had opportunities to observe the great conflict, both as a visitor to the British Grand Fleet and as a guest of the British army headquarters on the western front.

As to the outcome of the war, he said that it is inevitable that the Allies will win in time. "The Britons are born mariners, and that their mastery of the sea continues is seen in the internment of the German high seas fleet. The British are ready to give battle, but the Germans hold back. British merchant ships are on the sea; those of the Germans are in port. The German naval tactics are a confession of naval inferiority. The British grand fleet has guarded the transport of millions of soldiers from Canada, India, Australia, South Africa, and Britain itself. In three weeks recently the swift, armored British cruisers engaged in blockading work, have held up 416 vessels on the northern patrol. The chief aim of the British fleet in the present war has been to compel a decisive engagement—the chief aim of the enemy to avoid such an engagement.

"The U-boats are not invincible," continued Dr. Rand. "They are slower than destroyers and are visible targets for aircraft. As for their effect on Britain's food supply, there is no privation in England. There are various restrictions on luxuries, but that is all. The Briton gets his three meals a day, if not his three drinks. Profiteering has been suppressed. Prices are controlled so that food is within the reach of the people. Steps are being taken to make England self-supporting next year.

"Aircraft is constantly improving. A new type must always be ready. The latest British type is fully equal to the German's latest. The output in England is increasing rapidly. The supply in June this year was four times greater than in June, 1916, and will be much greater still by Christmas.

Wheat From Asia.

Manchurian and Siberian wheat probably will be exported to America to replace American wheat shipped to the Entente Allies in Europe. Because of the lack of locomotives and cars, it is impossible to send the wheat surplus from eastern Asia into European Russia. At scores of railway stations in Siberia and Manchuria sacks of wheat only slightly protected by temporary sheds are rapidly deteriorating.

SUFFERED TERRIBLY WITH HER HEART

Would Wake Up Smothering

The terrible smothering and choking up sensations and sinking spells, the feelings of dizziness and faintness that come over those whose heart and nerves are deranged causes the greatest distress of both mind and body.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in cases of such severity.

Mrs. A. M. Powell, Norval Station, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered five years with my heart and nerves, but the last two years I have suffered terribly. If I went to bed I would wake up as if I were smothering. I did not get one night's sleep out of seven. I got so very weak that the doctor was called in, and he said it was my heart, and that I must take great care of myself. I saw your advertisement in your almanac for Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and said I would try them. I have only taken two boxes of them and I feel a new woman. I will recommend them to anyone afflicted with heart trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

First Veterinary School.

As nearly as the facts can be got at, the first veterinary school was founded in the city of Lyons, France, about the middle of May of the year 1761. Since 1761 veterinary schools have spread all over the civilized world, especially in Germany, France, England and the United States of America, in which advanced countries the horse has the benefit of as fine a science as that which exists for his master, man.

Her Proposal.

"Ah, George, did you propose to Vivian?"

"No. She made the proposal before I had a chance to say anything."

"She did? What did she say?"

"She proposed that I should leave the house immediately, and I did."

Simplicity.

I am convinced, both by faith and experience, that to maintain oneself on this earth is not a hardship, but a pastime if we will live simply and wisely, as the pursuits of the simpler nations are still the sports of the more artificial.

Baseball Tactics.

Stealing third is, as a general proposition, a bad play, though it comes in handy now and then. I would suggest that all young players avoid it. If the man is thrown out trying to steal third you have tossed away a possible chance for a run, and if he succeeds he hasn't improved his scoring chances very much, because he would go home from second on a clean single anyway.

My personal opinion is that there is entirely too much changing of pitchers in professional baseball. The custom is so prevalent in certain clubs that every man that starts a game does so in fear, trembling lest he be removed as soon as he allows a couple of hits or is a little wild. He is prone to become nervous under these conditions and begins to fume and fret as soon as he gets in a hole. On the other hand, if he were assured before the game started that he would be allowed to finish it he would in many cases work out his own salvation. A pitcher learns through being beaten, and if he is taken out as soon as he has any trouble he will never get the right kind of experience to develop his mind and his courage.—Ty Cobb in American Boy.

Stop The Pain With Hirst's

Hirst's is not a cure-all, but it WILL STOP PAIN.

In a good many troubles, like quinsy, tonsillitis, mumps, things must run their course, but Hirst's WILL STOP THE PAIN.

Sprains, bruises, burns and other accidental injuries will cure themselves, but Hirst's WILL STOP THE PAIN, and the cure will be quicker if you STOP THE PAIN with Hirst's.

For rheumatism, lumbago and pleurisy, STOP THE PAIN with Hirst's and then follow the treatment recommended in the printed circular that goes with Hirst's.

The first thing to do is to STOP THE PAIN. It will hasten the cure.

READY!

In the newspapers there recently appeared articles telling of the arrival of the American fleet at Queenstown—telling how the Officers of the English Navy had gone to Vice-Admiral Sims and asked him when he would be ready for action. Every American thrilled with pride at his answer—

"WE CAN START AT ONCE."

"READY TO START AT ONCE"—What a wonderful motto for everyman, and yet how many of us realize that at any moment we may suddenly be called away from Business, from Home and Friends, from this world of ours to pass in to the Great Beyond.

Are you Mr. Reader, "READY TO START AT ONCE?" Have you made provision for those dependent on you should the call come?

"READY TO START AT ONCE." No man can do more—we cannot afford to do less.

If your loved ones are not already protected against such an emergency you had better act while you have the opportunity. To-morrow may be too late.

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will protect your Dependents providing you do your duty while the opportunity is yours.

Make Your Own Cough Syrup and Save Money

Better than the ready-made kind. Easily prepared at home.

The finest cough syrup that money can buy—costing only about one-fifth as much as ready-made preparations—can easily be made up at home. The way it takes hold and conquers distressing coughs, throat and chest colds will really make you enthusiastic about it.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup." Shake thoroughly and it is ready for use. The total cost is about 55 cents and gives you 16 ounces—a family supply—of a most effectual pleasant tasting remedy. It keeps perfectly.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed or swollen throat membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough will disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, whooping cough or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract and is known the world over for its prompt healing effect on the throat membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Notary's Discomfiture

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

Many years ago in the city of Rheims in France, which has of late been the scene of fighting between the French and the Germans, there lived an old notary. In France a notary is a lawyer, but in the olden time a lawyer was not of much more importance so far as his work was concerned than a notary is with us today. Jules Farlieux, the notary of Rheims, had accumulated some 50,000 francs, which had come to him through small fees. This sum—$10,000 in our money—was quite a fortune in those days, especially in France, where everything was very cheap and one could live comfortably on a small income.

The old man had one child, a daughter, Delphine, to whom he expected to leave his property, and it was his expectation that she should marry a man having at least an equal amount. What was his chagrin, therefore, when he learned that she had fallen in love with Alphonse Du Bois, a young fellow who had just been graduated from a law school in Paris and settled in Rheims to practice his profession without a sou to his name. The notary simply forbade his daughter to have anything to do with the man.

One day three men came into Jules Farlieux's office, and after asking if and being assured that he was the "distinguished notary" with whom so many persons intrusted their affairs and their moneys they asked him to take care of 100,000 francs in gold which was theirs jointly. Jules accepted the trust, it being agreed that he should deduct 5 per cent of the amount when the money was returned. He was then asked to draw up a contract to that effect, in which he stipulated to pay over the money to the three men together and not to any one or two of them separately. The contract having been signed, the men departed, leaving the gold on a table. As the notary was gathering it up to put in his strong box one of the men returned, saying he had been deputed by the others to count the money before it was put away. While he was doing so a stranger came hurriedly into the office and, after taking the notary into a rear room, asked him some questions concerning a matter which he seemed to consider of immediate importance. The notary tried to get away from him, but found it impossible. When he was permitted to return to the other room both the money and the man who had been counting it were gone.

Farlieux found himself in a very unpleasant position. He had receipted for 100,000 francs which he was to pay to the three owners together. One of them had taken the amount, and the notary would be obliged to indemnify the others, which would require nearly double all he possessed. He heard nothing from any of the men for a month; then one morning the two who had lost their share came to him and demanded it.

The notary believed that the men had conspired to swindle him, but unless he could prove this he had no hope of saving the little fortune he had been a lifetime in accumulating and which was to go to his daughter for a dowry. He made every effort to prove that the men were dishonest and in collusion, but was not able to do so.

After a formal demand for their money the two men put the case in the courts, and a day was set for trial. Alphonse Du Bois learned of the case from his sweetheart, Louise, and the probable loss of her dowry. He told her to say to her father that he would save him from the swindle if he would consent to his marriage with her. Louise gave the old man the message and it made him very angry.

"What!" he exclaimed. "Does this popinjay who has no experience in the law propose to do what I, who have been a notary for forty years, cannot do?"

Louise argued with her father, saying that nothing would be lost by permitting Alphonse to take the case and something might be gained. Since the old man's principal grief was that she would be deprived of her dowry, she finally won him over, but not until the case had been called in court, and if any defense was to be put in it must be done at once. Then the notary, who could see no possible excuse under the contract to avoid indemnifying the plaintiffs, agreed that in case Du Bois saved his fortune it should go to Louise as his bride.

The young lawyer arose in court and called for a reading of the contract. When the reader came to the words, "And the said Farlieux shall pay to the said depositors together and to no one or two separately the sum of 100,000 francs," Du Bois stopped him and said:

"Your honor, my client is ready to pay the 100,000 francs specified under the contract to the three depositors together, but is prohibited by the contract from paying the money to two of them separately."

The judge dismissed the case, for the moment the third man who had gone off with the funds should appear he would be arrested, and the notary need not pay till he was present.

The man who had gone away with the deposit never returned, and the notary was never again called on to pay it. Du Bois married Louise, but declined to permit her to accept the dowry. The reputation he made by his handling of the case in court brought him a practice that eventually made him rich.

Got Even.

A courthouse in a Yorkshire town stands near a common. During one of the cases that was being tried the counsel was in the middle of his speech for the defence when a donkey outside began to bray.

The judge, who was notorious for his wit, put up his hand at this juncture and said to the counsel: "Kindly stop a minute, Mr. B. I am unable to hear two at once."

A little later, while the judge was summing up, the donkey again brayed, and the counsel, seeing an opportunity for revenge, stood up and said:

"Would your lordship mind speaking a little louder? There is an echo in court."—Tit-Bits.

A Great Library for Tokio.

Japanese bibliophiles are rejoicing over the purchase at Peking of the Dr. Morrison Library of 20,000 volumes especially devoted to Chinese history and literature, which will have its home in Tokio as soon as a proper fireproof building can be constructed to contain it. It will be a gift of Baron Koyata Iwasaki, vice-president of Mitsubishi & Co., director of the Yokohama Specie Bank, Ltd., and a young millionaire of much popularity. He was educated at Cambridge University, England. The Baron purchased the library for $150,000 and has kept it in Pekin until proper accommodations can be made for it in Tokio; the climate of the Chinese capital is dry and its low winter temperature is admirably suited for the preservation of books. The collection is especially rich in rare and valuable pamphlets. Sixty-eight volumes of United States Reports on Foreign Relations have been cut up and rebound for their contents relating to China. Illustrated newspapers of London and Paris, from 1842 to 1868, have been carefully excised for all matters about China. During the long period that Dr. Morrison was correspondent for the London Times at Peking, he spent $2,000 a year in purchases. While adviser for the Chinese Government, he bought, without regard to cost, all books necessary to complete his library.—East and West News.

FACE NOTHING BUT RUNNING SORES FROM ECZEMA

No rest day or night for those afflicted with that terrible skin disease, eczema, or, as it is often called, salt rheum.

With its unbearable burning, itching, torturing day and night, relief is gladly welcomed.

There is no remedy like Burdock Blood Bitters for giving relief to such sufferers; no other remedy has done, or can do so much for those who are almost driven to distraction with the terrible torture. Apply it externally and it takes out the stinging, itching and burning, and promotes a healthy healing.

Take it internally and it gets at the source of the disease in the blood, and completely and permanently drives it out of the system.

Miss Mary V. Chambers, Anagance Ridge, N.B., writes: "I used Burdock Blood Bitters for eczema. I had it when an infant, but it left me. Two years ago it came back. I used doctors' medicine, but it did good only while I used it. At last my face was nothing but a running sore. I saw in the paper what B.B.B. did for people. I took it, and to-day I am free from that terrible disease."

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Measles.

"Every rise in temperature of a child should mean isolation as completely as if that child were in fact afflicted with an acute contagious disease," says the Medical Record in discussing means for the prevention of measles. By a 'rise in temperature' is understood any temperature higher than 99 degrees F.

For measles is most infectious in its earliest stages, when the symptoms are generally only those of a cold in the head. The typical rash has not yet appeared, but the child is sneezing, blowing a minute spray from its nose with every sneeze. This spray is laden with the germs of the disease. These germs are scattered through the air of the home or the schoolroom and inhaled by the noses of brothers and sisters or schoolmates.

It is then, far more than when the disease has developed to the easily recognizable stage, that infection is spread; therefore it is then that the child must be isolated.

May Arm India.

That Great Britain ought to accept India's offer of ten million men for the Allies is the opinion of many enthusiastic imperialists.

"I believe immediate steps should be taken to arm and munition these splendid fighters," said a prominent public man recently. "Indian regiments helped to stop the German advance at the Marne, and they have done heroic work in France and Mesopotamia.

"To add this huge army to our present forces would be a mighty aid to the Allies, and would unquestionably end the war in our favor in the near future. It is a significant fact that ten million Indian troops, because of their low pay and simple diet, could be maintained in the field for one-half the cost of a similar number of English and Americans.

"It will mean a tremendous sacrifice for us to give India home rule," the Bishop added. "But no sacrifice is too great at a critical time like this, and India, by reason of her already generous contribution of men and money for this war, has won the right to be an autonomous partner of the British commonwealth on the same basis as Canada and Australia.

"Why should not India, with its 300,000,000 people, be granted this boon, and its enormous man-power and resources utilized?"

Bishop Wedgwood, who made this statement, is the presiding dignitary of the Roman Catholic Church in the British Empire. He is the great-great-grandson of Josiah Wedgwood, founder of the Wedgwood Pottery, and is the great-nephew of Charles Darwin.

Food Value of Eels.

Lord Desborough, chairman of the English Commission which was established some months ago by the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries to report on the fresh-water fish supply as a source of food, states that he has collected recipes for over three hundred different ways of cooking the fish. One of the most nutritious fresh-water fish is, he affirms, the eel, the food value of which is greater than that in a similar quantity of loin of beef. He estimates the annual growth of fish-life in the three hundred and forty square miles of fresh water in England at about two thousand tons, and the present stock at about four times the annual growth. That quantity of fish would not go very far as food, but there are enormous opportunities of increasing the supply.

A shipbuilding yard in British Columbia.

SHIPBUILDING IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

If history can be relied upon it is just one hundred years since the first ship was built on the Pacific Coast of Canada. A century and a quarter passed without bringing the industry to any immense proportions, but within the last few years shipbuilding has advanced in British Columbia as if by magic. In the summer of 1916 there was one ship, to be valued at half a million dollars, in process of construction in the province. At present the industry represents an investment of $30,000,000. Nine large vessels, the product of British Columbian enterprise, are now sailing the seas, and thirty-three others, six of which are of steel construction, are either being built or have been contracted for.

The incentives for these gigantic strides in British Columbian shipbuilding have been the demand for ocean tonnage created by the German submarines, and the many extraordinary facilities which the geographical situation of British Columbia and her forest resorts offer for the shipbuilding trade. It was for these reasons that the Imperial Munitions Board selected British Columbia to build twenty-five vessels.

British Columbian shipbuilding is carried on mainly at Vancouver and Victoria, but New Westminster has a yard of considerable proportions at Poplar Island, where four of the ships ordered by the Munitions Board are being constructed. The classes of ships being built are divided into schooners and steamers. The majority are built mainly of wood, but several are made principally of steel. At present the shipyards of Victoria, Vancouver, and New Westminster are engaged in building fifty of these vessels, which will have a gross tonnage of 116,980, and a deadweight capacity of 185,000 tons.

The cost of the material alone that must be applied for the completion of these ships is estimated at $1,700,000. In order to finance the shipbuilding undertakings, actual and contemplated, the British Columbian Manufacturers' Association is endeavoring to secure a "Shipbuilding Loan" from the Dominion Government.

There is a bright prospect before the shipbuilders of British Columbia. It is possible that the yards there will be making ships for the Australian Government in the near future. Negotiations are now being carried on by the shipbuilders of British Columbia with the Government of the Commonwealth, with a view to securing orders.

Some optimists even go so far as to say that the great ships of the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services, now plying between Vancouver, Victoria, and countries of the East, when they have lived their allotted time and their appointed work, may be replaced by other liners, just as magnificent, that may be built in the shipyards of the Canadian Pacific Coast, for it is not likely that illustrious British Columbia will ever relax its hold on an undertaking that has begun so auspiciously.

Canadians Carry Out A Successful Raid Near Lens

Field Marshal Haig Reports Success of an Attack by Dominion's Troops In Which Two Machine Guns Were Captured—French Penetrate German Defences on a Mile Front Taking 150 Prisoners—Germany Extends The Submarine Area.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 9.—At Dusk yesterday evening the enemy succeeded in entering two of our advanced posts north of the Ypres-Staden railway, but was immediately ejected by a local counter attack, the War Office reports. Early this morning Canadian troops carried out a successful raid south of Lens, capturing two machine guns.

(By William Philip Simms.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, January 9.—Another blizzard to-day added several inches to the unmelted mantle of two previous storms on the British front. The temperature was still considerably below freezing to-day. Gun duels on various sectors, and occasional raids are the only activities breaking the lull in the fighting. Both armies are marking time. German prisoners appear very hopeful that peace may prevent the wholesale slaughter which they consider inevitable as the result of the Kaiser's and Hindenburg's dire necessity to save their own skins by a desperate push sooner or later on the west front.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, January 9.—A British counter attack immediately ejected from two advanced pasts enemy groups who had entered them north of the Ypres-Staden railway, according to Field Marshal Haig's report to-day.

South of Lens the British Commander-in-Chief reported successful raids carried out by the Canadians. Two machine guns were taken.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Tuesday (delayed)—In a surprise attack east of St. Mihiel to-day French troops penetrated German defenses on a front of nearly a mile. After demolishing positions and destroying shelters, they returned to their own lines with 150 prisoners and a number of machine guns, an official statement issued to-night by the War Office says.

The French repulsed an enemy attempt in the Champagne. In the Verdun sector and in Upper Alsace the artillery battle continues.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 9.—Further extension of the submarine barred zone is announced in a wireless statement sent out by the German government. It becomes operative on January 31. The extensions which are particularized in the message affect the region around enemy supporting points, on the Cape Verde Islands.

The Cape Verde Islands are off the western coast of Africa, and Dakar is near Cape Verde on the African coast. The Island of Madaira is 440 miles from the coast of Morocco.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 9.—Notwithstanding the pledge given in September, the Germans have sunk another hospital ship, the Daily Mail says. All wounded and others on board were saved. Neither the name nor the nationality of the ship is given by the Daily Mail, which does not say where the vessel was sunk.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

GENEVA, January 9.—Crowds marched through the streets of Berlin, Leipzig and Essen shouting "We must have peace," when the news of the breaking off of the Brest-Litovsk negotiations became known, according to reports received here to-day.

(By Robt. J. Bender.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, D.C., January 9.—President Wilson is conducting a man-to-man appeal to the Russian people and the Liberals of enemy nations. Through "open-air diplomacy—he is trying to convince the Russians that their safety lies in allegiance to the principles for which America is fighting in this war—and Austrian and Bulgarian Liberals that danger to them would follow a German victory. Following President Wilson's direct appeal to the people in his war aims message yesterday, it was learned to-day that the official text of the message would be placed directly before the working classes of Russia and the enemy powers. The committee of public information not only sent the address by cable to every capital in the world, but gave orders for billboard display in Russia and aeroplane distribution on both fronts. The work is a part of a tremendous world propaganda launched by this Government to convince the peoples of all nations that America and the Allies are right and Germany wrong.

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).
(By Carl D. Groat.)

WASHINGTON, D.C., January 9.—If Germany realizes she has reached the end of her rope, President Wilson's and Lloyd George's war aims utterances will pave the way to peace. If she has not yet reached that realization a bitter struggle is ahead. That is the view of high authorities today. All experts say that the nation ought not to be lulled into any false idea of an early peace. As for Congress there was a surprisingly general thought that the speech will hasten negotiations. The President's main purposes in making yesterday's speech were to appeal so strongly to Russia as to bring her back to the Allied fold, to appeal to the Liberals, particularly of Austria and Germany to bring about changes which would shunt militarism aside, and to put the Allies' war aim so strongly on record as to destroy any doubts of where they stood. The President's sympathetic appeal to Russia was regarded hopefully in the State Department and diplomatic quarters.

BILL BOWMAN NOW IN FRANCE

Well Known Local Man Writes From Some Place "Out There"

Mrs. Bowman, Simcoe street, has received the following letter from her son, Pte. Wm. Bowman, of the Canadian Forestry Battalion, "Somewhere in France":

Just a line to let you know everything is the same as usual here. We are settled down to work in real earnest. The railway is finished so we can get the logs to the mill. Our camp is fully equipped with bath and other conveniences, and we are very comfortable except that the sleeping quarters are cold. We have lots of snow and the weather is rather cold. Let me know if you got the two packages I sent by registered mail. We are so close that shopping is bad as the shops do not carry much of a variety or stock. For that matter I guess they are afraid of the big guns and the Hun plants. I have some real war souvenirs and am sorry I can't ship them out of France, but will bring them home with me. How did you like the heather? There is lots of it here, and holly and shamrocks too, that is in the good old summer time. The kiddies are skating on the pond in the valley.

Poor old Halifax got it rather hard. We have not received any particulars yet.

THE KAISER'S FUTURE CLIMATE

It is all right to shovel your own snow these days. The ex-Czar, owing to the war, shovels off his own front walk, and is probably very glad to see the snow all about him up to his knees. The Kaiser, after he is disposed off, will see snow no more. —Toronto Star.

Pte. C. R. Clarke, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Port Hope.

PTE. WM. JOHNSTON.

Pte. William Johnston, of Chemong Indian Village, and a former member of the 93rd Battalion, who was reported ill a few days ago, is now officially reported to have died. Pte. Johnston was among the first Indians to join the 93rd, enlisting in September, 1915. For a number of years he had been employed as a guide on the Kawartha Lakes, especially around Burleigh Falls, and he was a great favourite among tourists, many of whom he had taken to the haunts where the black bass and the maskinonge were to be found.

"Bill" did not hesitate when the call came. He deserted his canoe and came into Peterborough and donned the khaki, saying he was going over where the good hunting was. He was a quiet, reliable soldier, respected by all his comrades, and those who have returned will regret to learn that he has passed away overseas.

No particulars have been received

PTE. C. R. CLARKE.

Pte. C. R. Clarke, one of the little group of Port Hope boys who came to Peterborough in the early autumn of 1915, and joined the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported wounded.

He was a member of the machine gun section of Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit. Of the companions who came from Port Hope with him, Corp. Staples and Pte. Jack Tutton have made the supreme sacrifice.

BIG DRAFT IS COMING

Quota of One Officer, Two Sergeants and Fifty-eight Men Will Join E. Company 1st E. O. R. At The Armouries To-night.

ARRIVE AT 8.30 O'CLOCK

E Company of the 1st Eastern Ontario Regiment at the Armouries will receive a big boost in its strength to-night, when a draft consisting of one officer, two sergeants, and fifty-eight men will arrive from Kingston. Their arrival will increase the strength of E Company to 115 men, and it will steadily grow from day to day as new drafts arrive from headquarters.

Included in to-night's arrivals will be a number of Peterborough men who have reported at Kingston during the past few days. The draft will arrive on the 8.30 G.T.R. train, and will be quartered in the former 57th Band Room in the Armouries.

Lieut. White, of the Canadian Army Medical Corps, has arrived in the city and opened quarters at the Armouries, ready to begin work on the molars of Peterborough's new soldiers.

MILITARY CROSS FOR WELL KNOWN ENNISMORE BOY

Lieut. P. J. Moloney of The Royal Flying Corps Honoured for Heroic Feat In The Air.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Lieut. Peter Joseph Moloney, of the Flying Corps, son of Eugene Moloney, Peterborough, is convalescing in the Daughters of the Empire Hospital at Hyde Park, after receiving over six machine gun bullets.

He was awarded the Military Cross.

Moloney attacked three scouts and drove them off, then was attacked by six Boche machines, who riddled himself and machine, and he was driven down. His uncle, Colonel Moloney, of the Canadians, has returned to the Dominion.

May Import Chinese Labour

For Work On Canadian Farms And Railways

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

MONTREAL, Jan. 9.— Chinese labour on Canadian farms and on Canadian railways is a possibility, according to what many take to be the real meaning of the announcement of the Railway Board yesterday. The announcement dealt with the need of taking up about 2,000 miles of rails and relaying them elsewhere in Canada, a procedure made necessary by the shortage in the rail output, and to this end labour will be needed. The wording of the announcement is carefully made, evidently to avoid too close a knowledge of what is intended, but the only people who are passing through Canada, as far as well informed circles here know, are Chinese coolies, many thousand of whom have been sent to France to do work behind the lines. Before this can be done it will be necessary to secure the permission of the government. The matter will be discussed at Ottawa tomorrow. It is expected that unless a swift decision is made for war purposes, considerable opposition will be developed from labour bodies and others interested. Despatches from the west state that the Chinese are already in a fair way to supplant white farmers in British Columbia, and it is not likely that that province for one will welcome the lowering of the bars.

Political Crises A Clever Fake By Pan Germans

Reported Threat That Ludendorff And Hindenburg Would Resign Was Circulated With The Idea of Arousing The German Public.

JUNKERS IN SADDLE

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Lowell Mellett.)

LONDON, Jan. 9. — Germany has just "put over" another fake political crisis, according to the best information available here to-day. The idea evidently was conceived by the pan-Germans, and the fact that it apparently was carried out and its manufacture cleverly cloaked, is further evidence, together with the Kaiser's attitude that the junkers are still safely in the saddle in Germany. The "crisis" was in the widespread report that Quartermaster Gen. Ludendorff and Field Marshal Von Hindenburg would resign unless the policies favoured by the German annexationists prevailed at Brest-Litovsk.

Both Ludendorff and Hindenburg have been held up to the public as demigods guarding the safety of the people through their super-human cunning in war. The threat that they might step down was evidently circulated with the idea of arousing the public to agree to any steps whatever which might retain these two "super" men on the job.

Best information via Holland is that neither Hindenburg nor his colleagues ever seriously considered resignation. Both are confident that their influence is potent, despite that their liberal tendencies of Foreign Secretary Kuehlman, [illegible]

WILSON'S SPEECH THE SECOND SALVO IN NEW OFFENSIVE

American President's Address Will Be Echoed By Other Allied Leaders And Then There Will Come A Joint Re Statement of War Aims.

LONDON IS PLEASED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, Jan. 9.—President Wilson's speech was the second great salvo in the Allies' political offensive—the drive which is expected to be more effective than guns or bayonets in the defeat of Germany. Other Allied leaders very shortly will fire further salvos or verbal artillery.

Then if authoritative information here is correct, will come a concerted bombardment in the form of a joint restatement of all war aims, the composite of all war aims statements announced by leaders of thought among the Allies. As London eagerly read the President's message to-day, its special appeal to Russia was held the most timely feature of the whole document. President Wilson's speech came at a psychologically opportune moment. Premier Lloyd George's speech had a marked effect in bucking up Great Britain. On the top wave of this feeling throughout the Empire comes President Wilson's notable address indicating thorough agreement and complete unity among the Allies. The Wilson message was received too late for comment by any of the London morning newspapers, except the Chronicle, which said: "Once more the President has seized on a great occasion to lead the conscience of civilized mankind. He is exerting a unique authority, both moral and political as a spokesman for the democracy futures of the world."

HARBOURS ARE NOW ALL UNDER FEDERAL CONTROL

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 9.—All Canadian harbours, already practically nationalized, Montreal, Quebec, Toronto, Vancouver and Victoria, are under the control of the Federal Harbour Commissions and all improvements are federally carried out. Halifax is in charge of the Railway Department and the Department of Naval Service. St. John is apparently now coming also. The harbour works there have already been carried out by the Dominion.

Quebec Has Lots of Coal

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 9.—While all Ontario has to warm itself on these days in its hate of everything French, Quebec is enjoying a roaring fire in its grates, states Le Canada this morning, in alluding to the fact that there is no coal shortage in Quebec, due to that province having been foresighted enough to import increased quantities of coal for this winter's needs.

CANADIAN LINES IN FRANCE IN THE GRIP OF BLIZZARD

During The Milder Weather That Preceeded The Snow There Was Considerable Activity With The Maple Leaf Patrols Out in Force

AIRCRAFT IS ACTIVE

Canadian Press Despatch:
(By W. A. Willison, Canadian Press War Correspondent.)

CANADIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Jan. 9.—After two days of mild weather and rain, Northern France is again in the grip of winter, with snow storms driving over the Canadian lines.

During the milder weather there was considerable activity on the front. Our battle and reconnoitering patrols have been out in strength in No Man's Land every night, but the enemy has shown little disposition to engage them. After one attempted bombing raid, in which hostile parties of six and four men respectively were greeted with Lewis guns and rifle fire, and effectively dispersed. Another small bombing party received such a warm reception that it retreated without [illegible] Both the enemy and our own aircraft have been very active, not only behind the lines and in the forward areas, but in flying low over the front lines and bombing machine guns in the trenches.

Orders To Arrest All Defaulters On Sight

TORONTO, Jan. 9.—Orders to arrest draft defaulters on sight go out tomorrow to all points in this military district. A clear week's grace will then have been allowed these men, and their apprehension and punishment will be commenced in earnest.

PRESENT CRISIS AND PROPHECY

A Conference will be Held in St. Paul's Church

Many have been asking, since the beginning of the great war, if this is the Battle of Armageddon, and if not, do the prophetic Scriptures have anything to say on a struggle so awful and titanic as this? Not a few of the leading ministers and Bible teachers of the world have come to regard the present crisis as pointing towards the close of the "Times of the Gentiles," and the near revelation of our Lord in His Second Advent.

Such well-known preachers as Dr. Campbell Morgan, Dr. F. B. Meyer, Dr. A. C. Dixon, the successor of Spurgeon in the famous Metropolitan Tabernacle, Rev. Stewart Holden, Rev. H. W. Webb-Peploe, Dr. Dinsdale T. Young, a former president of the Methodist Conference in Great Britain, and some others, have recently sent out a letter to their brethren in London drawing attention to the significance of the present hour, and calling upon them to join them in an effort to give further publicity to the significance of the signs of the times.

A conference is to be held in St. Paul's Church for the spiritual life and for the study of prophetic truths, beginning on Sunday, 13th January. It will last till Wednesday evening. Prominent speakers from Toronto and Hamilton will take part in the conference. Dr. Winchester's addresses on Daniel's Prophecy on Sabbath evening, and on Israel as a Sign on Monday afternoon will be of great interest to all who will have the privilege of hearing them.

The public are cordially invited to attend the meetings. They will be held at three o'clock and eight, on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday.

JAPANESE TROOPS FOR VEADIVOSTOK

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Ralph Turner.)

TOKIO, Jan. 9. — The impression grew to-day that Japan had completed all arrangements to send troops to Vladivostok on a moment's notice for the protection of allied interests and to guard allied war material there. Officials refused to confirm the report, although they admitted the situation at that port was critical. Dispatches say the Bolsheviki control the government offices, the banks and leading commercial houses. Five hundred Japanese residents of the city have expressed the belief that it is necessary that the 20,000 German war prisoners in the Amur district be carefully watched.

The American minister to-day spent the morning in conference with John F. Steven, head of the American railway mission to Russia. Three hundred American railway operators are remaining in Japan awaiting developments in Russia.

THE "SPELL" OF DEMOCRACY.

A contemporary complacently remarks that as evidence of the "arrival" of democracy in Russia, "phonetic spelling has been decreed by the government." "Decrees" belong more to autocracy than to democracy. And true democracy is not destructive, but should be constructive—build up instead of destroy. From the few Russian words one sometimes sees, it does not appear that phonetic spelling of the Russian language would make much difference—to the world. It seems that to our iconoclast Canadians the spelling of a language is something upon which he can exercise his smashing proclivities with impunity. He may do so with impunity to himself, but not without injury to our language and its history. The spelling of a language involving its etymological constituents, is the result of centuries of growth and development, and is very largely the character of the language — the language itself; and one might as well attempt to change the character and genius of a people, also the result of the growth and development of centuries, by a stroke of the pen, as to perform an arbitrary change of spelling, by the decree of a revolutionary government that, as in the case of Russia, doesn't seem to know what it wants, or where it is at. Democracy is a good thing only when its principles are sanely and rationally expressed in action. Democracy has come, or is coming, to its own only after the struggles of centuries, and centuries of operation of the machinery for evolving principles and rights inherent in the natural relations of humanity to itself. Democracy is a development and cannot come by sudden change to a people without disastrous and conflicting results. Lack of training in self-government is sure to bring, as is evidenced in the incomprehensible complications and discords that obtain in Russia, complication and confusion through the sudden death abolition of autocracy; and the substitution of an untrained and untamed democracy. Neither can a sudden and arbitrary change in the spelling of an historical language be made without confusion and the destruction of associated values inherent in its historical development.

What is the difference in character and spirit of autocracy between a partisan campaign organization "holding up" a tendering contractor, and the Hun melting down altar vessels to help his devil's work?

HELP THE BOYS FIGHT.

Many of us think that we cannot do much to help win the war; but there are ways we little wot of in which we can do a good deal—ways in which we can show that the pen, in some weak hand, is mightier than the sword. A letter appeared in The Examiner yesterday from a Peterborough soldier in the trenches, which expresses the high appreciation in which the boys in the mire of trench of relief stations, hold letters from the home town; how they are cheered and heartened by the news they contain, and often by the mere fact of remembrance, the briefest letter or post card causes.

And Chaplain Major Davidson, who had many and great opportunities of coming into contact with soldiers on service and in hospitals, bore emphatic testimony to the brightening faces and glowing eyes that came when the orderly corporal places a letter from home in the hands of the tired, mud-plastered Canadian soldier. He also emphasized the fact that the effect had not a mere sentimental value alone; it had the value of adding to the fighting efficiency of the soldier. The rifle, the bayonet or the bomb, are not the only weapons in the soldier's armoury. The fighting spirit is the main thing; with the strong spirit the weak arm is stronger, and with low spirit the strong arm may fall. We often hear of the splendid "morale" of soldiers, the sine qua non of effective fighters, that comes from soldiers being kept in good spirits. If we could realize how much is done in the way of keeping the soldier fit by writing letters from home, we should do more of it. Canon Davidson spoke from his large experience of how the receipt of letters from home by soldiers, not only cheered them, but created a feeling that the people at home in their sympathy and interest, were cooperating with him, standing at his back, watching his work with deep concern; in a word, were helping him fight—making his fighting more effective—and in a sense fighting themselves. One does not know how a little letter or postal card sent to a Peterborough soldier from home, may pluck up his spirits and send him into action with a courage and resolution that may be the turning motive of some heroic action, or the price of a D.S.O., a military medal or a Victoria Cross. Do not neglect to remember the boys in the trenches with letters from home. Even little things like those may help win a victory or stave off the bitterness of reverse.

Canada's new army will help the boys at the front and keep up Canada's reputation for first-rate fighting.

WOOD FUEL FOR NEXT WINTER.

There are considerable discussion and suggestion as to utilizing the wood resources of the country for fuel. These are no doubt suggested, and, indeed, warranted by the present crisis in fuel supply, a crisis that promises to be "a continuous performance"; as we shall no doubt be faced next winter with similar, if not greater, difficulties in obtaining fuel. There is abundance of wood fuel material in the forests of Canada; and it is possible, if not probable that there will be destroyed by forest fires next summer timber equivalent to a supply of wood fuel for the whole of Canada for a whole winter.

It may be said that these forest deposits are distant from inhabited centres. Neither is coal convenient to all urban districts, most of the coal deposits being far away from nearly everywhere else. Neither is it as easily got as wood. We have to burrow deeply into the ground for coal. We don't expect to have coal coming to us on its own feet, any more than we expect to see the Scriptural parable reversed—and see "trees like men walking"—into our wood yards, and wood sheds.

In the matter of coal the chief difficulty to be overcome is the transportation problem, and the same applies to wood supply. We have governments effectively interesting themselves in coal transportation and provision; and why not in the movement of fuel wood?

If it is not asking too much of the government it might organize production of wood for fuel purposes. This might give the Fuel Controller something more than advisory and administory work. It does not require much of his time to tell us to shiver and save coal; and he might employ himself in getting a few wood chopping gangs together to cut a supply of fuel for next winter.

But great bodies, like big governments, move slowly; and we might do better by appealing to smaller governing bodies, like our city council, and with a good deal more confidence in their doing something. Our city council has, to be candid and truthful, done more effective organization and administration, in proportion to its constituency, to relieve the coal stringency, than its big brother, the Dominion Government.

Having shown its capacity to "make it hot" for the citizens in the matter of coal supply, we might call upon the city council to tackle the wood situation, and do something to assure an approximately adequate supply of wood fuel for next winter—to supplement the supply usually provided by wood merchants—for both working to this end the supply will not be overdone, especially if conditions next winter should again create an abnormal scarcity of coal.

It is said that there are considerable stands of fuel wood forest in our north country, not far from water carriage facilities. Would it, or would it not, be practicable for the city to arrange for the cutting of a few hundred cords and have them drawn and piled convenient to where they could be loaded on barges, and brought to the city by the Trent Canal next summer?

We have spent a lot of money on the canal and boast the possession, as a local attraction, and a great utility, of the largest lift lock in the world. Why not change its name or use and make a drop lock of it to lower wood from the north country, into the Little Lake, for the benefit of the predestined shivering citizens next winter?

There should be little question of competition with regular dealers. It would be a new thing in history if corporate enterprise should do anything more cheaply than private enterprise. If the city's enterprise should furnish a supply beyond the demand, it could be held; wood properly piled and protected will keep, and if too much were bought for next winter, dealers would take it off the hands of the city for future use. Anyway, it would do no harm to have an excess supply of wood on hand. We don't know how the coal supply will be next year; and though wood is not as convenient and satisfactory a fuel as coal, it's a mighty good thing to be able to get, with the coal yards and the coal bin empty, and the thermometer tube empty 'way below zero.

We may be getting used to the loss of food laden ships by submarines, but we should not get used to the idea that it is not our duty to economize to save exportable food, and to produce to the uttermost.

THE ARMY TRAINING.

Our boys are being made over. They are forming habits and models of thought and living that augur well for the future of the nation.

When peace comes there will return to us men to whom conscientious work, clean living and sanitary thinking will have become part of their living.

That thought should bring to us sustaining courage and cheerfulness. —Buffalo News.

THE HONOUR OF NEWSPAPER MEN.

An illustration of the fidelity with which newspaper men respect the trust of public men is related by Lord Morley in his new volume of "Recollections." On the eve of the Home Rule Bill in 1886, Parliament asked for it. No wonderful virtue, you may say. But how many of your House of Commons would believe it?" —Philadelphia Ledger.

Widespread interest has been aroused in the inspiring play, "Out There," Laurette Taylor's great New York success, which will be presented at "The Grand" on Monday next, January 14, by a powerful New York company through arrangements with Klaw and Erlanger and George C. Tyler. Many visitors to New York during the past two years have brought back reports of the tremendously effective scenes in this play which has the great war as its background, but treats it objectively rather than subjectively. Written by J. Hartley Manners, author of "Peg O' My Heart," he has happily blended the comedy and pathos so that the tears and laughter are happily intermingled. There is no harrowing of the emotions as in some of the so-called war plays. The action is so natural that it appears not as a picture of life but as a reproduction of life itself. The company carries the entire scenic outfit used in New York, including the costumes, lighting effects and properties. Many out-of-town parties have applied for reservations for the performance of "Out There."

The seat sale opens at the box office Friday morning at 10 a.m.

LABOUR AND CHURCH CO-OPERATION NEEDED

The following from the Toronto Star will be read with interest by the many friends of Rev. T. H. Mitchell, former Pastor of St. Andrew's Church here:

At a meeting of the Ministerial Association, held in the Y.M.C.A., Rev. T. H. Mitchell, Pastor of Old St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, read a paper of exceptional interest on the modern labour problem. For the solution of this problem, he said, the anarchist had one way, the Socialist another, and the air was full of theories. Carlyle in his "Past and Present" had suggested a solution by a return to the paternalism of the twelfth century and had exalted the strong man as the only saviour of industrialism. But Carlyle's paternalism was really a disguised despotism from which modern industrialism had been trying to escape. "No rhetoric," said Mr. Mitchell, "can make excellent the permanent ownership of one man by another. The difficulty is to find the right kind of strong man. Leadership is not always for good. The power of the strong man to-day is perhaps more frequently used in the interests of evil. The logical result of Carlyle's teaching is the boss system."

Was there any hope in a trained democracy? There was sometimes complaint of the quality of democratic representatives but these were usually as good as the people who elected them. What was wanted was not so much the strong man as strong men. Why were they not forthcoming?

Socialism in many countries was making great headway. But there were two kinds of Socialism, the first economic; the second, ethical. Passing by the former, Mr. Mitchell asked what kind of men Socialism would produce. There were again two kinds of Socialists; the first sentimental and the second scientific. Sentimental Socialism offered universal contentment, the other would bring about the new order by force, and would exchange the individual employer for the individual official. "We shall not have the capitalist but we shall have the boss. I am in sympathy with the general aims of Socialism. Who would not be? My chief objection to it is that it is a system that must depend for its stability on sympathy, simplicity, self-control and unselfishness, but it makes practically no provision for the training of men and women in these great qualities. "The co-operative system needs the co-operative man, and given the co-operative man almost any system will work with little friction."

The need then was to strengthen the schools for character. These were the home, the public school and the church.

"I have a dream," said Mr. Mitchell. "If I could live a hundred years I believe I should see it realized. It is that of a church reunited, its work carried on according to a parish system. In the centre of the parish a public school. In this central building a great assembly hall for religious meetings, and additional rooms for social purposes. The morning hours of the pupils spent in theoretical studies; the afternoon in practical; the evening in recreation, and all the activities permeated by the atmosphere of religion. What extravagance would such a realized dream prevent and what a moral uplift it would give to the race!"

Forseeing the increasing scarcity and vaulting prices caused by the war, we took time by the forelock and loaded up with goods and ready-to-wear from every reliable source from which they could be obtained.

We have about fifty-thousand dollars' worth, at the present time, over our usual stock, and we have decided to share the profits with our customers.

It will pay you to get your wool goods—all you will need for some time. The prices in many cases will be even less than they were before the war.

LAURIER WILL NOT RESIGN

Le Canada Says There is No Foundation Whatever For Yesterday's Report.

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 9.—Le Canada (Liberal) says to-day that the article published in the Gazette yesterday to the effect that Sir Wilfrid Laurier would resign, is without any foundation whatever, for the Liberal chief will not resign. The news, if it is such," says Le Canada, "is the product of an over-active imagination—or else of a journalist now too well known. "Whatever weight it has, is lost when one reads the declarations of the Hon. J. P. B. Casgrain and the Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, both of whom declared yesterday, following a conference with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, that the latter would still remain leader of the Liberal party and that today, when he had the majority of the people with him, was not the time for him to dream of resigning.

New Principal For May's School House

This Important North Monaghan School Secures The Services Of Senior Students of Queens.

The large public school in North Monaghan known as May's Schoolhouse, just outside the city limits, installed a new principal with the beginning of the New Year. The gentleman, whose services the trustees were fortunate in securing, is Mr Percy Dancy, late of Aylesbury, Saskatchewan.

Possessing the experience which three years of teaching has given him, and being a senior student of Queen's University, and a young man full of enthusiasm in his profession, his fitness for the position was practically assured.

Mr. Dancy is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Dancy, residing at the corner of Rubidge and Charlotte Streets, where he and his wife have taken up their residence.

HEALS INFLAMED ITCHING SKIN

A Home Treatment Which Relieves and Cures Eczema, Salt Rheum, and All Itching Skin Diseases, and Leaves the Skin Soft, Smooth and Natural.

Woodstock, Ont., Jan. 9.—As a means of allaying inflammation, relieving the dreadful itching and healing and curing itching skin diseases, ulcers, and eruptions, we believe that we can prove that Dr. Chase's Ointment is the most potent preparation that it is possible to obtain.

So many extreme cases have been cured, so much intense and continued agony has been relieved, and such a host of people have volunteered their evidence in this regard that we challenge anyone to produce like endorsement for any Ointment or any preparation which is recommended for such diseases.

Dr. Chase's Ointment certainly stands alone, unapproached, and unrivalled as a healer of the skin, and positive cure for itching skin diseases. From pimples to eczema, from chilblains to ulcers, each and every form of itching skin disease have been cured by this great ointment.

Mrs. J. Chapman, 408 Dundas Street, Woodstock, Ont., writes: "About three years ago, I suffered greatly from an awful rash and irritation of the skin on my chest and back. I could not bear to touch it, and had to wear very loose clothing so nothing would rub against it. At night when I would lie down, I could get neither sleep nor rest. I tried different remedies and doctors' treatments, but never got any relief. At last my daughter advised me to try Dr. Chase's Ointment. I did so, and after the first application I was able to get the first night's good rest that I had for a long time. I continued using the Ointment until I was completely cured."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is known in almost every community. Ask your neighbours about it. There is probably a marked cure at your door which you can investigate. The cures made by this preparation will stand investigation. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

Soldiers and the Churches

The following interesting letter by Rev. Dr Symonds, of Montreal, formerly of Peterborough, is re-published from the Montreal Gazette:

To the Editor of The Gazette.

Sir,—Judging from recent publications of various kinds it would seem that there is some prospect of a fair measure of agreement amongst chaplains and soldiers with respect to the actual situation concerning religion at the Front. For those who are interested in Christianity rather than in denominationalism, there can be nothing more important than a candid recognition of the facts. This must be the starting point of any hopeful efforts for the future.

It is not my intention in this communication to attempt to set forth all the facts, as they appear to me after a careful study of personal letters from the Front, chaplains' communications to many English Church papers and books. I desire only to draw attention to one point concerning which it may be said there is almost, if not entire, unanimity, quite an unusual thing as we all know in religious discussion.

The soldier at the Front cares nothing for denominations, either separately or taken altogether. He is not a denominationalist; he is not even an inter-denominationalist; he is, frankly, an undenominationalist. He has not been made so by the war. He was so before the war. Some of us knew it, and said so. Some knew it, but carefully avoided saying so, covering up the facts with a show of figures. That gallant soldier, Donald Hankey, author of "The Student in Arms," put the matter very plainly in 1916. He is speaking of England. "The average man is not a churchman. That is a statement," he adds, "that needs qualifying. Legally he is a churchman—he has been baptised. Actually, however, he would not claim the title unless for census purposes, or on enlistment, he had to state definitely that he was something or nothing. He is not an atheist. He has a religion of a sort. And he recognises the fact by calling himself 'C. of E.' when he enlists."

There is the plain truth in a nutshell. In Christianity, as specifically Anglican, Presbyterian, Methodist, Congregationalist, and so on, he takes no stock at all. It does not interest him. He is entirely indifferent to the problem of Prayer Book Revision, because neither liturgical nor non-liturgical services appeal to him. The language of our prayers, whether with or without book, is a foreign tongue to him. Our forms of doctrine, whether fashioned in the fourth or the sixteenth centuries, mean nothing to him. For him the Church, to use a very illuminating phrase, is "not adapted to its environment." There is the tremendous fact, the most important fact for the Church to-day, in the face of which questions of ritual, prayer book revision, higher or lower criticism and the like, fade into utter insignificance. Yet how little place it occupies in our Church conferences, assemblies, synods!

But it may be said: Excellent man as Lieut Hankey was, yet he may have been wrong in this matter, or have put it too strongly. I quoted Lieut Hankey because he was a thoroughly representative man. But I could furnish far more testimony than you, Mr. Editor, could afford space to print. Perhaps you will allow me to give that of two different classes of men at the Front. One is that of a young officer who writes to his father, a prominent banker:

"I have been noticing lately that the tendency in the Canadian corps is to have an almost universal church, and the chances of amalgamation, at least in Canada, seem very good. The men whom I've talked to on the subject, whether Roman Catholic or Presbyterian, seem much of the opinion that a universal Church is bound to come."

But the most striking piece of testimony recently published comes from the Guardian, the leading Anglican paper, with rather "High" tendencies, in England. The article is by "A Senior Chaplain in France." It begins thus:

"The longer I am out here, the more I care for Christianity and the less I care for the Church of England."

So spoke the Padre—and his theological connection? A Latitudinarian? A Low Churchman? A fervent but un-Catholic Evangelical? No! Just a priest member of one of our Church of England communities. And in so far as the phrase shocks the reader, to that extent can the reader rest assured of his own alienation from the real laity. The layman is an incorrigible person. He simply will not become interested in "Church questions," and thereby he saves Christianity. And he is right." That is pretty plain speaking from a High Church clergyman and a High Church paper. But plain speaking is more than ever the need of to-day.

May I beg space for a few more extracts from this notable article.

"One great fact emerges from the war. That fact is that no particular section of Christendom has proved more efficacious than another in comforting, sustaining, and ennobling men, or in drawing their souls to God the Father through Jesus Christ, Very God and Very Man. . . . We are all in khaki, so are the men, and so may both continue."

Again: "The Church of England Padre is constantly impressed with the deep earnestness of many dissenters. They form their little prayer meetings, and have their Bible classes. Just a handful of devout souls, they keep up tone and are open about their faith. Who can but love them? Their ways are not our ways, but they are the first to rally round the Church of England Padre at the voluntary services."

It has sometimes been said that whilst the work of the Y.M.C.A. has been a splendid social success, it has not been a spiritual force. The writer of the Guardian article declares this to be a delusion.

The article thus concludes: "So then you will rejoin, 'it doesn't matter at all whether a man is a churchman, a Romanist, a Presbyterian, or a Nonconformist, all do equally well, and there is nothing to choose. Churchmanship matters nothing?' I am not discussing churchmanship. I am recording facts. My whole point is that beneath all our serious difficulties there rests a very solid deposit of the faith, which has nerved and ennobled our men in this crisis. Upon this foundation we find we have all built. We discover unsuspected identities and sympathies. We almost jostle each other in drawing from the same Spiritual Rock. We find that what really helps in time of need is not our Churchiness, but our Christliness, and that the inadequacies or superfluities of ecclesiastical systems are of very small moment if only we belong to the company of the lovers of Jesus."

Can we all recognise these elementary facts of the case? If we can, then the next step forward is to draw the obvious conclusions and to act upon them.

H. Symonds.

Christmas Day, 1917.

Laidlaw's Annual Fashion-Craft Sale

The sale of "Fashion-Craft" Suits, at the store of A. M. Laidlaw, Hunter Street, has attracted many buyers during the short time the January reductions have been advertised.

"Fashion-Craft Shop" has always had a good following from good dressers—the styles to choose from being smart and the models shine with graceful lines and tailored snap.

This year the price reduction sale is proving as successful as its predecessors Of course, Mr. Laidlaw's name has always stood behind "Fashion-Craft" garments in this city, and is a further confirmation that the garments and the values must be right. The time is limited for this sale, so that the choosing won't last much longer.

Jack Primeau, in charge of the hat section, is offering some special inducements during this sale, which gentlemen are also taking advantage of briskly.

Circulars Brought In $790.89

38 North St., Toronto, Dec. 27, 1917.

His Honour Judge Huycke,
Peterborough.

My Dear Sir,—I hear from the Treasurer of the Canadian Serbian Relief Committee that the circular which you had sent out for us in Peterborough brought in $790.89.

This is the largest return yet received from the circular, and of the towns not yet reported only London ought to do better.

I write to give you my personal thanks for your attention to this effort and for the help you gave me in starting it.

Yours very truly,
(Signed.) W. A. Langton,
Hon. Treas.,
Serbian Relief Fund.

PEACE TERMS APPROVED

United States Newspapers Unite in Praising Wilson's Speech

Canadian Press Despatch:

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Editorials in the United States' newspapers this morning unite in praising President Wilson's definition of American peace terms. Throughout the country also, note of adverse criticism was almost entirely lacking. The President's words were called the best possible statement of Democracy's case. British newspaper comment is also commendatory.

SUCCESSFUL CHOIR CONCERT

Former Peterborough Organist's Creditable Work.

The choir of Paris Methodist Church gave their first concert under the leadership of Mr. Harry Hill on Thursday evening, 6th December.

The entire programme was one of merit, reflecting most creditably the musical taste of the leader. In the opening anthem, "The Roseate Hues of Early Dawn" (Slater), the soprano obligato was ably sung by Miss Ewart of Galt. The well-balanced quartette proved itself efficient in a very difficult part. One could not fail to note the solidity of tone produced on the forte passages. The choir's rendering of "Tell Her I Love Her So" (Fays) and "Scots Wha Hae" (Leslie) was particularly pleasing in interpretation, phrasing and execution. "Scots Wha Hae," which was sung unaccompanied, was so well received that the choir were obliged to repeat the last verse.

In the closing anthem, "What of the Night" (Thompson), the solo part was sung by Mr. E. V. Kinsey in his usual able style. The ladies' double quartette was heard in two contrasting numbers and showed careful training.

Miss E. M. Hill, elocutionist, gave three numbers, and proved herself to have more than ordinary ability. The rendering of Tennyson's "The Revenge," surprised many and Paris will seize the first opportunity of hearing her again.

Miss Ewart of Galt favoured with a solo in her usual pleasing manner and earned a well-merited encore.

Mr. Louis D. Thompson showed his tasteful mastery of the organ in Meditation and Toccato, and earned spontaneous applause, playing as an encore Gounod's "March Militaire."

Mr. Harry Hill, the organist and choirmaster, delighted the audience with his rich baritone voice, in "Brian of Glenaar."

Paris is to be congratulated on having a musician of Mr. Hill's ability.

Mr. Hill is a former Peterborough boy, having left the city recently to preside as choirmaster and organist of Paris Methodist Church. While in Peterborough he studied and passed with honours in both vocal and organ examinations, under the tuition of Mr. John H. Renwick, organist of George Street Methodist Church. Mr. Hill's many friends here wish him all success in his musical career.

Insurance Policy Was Changed To Another Company

School Board Members Were in a Critical Mood Last Evening—Payment Deferred.

The action of the Finance Committee of the Board of Education in changing an insurance policy from the Davis-Thompson Company to a company represented locally by H. P. Lindsay, was questioned by Mr. R. Denne at last night's meeting of the Board.

Mr. J. W. Miller, chairman of the committee, in explanation said that the committee was actuated by a desire to distribute the business among the insurance men of the city. The premium on the policy in question amounted to $26 on a $6,000 policy.

"Business men of the city have complained that they have not got a fair share of the business," said Mr. Miller. The latter enumerated the members of the Finance Committee and inadvertently overlooked Mr. T. B. McGrath.

"I thought I was on the Finance Committee," said Mr. McGrath, who stated that he could not see the justice of the change, providing the Davis-Thompson Company was a safe concern to do business with.

Mr. Miller said that on the date the policy expired there was no time to consult all the members of the Finance Committee. Mr. Miller had merely time to "hustle out and see Mr. Gordon." Mr. Miller admitted that Mr. Eastwood, chairman of the Board, was not in favour of the change.

"The change has kept down a lot of talk about unfair methods. It was only a matter of changing a policy for $6,000 from an account of $90,000."

On motion of Mr. Denne and Mr. McGrath, it was moved and carried that the payment of the premium be deferred.

FOUR FIREMEN WERE KILLED

Terrible Accident In Fire in Moving Picture Theatre

Canadian Press Despatch.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.— Four firemen were killed and four injured, probably fatally, early to-day, when the walls of a moving picture theatre at Chicago avenue and Leavitt street, collapsed while they were fighting the blaze. Several hundred spectators who gathered in the street to witness the fire, narrowly escaped injury when the walls fell.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

BRITISH LABOUR PLEASED

Give Whole Hearted Support to Wilson's Programme

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Jan. 9.— Representatives of British labour issued a manifesto to-day giving whole-hearted support to the programme presented in President Wilson's speech yesterday. The manifesto says that in essential respects it is so similar to that which the British labour put forward, that we need not discuss any points of difference in detail.

Officialdom Clouds The Happiness Of Newcomers To Peterboro

This afternoon Dr. C. H. Amys, Medical Officer of Health, and Sanitary Inspector Stapleton, paid a visit to the domicile of a band of foreigners of mixed nationality, who within the past few days have located on George street opposite the Barrie Building. The Medical Health Officer discovered between twelve and fifteen persons sleeping on the floor, and in the language of the visitors you could cut the atmosphere with a knife. The female element of the party presumes to be a phrenologist dirict from Egypt. The spokesman of the party explained that they had just arrived from Sudbury, and several members of the party were about to leave for other parts, leaving the local field to three or four. Dr. Amys gave the newcomers to understand that their presence in Peterborough would not be tolerated unless they improved their living quarters and secured cleaner and more commodious accommodation.

BROKE UP CHAIR TO GET HER HUSBAND'S BREAKFAST. NO FUEL

The coal complaints have had a relapse. Chief Thompson's apprehension that the calm of the past few days was but an interlude, began to materialize to-day, when up to three o'clock about thirty orders were urgently placed through the Police Department.

"They are all serious," stated the Chief, "and the weather man scouts zero weather coming out of the northwest. One woman told in tears how she had broken up a chair this morning to get her husband's breakfast; another home had just two sticks of wood left and the other appeals were equally importunate.

BE READY FOR EMERGENCIES.

The best way is to always keep a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house, ready for emergencies. Then when croup or colds come suddenly they can be promptly cured before they have time to reach an acute and dangerous stage. To meet this requirement we have put the syrup up in family size bottles which contain nearly three times as much as the 25-cent bottle and sell at 60 cents.

SOME COMPLAINTS THAT $12 A TON IS TOO MUCH FOR COAL

The appreciation that many citizens acknowledge for the maintenance of coal supplies is somewhat chilled by the price of $12 a ton. It has become a custom now that deliveries shall be limited to 500 pounds. This uniform allotment has the virtue of guaranteeing a wider distribution; but the price of $3 per quarter ton is regarded as something of a hardship. The reasonable ratepayer realises the difficultits the coal merchant has had to contend with.

The extreme conditions arose too suddenly to permit prearrangements for receipts and deliveries, and the five hundred pound dole at $3 per dole is regarded as akin to an evil that has developed prehaps without the time or the means to resist it.

Many consumers have been told that the price was raised to $3 to cover the expense of small deliveries, but lately they have been pondering the question of why deliveries cannot be grouped, thereby disposing of a load of coal in one locality, instead of sending out in one load two or three orders for customers whose homes are widely separated.

In other words, the citizen who is paying $12 a ton for coal is wondering why it isn't possible to systematise deliveries in such a manner that the $12 price he eventually pays for a ton of coal should not include what he has estimated as one dollar or more for delivery.

Among the city officials, who have been in contact with the dealers, the attitude toward them is "speak softly," "kick gently," or whatever expresses the idea of maintaining the "bonne entente" the coal committee has sedulously cultivated, and also with some success, since the city assumed a coal business of its own.

SPLENDID POSITION FOR CHAS. HUGHES

Will be Sales Manager At The Hamilton Store of Grafton Company

The head office, at Dundas, of the Grafton Company, Limited, have just paid the local store a high compliment by taking one of its staff to fill a much more responsible position elsewhere in its service.

Mr. Chris Hughes, who began his commercial training in the Peterborough store under Mr. Conway, has had thirteen years of preparation for his present responsible position as sales manager in the new Hamilton store, which has just been completed, and opened on Saturday, 5th Jan.

Mr. Hughes is the third consecutive hand who has been taken from the Peterborough store to be put in charge of other stores in the Grafton circuit, a record that the local management may well be proud of. It is the result of the stock-keeping system that was originated here by Mr. Conway, and is now adopted by all the other Grafton stores. Clerks who have become thoroughly familiar with the system here are particularly valuable in installing it in a new store, which fact accounts for the demand on the Peterborough staff for branch managers.

Mr. Hughes left yesterday to take up his new duties, and the Examiner joins with his many friends in wishing him well in his new field of labour.

CRAWLED FOUR MILES WITH A BROKEN LEG.

Kingston: — To suffer a broken leg while in the backwoods near Porcupine, with the thermometer 35 degrees below zero, was the sad plight of a young prospector, Frank Long, formerly of Elginburg. The snow was deep, but he had to crawl on his hands and knees for four miles to a camp. He suffered severe frost bites about his hands, knees, ears and feet, and was brought to the Hotel Dieu.

FIRST MEETING OF THE CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY FOR NEW YEAR PICKS COMMITTEES AND WELCOMES NEWCOMERS

At the regular monthly meeting of the Children's Aid Society in the Bank of Montreal Chambers, at which the president, Mr. E. A. Peck, Mr. Jos. Wearing, Rev. Father Phelan, Alderman Edgar, Dr. King, Mr. G. W. Powell, Mrs. Stocker, Mrs. W. H. Gibbs, Mrs. (Dr.) King, Miss Hurley, Mrs. Evans, and Mrs. Sanderson were present.

The Purchasing Committee for the new year was appointed as follows: Mrs Gibbs, convener; Mrs. Hopwood, Mrs. Stocker, and Mr. Walkey.

Finance Committee: Ald. Edgar, chairman; Rev. C. J. Phelan and Adjutant McElhiney.

Finance Report.

The finance report for the past month was presented by Mrs. W. H. Gibbs, passing the following accounts:

Thos. Hooper	$8.00
C. E. Smith	4.00
J. T. Braund	8.98
Grafton	2.28
J. Steinberg	3.04
W. Petrie	1.00

"Agent" Powell	11
W. H. Walkey, stamps	4.00
	$85.11

Mr. Powell's Report.

Mr. Powell read the following report of December's activities at the Shelter:

December was to a certain extent quiet; nevertheless, some important cases were dealt with. Six children were made wards. One child's foster mother died, and the boy was returned, made a ward, and placed out again. An unruly boy of eleven years was taken from his stepfather and placed out with a farmer. A child of two years of age, whose mother was discouraged and unable to care for the boy, was made a ward. After considerable trouble a Dummer family was located and the mother and three children brought in, the boys being placed in the home. A case of neglect, where a mother promised to care for her children and failed, will be brought before the magistrate. Notice was served on Friday on a Smith Township farmer by Mr. Powell for not sending a girl to school. Since then the farmer has promised to send the child to school without delay.

The Christmas Tree.

The Christmas tree was an enjoyable event and the public were generous in sending presents, fruit, candies, ice-cream, etc. The president and secretary were present, and with the assistance of Mr. Walter Stocker, who kindly acted as Santa Claus, the affair was a success.

Dr. King.

Dr. King, who with great generosity has devoted considerable of his valuable time to attending the children at the Home free of charge, reported a number of operations, and the need for others being performed. On the motion of Ald. Edgar, seconded by Mrs. Evans, he was given power to act in all cases.

Vote of Thanks.

A vote of thanks was moved by Dr. King, seconded by Mrs. Hopwood, to Dr. T. P. McCullough for acting gratuitously in recent operations at the Home.

Dental Work.

Mr. Wearing reported that Dr. Middleton had given his services free of charge to the children of the Home for dental work.

Communications Received.

Mr. Powell read some letters he has received lately. One from Mrs. Kelso, Toronto, offering to undertake to find homes for children; from Mr. Cowan, offering to put advertisements in "Farm and Dairy" for the adoption of children; and a letter from a ward who is dissatisfied with the scant wages he received from his employer.

New Members Welcomed.

In conclusion, Mr. E. A. Peck welcomed the new members elected to the board, who appeared for the first time.

Agent's Activities.

Mr. Powell reported for December six applications for children, four children brought to the Shelter, six children made wards, six investigations, three places visited outside the city, four wards visited, four warnings given, and other work.

Make Your Stomach Your Best Friend

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Digest the Food, Prevent Sourness and Make You Feel Fine All Over.

If you feel any distress after eating take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet. You will then have a good, steady friend in your stomach. For no matter what you eat there will be no gas, no sour risings, no lump in your throat, no biliousness, no dark brown taste in the morning. And should you now be troubled eat a tablet as soon as possible and relief will come promptly. These tablets correct at once the fault of a weak or overworked stomach they do the work while the stomach rests and recovers itself. Particularly effective are they for barqueters and those whose environment brings them in contact with the rich food most apt to cause stomach derangement. Relief in these cases always brings the glad smile to a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets 50 cents, in any drug store. Be good to your stomach.

REPORTS ADOPTED BY BOARD OF EDUCATION

"Money Was Spent to The Best Advantage" Says Mr. W. H. Hill—Finance Committee's Report.

At last night's meeting of the Board of Education the question of re-appointing Mr. W. G. Morrow to represent the Board on the Public Library Board, was deferred until the incoming Board take office. Referring to the increased expenditure of the Board Mr. W. H. Hill, who voluntarily retires from the Board, pointed out that the money was spent to the best advantage. "We cannot spend too much money when it comes to a question of schools," said Mr. Hill. Had we spent more money in years gone by we would not have had to spend as much now as we do in order to bring the city's educational system up to a proper standard of efficiency."

ESTIMATES FOR THE BOARD OF EDUCATION ARE $17,000 HIGHER

Surprise Is In Store for the City Council—Increase Represents Over a Mill And Three Quarters—Salaries and Fees Are Mainly Responsible—The General Statement.

The final meeting of the 1917 Board of Education was held last evening and will be followed on Thursday evening by the inaugural meeting of the new Board. Several members of the old Board who voluntarily retired from the Board were present last evening. Mr. V. Eastwood was in the chair and unless the new Board attempt to smash a precedent, Mr. Eastwood will retain this position for another year in accordance with the custom of electing a chairman for two years. A general statement of receipts and expenditures, also the estimates for the present year were submitted. The statement was adopted, and on motion of Mr. G. N. Gordon and Mr. Crane, the estimates will be turned over to the new Board for final consideration. The estimates for the year 1918 are over seventeen thousand dollars in excess of last year, or more than a mill and three quarters. The general statement showed an overdraft of nearly seven thousand dollars, which will have to met out of the estimates. Salaries and fuel are mainly responsible for the overdraft and also for the increase in the estimates. Last year the salaries exceeded the estimate by twelve hundred dollars and the fuel account was nearly three thousand dollars higher than the estimate. The Board figured on coal on at seven dollars a ton and the cheapest coal purchased was nine dollars a ton.

In view of what Mr. Gordon characterized as a "very serious increase," the estimates were left over for the new Board to deal with.

The Statement.

"I've Never Found Anything Like It"

Mrs. Holden Says Tanlac Made Her Feel Like New Person—Gains Seven Pounds.

"I'm just delighted with what Tanlac has done for me," said Mrs. Dora Holden, wife of a well-known employe of the Gudahy Packing Company, residing at 59 Edwin street, Toronto, recently.

"I have taken many different kinds of medicines in my life," continued Mrs. Holden, "and I can truthfully say I have never found anything to compare with Tanlac. I was in a badly run-down condition and failing health or at least a year. I had no appetite and what I did eat seemed to give me no nourishment. My nerves were all shattered, my sleep unsound, and I always felt as tired in the mornings as if I hadn's slept at all. I had fallen off until I weighed only ninety pounds and just kept going down. I was pale and sallow, had no life or strength and never felt like turning my hands to a thing. In fact, I just felt wornout, tired in the mornings as I hadn't I certainly feel altogether different now.

"I have just started on my third bottle of Tanlac, but before I finished my first bottle I felt decidedly better. I never thought it possible for a medicine to give such quick and satisfactory results. My appetite is fine. I enjoy everything I eat and have already gained back seven pounds of my lost flesh. My nerves are perfectly quiet now. I sleep like a child and get up in the mornings thoroughly refreshed. My tired, worn-out feelings are gone entirely. I have plenty of new life and energy and simply feel like a new person.

Tanlac is sold in Peterboroug h by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.

INCREASE IN PRICE OF LAUNDRY SOAPS

Price of Sugar Reduced by On Refinery—Market Report

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in the Canadian Grocer this week:

Another advance has been recorded in the price of laundry soaps to the extent of 60c per case. This makes the second advance within the past three weeks. Owing to the shortage of fats and oils there is a strong market for this class of soap. One refiner has again reduced the price of sugar 30c per hundred. Starches and cornstarch have declined 1c per pound. Corn syrup is also down in price.

Package rolled oats have not yet advanced in price but a strong situation exists owing to the steadily upward tendency in bulk rolled oats. Manufacturers of package rolled oats will not accept contracts on the present price basis as they assert that they would be losing money if they did. Only immediate needs in package oats are being met at the present time. Further advances were recorded in bulk rolled oats and oatmeal. Cornmeal made a big advance due to a chain of circumstances, namely, poor quality of corn, light supplies of corn available, and lack of transportation to bring the grain forward once it is secured in the United States markets. Hominy grits and pearl hominy also made slight advances during the week. No announcement has been made with respect to higher prices on flour. One milling concern advanced the price of Ontario flour during the week.

OTHER ADVANCES.

Other advances recorded during the week include those on sal soda and cleanser. Creamery butter was in a strong market during the week, and advances were recorded in this commodity. Good supplies of margarine from the United States are now coming into the Canadian market but its presence as yet has had no weakening effect on creamery butter, although it has affected the price of dairy butter toward lower levels.

There was a firmer tendency in a number of provision lines. Some lines of fish show an upward tendency. Fish consumption is reported to be on the increase. Now that stocktaking is about completed wholesalers are looking forward with confidence to the New Year's business.

RAILWAYS SAVE COAL.

Montreal. — The curtailment of passenger service just announced will save about 6,000 tons of coal per month on the Canadian Pacific Railway. A passenger locomotive burns from 90 to 100 pounds of coal per train mile, and on this system alone operation of 120,000 train miles will be obviated. To a similar extent the Grand Trunk will be affected. The Canadian Northern service, already limited, is not being cut down so much.

In addition to the fuel saving, the handling of freight will be facilitated. The reduced services are approximately the same as last winter, when many passenger trains were taken off to release motive power to handle the freight congestion. It is expected that in April the normal schedules will be resorted to.

HALPIN AND ROSE WITH LONDON TEAM

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 8—The steady stream of draftees which flows into this city daily always has a fair sprinkling of hockey players, and since 3rd January the London Military Hockey Club has grown into a more formidable aggregation. The local O.H.A. senior team will present a much stronger front to-morrow at Kitchener for their second game in this group.

Since Saturday enough players to put practically a new team on the ice have reported. This new team has been greatly augmented by the acquisition of Lornie Rose and Grover Halpin, two Peterborough boys, the former a regular on the Sarnia seniors. The latter played in Peterborough last year. In addition to this pair are Klaehn and N. Ruppel of the Kitchener and Preston seniors, and when these men are placed on the ice with Sandercock of Woodstock and Caldwell of Galt and Howson in goal, they look good enough to give any of the teams in this district an argument.

Additional players who have reported here are Van Every, Galt; Crouchman, Sarnia; Ainsley, Trump, and Bond, Northern League players, and Hansford, of Ingersoll.

The probable line-up for to-morrow's game at Kitchener is: Goal, Howson; defence, Sandercock and Halpin; centre, Rose; wings, Klaehn and N. Ruppel, with Caldwell or Crouchman as substitutes.

BELLEVILLE OUTCLASS COBOURG

BELLEVILLE, Jan. 8.—Cobourg Heavy Battery O.H.A. intermediate team was defeated here this evening in the opening game of the season by Belleville by a score of 16 to 6.

The locals led all the way, the first period ending 5 to 1 and the second 14 to 5. The teams:

Belleville: Goal, Toland; defence, Green, Hagerman; wings, Symons, D. Whelan; rover, T. Whelan.

Cobourg: Goal, Fleming; defence, Raine, Campbell; wings, Clay, Butler; rover, Hill.

Referee: Hewitson, Toronto.

PETES CONFIDENT OF WINNING ON FRIDAY

The Peterborough Juniors will practice to-night in final preparation for Friday night's game at Brock Street Rink, when the Lindsay Midgets will play the return game here.

Lindsay won the opening fixture by 8 to 5, but the Petes should even up matters on Friday. At all events, it will be a battle royal. There is a double schedule in this district, with games to count, so that it is up to the Petes to land Friday's game to get on even terms with Dick Butler's outfit. It will be the introduction of six-men hockey in Peterborough, and the fans will appreciate the difference in the speed of the game.

It is likely that Stanley Burgoyne of Toronto will handle the bell.

HALIFAX LACKS COAL.

Ottawa. — Official notification has been received in Ottawa to the effect that there is only four and a half days' supply of coal in the city of Halifax.

108 BOSTON SCHOOLS TO CLOSE.

Boston, Mass. — Unless the shortage of coal here is relieved, 108 of Boston's schools will not be opened on Monday, it has been announced. The harbour is choked with ice and shipping is practically at a standstill.

HARDEN RESENTS TEUTONIC PLANS FOR ANNEXATIONS

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 8.—Maximilian Harden in Die Zukunft scathingly condemns Austro-German plans for annexations in the east. He declares that a broad chasm still yawns between the two parties at Brest-Litovsk and that if the demands of the Central Powers to annex or join the territories in question to the two last Empires in Europe, then there will again be only an armistice and there will be no lasting and honorable peace with Russia which country will not eternally wear Lenine's red livery or be satisfied with the disintegration and communistic dwarf communities.

Herr Harden says that even were the Letts, Lithunians, Livonians and Esthonians, who for five centuries have been opposed to all Germanism, contrary to all expectations to vote for union with the German Empire, Germany would be obliged to refuse that union for its body cannot bear fresh foreign elements and it does not desire by provoking the deep hostility of the Russian people, which before 1950 will comprise 200,000,000 souls to brew a consoling draught for its western enemies.

The key to the terms of peace, Herr Harden declares, lies in the capital at Washington.

Arts and Crafts Column

HUGHSON JOHNSTONE, painter and decorator, 416 Water street, will answer in this column each Wednesday for Examiner readers, questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paper-hanging, kalsomining, furniture polishing, decorating, etc., for the benefit of those who might like doing their own work. Questions sent to the Examiner will receive attention in due course.

James McD., Millbrook: Please tell me the right colour to paint windows and doors, as I want to grain them and how many coats do I need to give them?

Ans.: I presume your doors and windows are new. If so, first shellac all the knots and sappy parts, then apply three coats of paint, allowing each coat to dry thoroughly before applying the next. As I do not know what wood you intend to grain them to represent I cannot advise you as to colour.

Student, City: In your very helpful "Arts and Crafts" column will you make a ruling for we students? How many primary colours are there, also what name are they known by?

Ans.: "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread." Were I to plunge headlong into this, make a ruling for you and thus commit myself, I doubt not some would class me with the former, so "safety first." My humble opinion, however, is that there are but three "primary colours." By some "white" is claimed to be pure light not broken into colours, yet a composition of all colours, while "black" is pure darkness in which all colour are absorbed. Red, yellow and blue it was taught, were the primaries. On the other hand Newton, the great English colorist, went on record as claiming such a theory to be wrong. So there you are, make your own selection.

J. B. R., George street: I put up a partition of wall board and would like your suggestion as to what I should do with it to make it look finished.

Ans.: The average wall board can be finished in several ways. Paper, paint, kalsomine, warbling, graining etc., etc But as I do not know the kind of wall board used, nor where it is, I cannot advise a treatment. What would be suitable for a barber shop would be entirely unsuitable for a den, and what might look well in a bridal chamber would hardly do in a restaurant. Let me know the kind of wall board used and where your partition is, whether in office, bedroom or store. Then, perhaps, I can be of some little service to you.

ARREST WAS ADVENTUROUS AGENT HAD RISKY TIME

GRANITE CITY, Ill., Jan. 5.—The arrest of a Mississippi River houseboat dweller who is alleged to have made seditious utterances was accomplished by Byron Haynes, U. S. agent, after many difficulties.

Accompanied by a guide in a motor boat, Haynes, after a difficult passage through the ice-clogged river, succeeded in reaching the island on which lived Harry Metzen, 54 years of age. Metzen submitted to arrest, but the guide refused to make the return journey, declaring the engine was broken. The boat was not fitted with oars, and the three settled down to wait for a passing craft to tow them back to shore.

Two days of waiting found the three huddled in Metzen's houseboat, and, with the supply of firewood running low, Haynes started out to procure fuel, leaving Metzen in charge of the guide, who was armed. When Haynes returned an hour later he was met at the point of a revolver by Metzen, who had overpowered the guide, bound him and thrown him into a corner. Haynes proved an effective talker, and induced Metzen to surrender his revolver.

Next day rude oars were fashioned from saplings and the return trip started. After floundering in the floating ice for several hours another boat was sighted, and the three men were rescued, but not before they suffered frozen ears and frostbitten feet.

MEN'S CLOTHING ECONOMIES.

New York. — "Peg top" trousers, "pinch back" coats, French facings, fancy flaps and patch pockets, are the latest novelties to be offered as a sacrifice to economy. In an address on clothing economy before delegates from virtually every clothing centre in the United States, M. Cutter, a member of the Commercial Economy Board, cited some of the limitations in men's clothing that had been decided upon as a conservation measure. All yokes and pleats are to be eliminated, as well as outside penny pockets, double breasted sack coats and vests, and cloth belts on coats.

Announcement was made that a war service committee would be named to represent the clothing industry in dealing with the government.

It is the rankest kind of folly for a man to expect the world to grow better until he begins to notice improvement in himself.

CUTICURA HEALS ITCHY SCALP RASH

That Burned and Pained Four Years. Hair Came Out. Loss of Sleep.

"My scalp was red and very itchy, and a fine rash developed which burned and pained incessantly. This seemed to destroy the hair roots, causing my hair to come out, which disfigured the top of my head. It also caused loss of sleep.

"The trouble lasted four years. Then I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment which encouraged me so I bought more, and I had one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Ointment and I was healed." (Signed) John Cunningham, Church St., Antigonish, N.S., April 4, 1917.

Why not make Cuticura your everyday toilet soap and prevent skin troubles? Absolutely nothing better.

For Free Sample Each by Mail address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. A, Boston, U. S. A." Sold everywhere.

POLICE TO ENFORCE THE RESTRICTION OF HOCKEY ON PUBLIC RINKS

Ald. Dobbin has issued the following 'official communique":

So many complaints have been made to members of the City Council that the larger boys get on the public skating rinks and monopolize the ice, driving off the smaller kids, who wish to skate, that at the meeting on Monday night the trouble effected its own cure.

A resolution, governing the playing of hockey, on all the rinks, was passed, and the police will, if necessary, see the regulation enforced, which is, that all hockey is forbidden, except between the hours of six to eight o'clock each evening. Boys will do well to pay attention to the order, which is one made to ensure the largest possible opportunity for enjoyment by the smaller children, for whose benefit the rinks have been established.

Some complaint was made that older people take the rinks, occasionally, and have skating parties. Such recreation is quite in order, but it must be understood that in so doing the ice is not to be in any sense reserved for any one party or other occasion, but that the ice is free and open to all, at all times, with no restrictions as to previous arrangement. The rinks are wholly public, and no one except the Council may make regulations or appropriate the ice.

It is impossible, on account of expense, to appoint caretakers for all the rinks, so the public are expected to see that the fullest opportunity for friendly enjoyment of the ice is afforded, and that children are allowed to skate as much as they wish, so long as all are equally favoured.

NEW REGULATION IN EFFECT RESTRICTS THE HEADLIGHTS OF AUTOS

An amendment to the Motor Vehicle Act requires that all motorcycles must have front and rear markers, both of which shall be carefully exposed and the figures of the number of their permit shall not be less than two inches in height. Both markers must be so fixed that they shall be plainly visible, and the front marker must be numbered on each side.

Motor vehicles with a lighting system of more than four candle power, equipped with reflecting and deflecting devices, shall not show a beam of light more than 42 inches above the surface on which the car is travelling, measured seventy-five feet in front of the car.

These amendments are now in force and Chief Thompson directs the attention of motorists to this change, and urges those who are using their cars now to comply with this last clause at once.

WAVE OF CRIME IN GERMANY.

Berlin Tageblatt Discusses the "Calamity" of Robbery and Theft.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 8.—A rapid increase in the number of crimes committed in all parts of Germany is reported by the German press, and newspapers report a similar condition in Austria. Theodor Wolff, in the Berlin Tageblatt, says that robbery and theft now amount to a calamity, and that insurance companies have increased their premiums from 50 to 100 per cent. All classes are affected, the thieves frequently enjoying immunity owing to fear of revenge.

The Leipsic police report that in the large towns numerous burglaries occur daily.

EIGHT-CENT MILK SELLING IN CHATHAM

CHATHAM, Jan. 7—The establishment of milk depots in many parts of the city by the Mechanics' and Workmen's Board of Trade has resulted in the price of the commodity being reduced in the centre of the city to eight cents per quart, and in the outlying districts to nine cents. The depots have been established in grocery stores, and by doing away with the cost of delivery the board has found it possible to effect a material saving to the consumer.

The Silver Tongued Orator of Minnesota, Charles A. Towne, Former United States Senator

Late Member of Congress from New York—Nominated for Vice-President

Recommends Nuxated Iron to All Who Feel the Need of Renewed Energy

Says That Henceforth He Shall Not Be Without It

Probably no remedy has ever met with such phenomenal success as has Nuxated Iron—Over three million people annually are taking it in this country alone, to say nothing of the vast number who are using it in France, England, South America and other countries. It has been highly endorsed and used by Former United States Senators and Members of Congress; physicians who have been connected with well-known hospitals have prescribed and recommended it; Monseigneur Nannini, a prominent Catholic Clergyman, recommends it to all members of the Catholic Church. Former Health Commissioner, Wm. R. Kerr, of Chicago, says it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician; Dr. H. B. Vail, formerly Physician in the Baltimore Hospital and a Medical Examiner, says that time and again he has prescribed Nuxated Iron and surprised patients as the rapidity with which the weakness and general debility were replaced by a renewed feeling of strength and vitality; Former First Assistant Postmaster General of the United States, C. P. Grandfield, strongly endorses and recommends it to the tens of thousands of civil service employees who know his name and signature. Sarah Bernhardt—"the Divine Sarah," the world's most noted actress, has ordered a large quantity sent to the French soldiers to help give them strength, power and endurance.

The famous "cyclone" Davis, Member of the 64th United States Congress, says the effect of Nuxated Iron on him was almost magical, that after taking it, nothing seemed to tire him out, no matter how strenuous it might be. Dr. A. J. Newman, late Police Surgeon of the City of Chicago, and former House Surgeon of Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago, says Nuxated Iron has proven through his own tests of it to excel any preparation he has ever used for creating red blood, building up the nerves, strengthening the muscles and correcting digestive disorders.

Dr Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York, says he has never before recommended any remedy to the public but that in the case of Nuxated Iron he would feel he were remiss in his duty not to mention it. Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author, says that in his recent talks to physicians on the grave and serious consequences of iron deficiency in the blood of American women he has strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe mere organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for their weak, run-down, nervous, haggard-looking patients. Dr Cobb, the greatest baseball batter of all time, took it to help give him renewed energy and great staying power. No matter what anybody says, you could not, at this day, get such prominent men to endorse a remedy that has no value,—doctors, lawyers, politicians, athletes—a great array. Dr. E. Saner, a Boston Physician who has studied both in this country and great European Medical Institutions, said: "Nuxated Iron is a wonderful remedy. Not long ago a man who came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of twenty, and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact, a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—Nuxated Iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 45 he was careworn and nearly all in—now at 50, after taking Nuxated Iron, a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. If people would only take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak and run-down instead of dosing themselves with habit-forming drugs, stimulants, and alcoholic beverages, I am convinced that in this way they could ward off disease, preventing it becoming organic in thousands of cases, and thereby the lives of thousands might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, kidney, liver, heart trouble and other dangerous maladies. The real true cause which started their disease was nothing more or less than a weakened condition brought on by a lack of iron in the blood. Thousands of people suffer from iron deficiency and do not know it."

If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two to five grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which has been used by Former United States Senator Towne with such surprising results, and which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well-known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron, that they offer to forfeit $500.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

What Senator Townes Says:

"As a member of Congress from New York, as a member of Congress and Senator from Minnesota, as participant in political campaigns and candidate for Vice-President, my nervous energy and reserve force were tremendously drawn upon. That I survived these trials and came into advanced middle life with the elasticity and strength of a boy is unquestionably due to the rigorous attention I have paid to the proper care of my body. Recently I have been taking Nuxated Iron and have found it of the greatest benefit as a tonic and regulative. Henceforth I shall not be without it. I am in a position to testify for the advantages of others, to the remarkable and immediate helpfulness of this remedy, and I unhesitatingly recommend Nuxated Iron to all who feel the need of renewed energy and the regularity of bodily functions.

Chas. A. Towne

Minnesota's Man of Mark

Former United States Senator, Charles A. Towne, graduated from the University of Michigan, twice elected member of the United States Congress, served in the United States Senate, nominated for Vice-President, takes Nuxated Iron; now recommends it to all who feel the need of renewed energy.

ITALIANS EVADE CALL TO COLOURS

Of 750,000 Emigrants to Other Lands Only 220,000 Respond—Subsidies Wanted For Families of Soldiers

POPE PLANNING PROTEST

ROME, Jan. 10.—Dr. G. Prezioni, who is a recognized authority on Italian emigration, calculates that out of about 750,000 Italian citizens resident abroad and liable to military service only about 220,000 have obeyed the summons to join the colours. Almost half of those who obeyed the call to arms were emigrants in European countries, as the Italian emigrants in North and South America who repatriated for military service amounted to 120,000, and almost 500,000 are defaulters.

According to Dr. Prezioni, the large proportion of Italian emigrants in America failed to join the colours owing to various causes, the principal among which being the fact that many had acquired naturalization without renouncing their Italian citizenship, and as a result they are still considered Italians here while they are American citizens to all intents and purposes in the country of their adoption.

In addition, the difficulties connected with repatriations from America are in many cases almost unsurmountable. For instance, most Italians settled in America would have had to bring over their families with them, as they could not continue their business or keep their dependents on the small subsidy granted by the Italian Government to soldiers' families. Italian emigrants have not been sufficiently encouraged by the consular authorities to repatriate for military service. Transport facilities are lacking and no assurance was given them that after the war they could return to America and resume their work there even if they happened to be illiterate.

SUBSIDIES WANTED FOR FAMILIES.

Now that Italian emigrants in America will have no other option but to join the American army in case they refuse to repatriate for military service in Italy, even if the question of naturalisation remains unsettled until after the war, it will be necessary that sufficient transportation facilities will be available for those emigrants who prefer to serve in the Italian army and that the subsidies granted to their families by the Italian Government should be increased lest they should be deterred from repatriating on account of the fear that their families will become destitute.

There is every reason to believe that the special agreement or convention between Italy and America, regulating the question of Italian emigrants liable to military service will include, besides a general amnesty to all defaulters and deserters, also special provisions relating to transportation facilities and special subsidies to soldiers' families.

A group of members of Parliament have given notice of a motion upon which they insist there shall be an early discussion, demanding that the rations of soldiers should be increased and improved, that woollen underwear and blankets should be provided for the men at the front without delay, and that financial compensation, consisting either in a reward or a sum of money paid to the family, should be granted to all men decorated for valor.

The question of soldiers' rations is justly considered of the utmost importance, and its immediate solution is urged lest the resistance and efficiency of the army should be weakened, the more so as the British and French troops now on the Italian front are exceptionally well-fed. As the rations of the Italian troops in Macedonia have been specially improved in order that they should not compare unfavourably with the food allowance of the Anglo-French troops there, probably the same system will be adopted on the Italian front.

POPE PLANNING PROTEST.

Although no comment is allowed in the Catholic press about the secret clause in the treaty between Italy and France, England Russia excluding any interference on the part of the Pope in connection with the war, still it is well known that the sentiment of Italian Catholics is considerable. It is possible that the Pope will protest in some way "at a more opportune time," as the official organ of the Holy See openly hinted against the attitude of the Italian Government toward the Holy See. It is known when such a protest will be made, and what form it will be given, but it is certain that in any case the Pope will refrain from provoking any dissatisfaction among the Catholics in Italy now united with all other parties for the defence of the country, or creating complications for the Italian Government.

The report that Signor Meda, Minister of Finance and representative of the Catholics of the Cabinet, will resign, is unfounded. The Pope's protest, in all probability, will be limited to reiterated assurances made in some public utterance that the Holy See never aimed to secure any advantage from the war and in no case was the restoration of temporal power even connected with any of the Pope's initiatives towards peace. It is stated that the Pope will likely allude to the subject in the speech usually delivered when he receives the cardinals about Christmas.

CAMBRAI REVERSE NOT SERIOUS

Claim of German War Chiefs Shown to Be Untrue--No Cause For Pessimism, Declares British Military Attache

LINE WAS NOT BROKEN

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 10.—In answer to German claims of accomplishment in their encircling counter-attack at Cambrai, Brig.-Gen. McLachlan, military attache of the British Embassy here, issued a statement last night recounting some of the things done by the British and French, with the comment that there is no necessity for pessimism.

"On the 20th of November, 1917," said General McLachlan, "the British made their celebrated attack opposite the Cambrai, and captured both the Hindenburg line and the Hindenburg supply line along a front of some nine miles. Ten days later, on the 30th of November, the Germans heavily reinforced their troops there and tried to recapture all the lost ground, and in their own words to 'turn our embryonic victory into defeat by an encircling counter-attack.' They claimed to have taken six thousand prisoners and one hundred guns.

"I do not admit the accuracy of these figures, but, assuming for the sake of argument that these figures are correct, I should like to give a few facts as to what the British did. These guns were the first guns lost by the British on the Western front since the second battle of Ypres, in April, 1915, and before this battle of the 30th November, 1917, the British on the Western front had only lost 84 guns, whereas the number of German guns captured by us since the beginning of the war is 614.

Net Results of Fighting.

"The net result of the fighting on the Cambrai front is that we still remain in possession of both the Hindenburg line and the Hindenburg support line on a front of nine miles. On this front we have advanced a distance of between 2,000 and 4,000 yards. We have captured since the 20th of November 11,000 prisoners and 138 guns, captures which are considerably greater than those claimed by the Germans. In addition to these results we have inflicted casualties on the enemy which are out of all proportion to our own.

"During the year 1917, in all the theatres of war, the British have captured 781 guns and 115,000 prisoners. Of these, 531 guns and 72,000 prisoners have been captured on the Western front.

"Our brave allies, the French, during the year 1917, have captured on the Western front very much the same number of guns and prisoners, though I have not the actual figures with me. This, I think, shows that there is no necessity for pessimism regarding the efforts made by the Allies on the Western front."

GRAIN MARKET

Oats recovered all their lost in Tuesday's selling movement, in a new upward movement which developed yesterday. The strong cash situation still dominates the market, and until receipts show a decided increase there is not likely to be any material setback in prices. Corn also developed some strength on the existing situation. A report however that a large number of cars are to be set free for the removal of corn to west of the Mississippi gave rise to probable lower markets at an early date.

N. B. POTATOES UP AGAIN

Prices in Peterborough Range Around Two Dollars.

Ontario potatoes are scarce on the Toronto market, partly as a result of bad weather, and partly as a result of the railway tie-up. Dawson and Elliott are paying $2 per bag f.o.b. Toronto, bagged, for Ontario stock, a slight advance on last week's prices. Incidentally, the Food Controller last week stated that no advance in potato prices would be permitted.

"There's bound to be a rise," said one man on Monday, "if this rough weather keeps up, because there will not be enough to meet the demand. . . . Of course, you can't tell, the Food Controller might DO something yet, and we will all come under license on the first of February.

A. A. McKinnon quotes Ontario potatoes in bags at $1.95 f.o.b. Toronto. "New Brunswicks are being offered at $2.25, but we aren't buying," said Mr. McKinnon. This is an advance of at least 10c per bag over a week ago, and is in spite of the bold assertion of Mr. Hanna that no increase will be permitted.

Prices in Peterborough fluctuate around $2 a bag.

FIRE DESTROYS BOSTON CAFE

Building Was Partially Destroyed —One of the Cooks Lost His Life

THE CAUSE

About four-thirty this morning fire broke out in the Boston Cafe, George street, and an hour later the three storey building was almost a complete wreck. One man lost his life and three other men who were sleeping in the third storey of the building, were removed in their night attire by the firemen. Gus Kastantino, a Macedonian, who was employed in the kitchen on the second floor, could not be located in the bedroom and is believed to have lost his way during the fire. His body was found about five hours later. The fire is said to have been caused by emptying a pot of grease into a pan on the range. The grease caught fire and the flames swept up through from the second storey into the third, where the cooks and helpers were sleeping. The timely arrival of the firemen probably averted a greater loss of life. Three of the four men were taken down a ladder, but the fourth man could not be located.

The Loss.

The loss will be in the neighbourhood of twenty-five thousand dollars to building and contents. T. C. Elliott's dry goods store, which adjoins the Cafe, was deluged with smoke and water and the loss will run into several thousand dollars.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Complication of Love and War

By ELINOR MARSH

My grandfather was graduated from college in 1850. At that time the plantation system in the south was attractive to northern young men, and he determined to go south as a tutor in some southern family. Events leading to the war between the states were coming on rapidly, and there was already much prejudice in the south against northerners. Nevertheless my grandfather, Gilbert Hastings, secured such a position as he desired in the state of Georgia in the family of Fitzhugh Griggs, who owned a large plantation worked by 800 negroes.

His duties were to prepare the older son, Herbert, for college and teach the younger children in the elementary branches. There was a daughter two years older than Herbert, whose studies in literature young Hastings was expected to conduct.

It is strange that parents will permit the intimate association of a son or daughter with one whom they would not approve for a wife or husband, for a love affair is most likely to be the result. The present case was no exception to the rule.

However, no one was aware of it except the lovers. When both the south and the north were arrayed against each other by the firing on Fort Sumter my grandfather left for his home with the understanding that when peace came he would return and see what could be done in gaining Olivia's parents' consent to their union. But the outlook was not hopeful.

In the spring of '64, when General Sherman was making his march to the sea, my grandfather, who was a lieutenant in the invading army, passed near the plantation where a few years before he had been a tutor. Being familiar with the region and able to imitate the southern accent, he volunteered to disguise himself as a poor white countryman and go forth for information as to the location and numbers of the enemy's forces. He was recognized by one he had known during his residence there and turned over to the Confederate authorities, by whom he was tried and sentenced to be hanged as a spy.

As a last resource he sent to the plantation to learn if Fitzhugh Griggs was there and if he would not intercede for him. Griggs had commanded a Georgia regiment, had been wounded and was at home recovering from his wound. He declined to interfere to save Lieutenant Hastings until his wife and Olivia begged so hard that he should do so that he at last consented. Having great influence with the officer into whose hands the spy had fallen, his efforts were successful. Colonel Griggs not only succeeded in saving my grandfather's life, but in having him paroled to remain on the Griggs plantation till the end of the war.

The planter's children had received no instruction for several years. Herbert had recently entered the Confederate army, but the younger members of the family were growing up in ignorance. It was this that induced Colonel Griggs to suggest that Hastings be paroled on his plantation. He desired that he should resume his duties as teacher.

But this plan placed Lieutenant Hastings in an equivocal position. His life had been saved by Colonel Griggs, and his intimacy with the colonel's daughter was resumed. Griggs not dreaming that Olivia was in love with a northern soldier who had been condemned as a spy. Not only would it be dishonorable in Hastings to take advantage of his position to possess the girl he loved, but his sentence had been merely suspended, and at a word from Griggs he could be sent to the gallows.

The strain upon the lovers was very great. My grandfather, who was an honorable man, treated Olivia as if there had been nothing lover-like between them, and she, not realizing the cause of such treatment, made it very hard for him. During the balance of the war, though it was but a few months, he was subject to a terrible temptation. The more he endeavored to treat Olivia with apparent indifference the more difficult became his position. At last he said to her: "If your father knew of our relationship he would doubtless consider that I was acting a dishonorable part. My life is in his hands. We do not know but that he would send me back to the authorities to meet the doom of a spy."

This frightened Olivia to such an extent that she controlled herself, and no one on the plantation suspected that she and Lieutenant Hastings were lovers until they made the fact known themselves.

The war closed in April, leaving Colonel Griggs with a wrecked plantation and all the negroes freed by virtue of the emancipation proclamation. From a rich man he had been reduced to poverty. Hastings went north to find that his father early in the war had bought cotton at a low price and sold it at a price varying from $1 to $2 a pound. This had made him a rich man.

The lieutenant returned to Georgia and made a formal application for the hand of Olivia. Since he was the sole heir to a fortune and the colonel was a pauper, the man who would have spurned him as a son-in-law before now gave a willing consent. He and my grandmother were married and went north. I am one of their numerous grandchildren.

A Meeting

By SARAH BAXTER

One evening at a social gathering in New York city a girl sat alone, and those who passed her would have wondered how one so attractive looking could be a wallflower were they not cognizant of the fact that the higher the social status the greater the selfishness. To speak more plainly, the young lady, a Miss Starkweather, was a western girl visiting an aunt, and her way into society had not been paved for her by certain requisites without which an unknown girl could not hope for any attention.

The hostess observed Miss Starkweather sitting by herself and thought of a plan. She had no especial sympathy with the girl, but a lady to whom she was under obligations socially had asked for an invitation for a man with whom her husband had had dealings in Colorado, who had come to New York and said her husband considered it to his interest to treat him with especial attention. The hostess found the above named guest, Peter Gallagher, holding his hands with a bored look on his face and took him to Miss Starkweather and introduced him.

When the young lady heard the name and looked up into the man's eyes it was evident that there was a commotion in her bosom.

"Gallagher, did you say?" she asked.

"Yes'm; I'm Peter Gallagher of Colorado."

"Did you ever live in Arizona?"

"I certainly did."

The man seated himself beside the girl, who was a dozen years his junior, and the two fell into an animated conversation. Mr. Gallagher was desirous of learning what the young lady knew about him, and by way of reply she told him a story.

"Once upon a time," she said, "a man, his wife and several children, the oldest of whom was a girl of twelve, lived in a cabin on a prairie. There were no houses to obstruct the view and few human. One morning the oldest girl, Alice, went out of the cabin for water with which to make coffee for breakfast and against the rising sun saw a horseman coming at a gallop. She entreated him (it being some hour there) went into the cabin and told her father.

"The settler saw the horseman at the spot, and the latter said:

"There's been a murder over at Hilton, and your revolver with your initials carved on the handle has been found near by. I don't believe it's yours, is it?"

"No."

"Some one used it to put the job on to you. The committee found it and are coming for you. Get on your horse—quick."

"The settler got out his fastest horse, and the two galloped away. They had scarcely gone when Alice saw coming not a man, but a dozen. As soon as they reached her father's cabin they scattered themselves around it, and one of them, the sheriff, called on the settler to come out and surrender himself. The wife and mother went to the door and in a trembling voice assured him that her husband was not there. Throwing himself off his horse the sheriff went into the house and searched every nook and corner. Not finding whom he wanted, he rode away with his men, who meanwhile had noticed fresh tracks of horses' hoofs in the same direction as the settler and the man who had warned him, leaving the woman and her children in an agony of fear, for there had been many brutal murders in that region, and the vigilance committee were endeavoring to stamp them out without wasting time in trying those accused.

"The committee overtook the settler and the man who had warned him, and the latter stopped and faced them. He told them he was convinced that the man they were after was innocent of crime. The sheriff said he was convinced to the contrary. Then the other said he would not see an innocent man strung up without an effort to save him and they would have to fight the two together.

"This turned the scale, and the settler surrendered on condition that he be fairly tried. He was acquitted and returned to his family. He told his wife and children how he had been saved from being hanged and charged them all to reverence forever the man who had so nobly stood by him."

The girl paused, her last words being spoken in a tremulous voice.

"I think I remember someoin like that," said Mr. Gallagher. "You refer to John Starkweather. He'd done me a favor once, and, seeing that he was shore to be strung up for someoin he hadn't done I lit out to warn him. Was you one of the children who was in the cabin that mornin'?"

"I was the oldest girl, Alice."

"Well, now, it's queer, isn't it, that I should meet you among these God forsaken people? Don't you want to go back to a respectable community?"

"I think I do."

"Who is that man?" asked a guest, referring to Mr. Gallagher. "He doesn't look as if he belonged here."

"He doesn't," was the reply. "He's one of the biggest gold mine owners in Colorado."

Persons overhearing this sought an introduction to the stranger, but he was on the point of leaving.

Not long after this Gallagher returned to what he called a respectable community, and Alice Starkweather went with him as his wife.

With the Fingers! Says Corns Lift Out Without Any Pain

Sore corns, hard corns soft corns or any kind of corn can shortly be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply directly upon the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

It is claimed that at small cost one can get a quarter of an ounce of freezone at any drug store, which is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection.

This new drug is an ether compound, and while sticky, dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue.

This announcement will interest many women here, for it is said that ting corns on practically every woman's foot.

Daffy-Down-Dillies.

Is it the color of the daffodil that captures the imagination every year the moment it is seen dotting the meadows, as it does just when they are growing bright with the living green of spring, or does one revel more in the long bars of gold behind in perspective down a woodland glade, or is it their "dancing and shaking and dripping in wonderful figures," as Constance Armfield paints them for us in words in her flower book. Exactly what the charm is no one can probably say, but everyone feels it is there and goes away better after the fresh and wholesome and joyous sight. Many are the affectionate names bestowed. The oldest is Affo Dyle (that which cometh early) and this was later turned into daffodil. It seems natural that they should soon have been playfully called "daffydillies" and "daffies," and that one should read in the "Ingoldsby Legends" of a garden decked with "Roses and lilies and daffy-down-dillies."

The daffodil can claim no close connection with the royal lily family because, as every one can see, its seed vessel is underneath and not inside the flower. But its own relations are among some of our favorite garden flowers. The snowdrop is just a daffodil dressed in green and white, with rather a bashful gait. They both live in the north. Further south Pancratium decorates with its large white flowers the warm shores of the Mediterranean. Hippestrum with its numerous lovely forms affects Brazil, while at the Cape of Good Hope one finds the family at its best with Amaryllis and Clevia and a host of other famous bulbs. The daffodil itself grows only in Western and Central Europe.

It will have been noticed that its leaves stand upright in serried ranks, like little palisades round the central flower. In this, perhaps, lies its chief decorative beauty, and the stiffness of the blades depends upon a spiral twist—from half to one and a half turns being taken between root and point—which has much the same effect as the tubular shape by which engineers give strength to steel constructions.

Acid Stained Marble.

Any acid spilled upon marble will quickly disfigure and spoil it. Its effect should be neutralized by pouring a solution of any alkali, such as washing soda, borax or ammonia, over the stain at once. Restore the polish by rubbing with powdered pumice stone moistened with water. It will call for much patience and work to restore it to its first condition.

TROUBLED WITH CONSTIPATION

From 16 to 20

Constipation is one of the commonest ills of mankind, and one too often allowed to go unlocked after until some serious complication sets in.

If the bowels are properly looked after there will be no constipation, jaundice, sick or bilious headaches, heartburn, coated tongue, sour stomach, floating specks before the eyes, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will keep your bowels so regulated that in no time the constipation will disappear entirely.

Miss Emma E. Melanson, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I am now 20 years of age, and since I was 16 I have been greatly troubled with constipation, so much so that at times I would be in bed 3 or 4 days a month. I tried all the old-fashioned remedies, castor oil, cascara, etc., with only temporary relief, until my sister-in-law gave me some of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. From the first they seemed beneficial, and I gave them a fair trial. This was two years ago, and with an occasional dose I have kept entirely free from constipation for the period mentioned."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

London in a Fog.

London is more or less noted for the dense fogs that obscure it at times, and a recent specimen that was in its prime a couple of hours before midnight was a particularly fine one.

In a space that a good aerodrome could have inclosed I found a chauffeur looking with a lantern for landmarks, so that he could discover in which direction his car was heading. I saw a telegraph messenger fall off his bicycle in the middle of a quiet road, apparently from sheer perplexity, and I found three motor buses that came to rest with their bonnets close together in such a way as to suggest that each had been charging the other two and had only stopped just in time.

In the small hours of the morning I found another bus standing helpless by the roadside, with the driver slumbering within, but the driver of a motor bus is a remarkable man in many ways.—London Spectator.

England's Intellectuals.

A word should be said in reference to those leaders of the universities who, before the enrolment of the country's manhood had emptied the colleges, took their stand, like the enemy professors, in the line of intellectual defense. In one respect we may take a certain pride in our academic representatives. On the whole they have come out of the ordeal better than, say, the bishops and the editors. At all events, when we compare their general tone with that of their German compers, we feel that the judgment of the court can hardly be in doubt. There was revealed, however, a difference of character and sympathy between the two old universities of England. The historians and classicists of Oxford discovered an unsuspected facility in pamphleteering, and very nearly to a man they were engaged from the beginning in stating and defending the purposes of the Allies. On the other hand, the mathematicians and metaphysicians of Cambridge furnished intellectual leadership for the minority against the war policy. Oxford, from Gilbert Murray to L. P. Jacks, is orthodox and confident about the British case and the only tolerable end of the war; while Cambridge, emptied like all other universities of its youth, has in Bertrand Russell the most uncompromising of non-resisters, in Lowes Dickinson the most philosophical and persuasive advocate of peace without victory, and in the conductors of "The Cambridge Magazine" the most resolute band of academic internationalists. The reasons for the contrast between the two ancient seats of learning might not be hard to divine, but perhaps we may be content to recall that Sir Sidney Lee remarked upon the tendency of scientific studies toward intellectual remoteness from the passion of contemporary affairs."

Waste in Food.

"Eat what is on your plate" may seem to many people to be a new table precept, yet it has been practiced for many years in certain little communities nestled among the rugged hills of New England, where the waste of food is regarded as almost a crime. Hanging on the walls of many houses in these communities may be found the "Table Monitor," perhaps worked in worsted or cardboard and setting forth this sentiment, which somehow has a characteristic old time New England ring:

Prosperity may roll with ample flow,
Still to be prized, that it may widely bless.
The world is full enough of want and woe;
I will not mock with selfish wastefulness.

Let in the Sunlight.

All household furnishings should be exposed to direct sunlight for a number of hours every few days. Direct sunlight is the best disinfectant known. It kills germs in a few hours. Diffused sunlight or daylight may have as good effect, but in a much longer time. Shutting the sunlight out of the house is an unhygienic custom. It should go as has gone many of the ideas and customs belonging to the dark ages. Germs live and thrive in darkness. For that reason sunshine should find its way into the home daily, and its presence should be welcomed as a messenger of cleanliness and good health. The drawing of shades and the closing of windows to keep the carpets and draperies from fading should be discouraged. It is better to have carpets and draperies that are faded than to have boys and girls with cheeks that are faded. Roses in the cheeks are more valuable than roses in the carpet.

How to Fit a Horse Collar.

A collar should be fitted to the horse and not the horse to the collar. The collar that is too large should not be used on a horse in the hope that he will grow large enough so it will eventually fit. A collar that fits well in the spring may not fit at all in the fall.

When one is fitting a horse with a collar the animal should be standing in a natural position on level ground, with his head held at the height maintained while at work. The collar when buckled should fit snugly to the side of the neck, and its face should follow closely and be in even contact with the surface of the shoulders from the top of the withers to the region of his throat. At the throat there should be enough room for a man's hand to be inserted beside the collar.

Emerges as Skeletons.

It is announced from Vienna that more than 60,000 political prisoners have been released in consequence of the amnesty recently promulgated by the Emperor Charles. The exact number on those released is not given. In well-informed Austrian circles it is thought, however, that the number must exceed 100,000, and may even approach 200,000, because in some parts of the country whole legions of Slavs, who had excited the suspicion or incurred the displeasure of the Austrian authorities, were driven indiscriminately, without trial, into all sorts of improvised prisons.

The condition of the political prisoners, recently released, was pitiable in an extreme. Herded together in buildings entirely inadequate for their accommodation, they suffered the most terrible privations by reason of lack of food and frightful sanitary conditions. Thousands of them emerged from prison reduced to skeletons by the systematic lack of nourishment.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a glass of Salts if your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kindeys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Conversational Charm.

"THE so-called 'women of the world' has a characteristic that we women, not of the world would do well to cultivate," Dick remarked the little snappy woman over her tea-cup to the friend who was calling upon her.

"Her life teaches it to her, leaves upon it. She must have something to say. She cannot sit wrapt in silence as we complacently do the way so many of our kind of women do. Her whole theme has been from it requires her to take effective part toward the central possibility of conversation, and she has learned how.

"I started to think about all this the other evening at that company of friends and neighbors that met at my sister's. The friend Mrs. Benton brought, Mrs. Clark, how she shone among the rest of us women, showing us up with but two exceptions, for just what we were so sadly—dull, unimaginative females!

"Mrs. Clark talked so smartly and with such animation. Her talk was not clever—I do not think she makes the least pretence towards cleverness. Its charm lay in the way she tried to draw out the ideas of the person to whom she was speaking. Her wit lay principally in the way she listened, so alert and so interested.

"She permitted no awkward pauses. When she told a story or an experience it was with no hesitation or useless repetition. She had assurance, but it was not in the least aggressive.

"There sat Miss Klog—a truly clever woman—mum as an oyster through the whole evening, content, or apparently so, just to listen. And little Mrs. Benton, a sweet wife and mother and as efficient in her home, had nothing to say for herself save in little short answers to direct questions.

"Mrs. Brown was downright glum. She gave the impression of just wearily waiting the time of departure, as she is very far from being a stupid woman when one meets her out of company. I tried to talk, but could think of nothing really interesting to say.

"As I watched my husband converse with Mrs. Clark I realized that he and I never really had conversations, but my good sense showed me they the fault lay with me, not with him.

"I studied the other husbands and found that they all seemed to enjoy talking to Mrs. Clark. It came to me that most of our other women are as deficient as men of us women are in conversational power. I decided that it was the busy life with all its contact with other men and things that made them good conversationalists.

"That is just the trouble with uninteresting women.

"We let ourselves become so out of touch with matters of general interest that we are rendered dumb when talk of non-personal doings and interests is out of place, as it certainly is in a general social gathering.

"Home women, many, in fact, do not realize that such talk is out of place then and prattle on about their housekeeping, their children, their ailments, &c. Such talk is even more of a social slight than silence.

"I realized in that to me humiliating evening that I read the paper only for life and stories that I seldom looked at magazines and that I took no deep interest in anything that did not touch immediately upon my family affairs or those of the few special friends that are dear to me.

"Good mate kept me from discussing those personal interests in any social affair of the least formality, so I had nothing to talk about. This was the reason why I did not like to go out—dreaded it every time. It was not that I did not like meeting people outside my home, but because I could not be at ease with them.

"There and then I resolved upon reform. It is simply amazing to me what a few hours of intelligent reading of the newspapers and magazines has done toward giving me subjects to talk about that are of general interest.

"'Last night at dinner I actually conversed with my husband on a matter of national importance. You should have seen his pleased expression.

"I made time to go to a lecture to-day, and I took that musical daughter of mine who is so buried in her special interest that she has nothing to say for herself when it is not the topic of talk. Coming home we chatted together on a fresh subject. I have not been just to my children not to train them into the gift of general talk, which is, of course, based upon general interests.

"I have won their co-operation in my resolution. We have agreed to fix ourselves in every way we can think of to be able to do our bit in conversations of general character.

"We have all decided that slumbers should be considered quite as stupid in our world as in Mrs. Clark's. Life affords great a big zest for us all to be out of touch with matters of general interest."

Don't Complain Without Cause

IT was getting late and the Business Woman was in a great hurry. She had an appointment at ten and it was now after nine, with a long trip on the car way before her. She sat at a small table in her favorite restaurant, chafing at the tardiness of the waiter, a somewhat elderly man with tired face, who seemed to take an endless time with her order. When at last he did come he served her with a preoccupation that, in her mental state of eager desire to get off to her work, proved decidedly irritating.

Poor Service.

Before dessert was served the recalcitrant servitor had apparently dismissed her from his mind and she had to call another man to finish her order before she could get away to the duties which awaited her.

She left the restaurant with a decided grudge against the waiter, who had previously served her faithfully many times. All the way down on the train she wondered why in the world it was that so many people proved disappointing, from those in the high places of finance to the humblest employee.

In the rush of work the little incident passed from her mind, until it was suddenly recalled to her with a sort of mental shock some days later. Entering the same restaurant, she seated herself at a table not far from the cashier's desk, and as she waited for her order she was surprised to see the elderly, tired looking waiter come down the aisle from the dining room above, dressed for the street.

At the cashier's desk he was handed some bills and the Business Woman heard him receive his dismissal. Somehow she felt sorry for him as he went out, for he looked his 60 years. Her mental attitude was such as to be receptive to show that he needed a friend.

The Business Woman did not realize that she was following his movements as closely until she saw him turn to the left after leaving the restaurant, and then she called him back.

"Poor fellow," he said, "he has not very well fitted and we have all tried to help him out, but finally he lost his job. He is nervous and discouraged about himself, and now he is out of work and can't get anything to do."

The Business Woman, familiar with the jargon of the street through association with many office boys, knew just what the little word "canned" meant—sent out without recommendation. She knew that to be "canned" was a most unpleasant situation for a young man. She wondered what it would mean for this elderly man, frail and perhaps with a family to care for.

Thinking back, the Business Woman recalled the day that he had waited upon her and how tired he had looked. She remembered how the quick words had risen to her lips and how difficult it had been to restrain them. But how thankful she was that she had not complained; that it had not been she who had caused him to lose his job which was possibly his all, without even a recommendation to help him to another.

It is so easy to say the word of complaint. It is so natural for us to register dissatisfaction and to vent our impatience of conditions on other people. But it is a very serious thing to cause another person to lose his livelihood.

There are few persons who would take a deliberate, unfair advantage of another person. But there are a great many indirect ways of being unfair.

It is unfair to suspect more of another person than you could expect of yourself. We all have our moments of irritation—none of us is always at his best. It is unfair to slit in judgment on another—there are always circumstances of which we know nothing, which might prove extenuating if we were acquainted with them.

Unnecessary Protest.

For some reason, difficult to determine, it is a regular fallacy that one has a right to complain of one who is waiting in a public capacity, whether in some way of public service connected with federal or municipal activities, or with duties which are allied to our material comfort.

There are times when it is necessary to make protest, but when this time presents itself it should not be made in a mood of anger. Some innocent person may suffer for our mistake in judgment, and how many careless, cruel of us are, for all we really wish, our other human fellows!

And, lastly, this is the way the Business Woman feels about it:

Think before you rush to complain.

Convicts' Guardian Angel Is Girl Whose Financial Genius Found Way When Prison Reform Body Tottered

Volunteering Services, Miss Letha Watts Saved Prisoners' Relief Society in Darkest Hour.

She Answered Ad for Typist Without Pay and Is Now Treasurer of Society.

MISS LETHA WATTS, a frail little woman whose home is in the town of Huntington, W. Va., probably has assisted in the reformation of more ex-time convicts than any of her sex in the whole United States, and by thousands of these she is looked upon as their "good angel" and respected as few others engaged in prison reform work.

Though just out of her teens, she came to the rescue of the Prisoners' Relief Society, founded in her native town by Earl E. Dudding, who served five years for manslaughter committed in self defense, at a most critical time, and succeeded in putting it financially upon its feet. To-day the society is known from one end of the country to the other, and recently it was officially approved by the Associated Rotary Clubs of America, whose membership includes most of the country's leading business men.

MISS LETHA WATTS

She Volunteered to Help.

The Prisoners' Relief Society was founded five years ago by Mr. Dudding. Previous to his conviction he had been a successful business man in Huntington. When released from prison he endeavored to "beat it back" and found that the hands of most of his friends were against him.

In his distress at the reception accorded him by those formerly his friends he conceived the idea of founding a society which would assist unfortunates like himself to make a new start without the heartaches he had encountered, and which also would help their wives and children while they were incarcerated.

He needed a stenographer, who would contribute her services, and so he inserted a twenty-five cent advertisement in a local paper.

The next morning a frail girl of eighteen presented herself. Dudding sized her up and asked, "What can you do?"

"I can write shorthand and operate a typewriter," was the quiet reply.

Proves Her Worth.

"Let's see if you can," said Dudding.

Without another glance at the girl the man waded into the pile of correspondence and she plunged into it rapidly to try the girl's nerve and then ordered the letters typed in ten hours. In less than the allotted time the letters were laid on his desk, typographically perfect, and the girl had even taken the trouble to polish up some of the manly crude utterances. Dudding looked at the letters in amazement and then at the girl.

"You're just the girl I need," he said, "but I can pay you no salary."

"I know it," she replied. "I did not come here for money, but to help," and the sunny smile that has endeared her to thousands of men whom she has helped lighted up her thin face and went straight to the man's heart. Since that time, five years ago, Letha Watts has been the directing head of the organization.

A few months after Miss Watts entered the employ of the organization, the society was nearly forced into bankruptcy through the lack of funds. The directors were discouraged and wanted to quit, but Dudding refused to listen to them. He drove the directors from the office, and discussed the problem with the little stenographer. It was decided that Dudding would canvass the country for funds.

"What shall I do while you are gone?" Miss Watts asked. "Just keep the office open," Dudding directed.

There was ten dollars in the treasury of the society which Dudding took, leaving the girl only a few postage stamps. He went to Cincinnati, located the office of a millionaire soap manufacturer, and took the elevator to the latter's office. At the door his nerve failed him and he couldn't go in. He left the building, walked around the block a dozen times, and then gave up. He decided to try elsewhere. His money was all gone, so he left town for a week and did not even have the nerve to visit the firm with which he had been employed for ten years. He determined to go East, but before he left he wrote a letter to Miss Watts, told her how badly he was discouraged and that he was going to try and get Mr. Rockefeller interested in the work, and, if possible, finance it. He gave the address of a New York hotel.

It took Dudding three days and nights to reach New York by freight. Penniless, dirty, disheartened, he decided that there was only one way out for him, the act of a coward, suicide. While aimlessly strolling about the city, nerve wracked and ashamed to pass the letter he had written to Miss Watts as his New York address. On the chance that the girl might have written, he called at the desk for mail. There was a letter for him, and it contained a check for $25.

One of the duties of the girl stenographer had been to typewrite Dudding's many appeals for financial aid, and she believed that she could write a better, and more forceful appeal herself. She determined to try what she could do while the man was out of the city. Her letter to Dudding advised him that she had succeeded so well that she already had $25 to her credit on the society's books, and was proposed more.

Now She's the Financier.

The news that the letter contained was a tonic to the discouraged man. He returned to Huntington, persuaded the directors to elect Miss Watts treasurer, and for five years the frail little girl who volunteered her services to help a humanitarian cause has been the financier and real operating head of the organization. Dudding spends most of his time travelling about the country lecturing in the interests of the society. In this connection it is interesting to note here that the leading railroads of the country have been so interested in the project that they have granted him and the society's representatives free transportation, and the leading American hotels have given them free room and board.

Some idea of the magnitude of the work accomplished by the girl can be gathered from the fact that last year alone the society obtained employment for more than five thousand paroled prisoners. And added financially more than ten thousand families whose bread winners were serving time.

Train Your Child in Self-Expression

"TELL your children stories, by all means, but don't stop there as most people do. Get the children to tell the stories to you!" exclaimed the woman who has made story telling to children her profession.

"It is simply wonderful what this does to train a child in self-expression, to do away with hesitation, diffidence and self-consciousness. It lays the foundation for self-expression in later years, the lack of which blights many a life most sadly.

"One cannot begin too early to cultivate this grace in children, which will be such an advantage to them all through childhood and such an inestimable asset for mature years.

Story Telling.

"Just as soon as a little child is old enough to listen to a story with interest he is old enough to begin to tell it back to you. It takes a great deal of skill and child understanding to get him to do this at first. He would rather listen.

"The little child who does not prefer this is the rare exception. To your request for the story from him comes the quick, 'No—you tell it.' Relating the story is a real effort for him because of his tiny vocabulary.

"He knows the principal words, but those that connect the ideas (that make the story 'go') are mysteries to him. The story from your lips runs so brightly and quickly from one episode to another. He likes it that way best.

"Never be severe with a child in trying to get him to tell a story to you. Do not make a 'lesson' of it. Severity makes him stiff and self-conscious—frightens away his imagination, his interest closes up his little mind.

"This is the way I start getting a wee child to tell a story. For a period I tell him several simple tales in little clear sentences—tales full of action, for that is what appeals to the budding imagination.

"Over and over he hears them, and always is exactly the same wording, so that he knows precisely what is coming. I do this until I feel sure that the story is pictured word for word in the child's mind.

"Then, without warning, I tell it to him, starting to a halt every now and then before a telling word, and will look at him expectantly. For instance, 'And the big bee said to the little bee—'Buz-zuz,' cries my little listener. The first step toward telling a story himself has been taken.

"Another time I will tell a familiar story, omitting the usual order of episode or leaving out a part. Here, too, I sometimes introduce from the child another important step of progress.

"A little child in begging his old to tell the story as it should go and he often will tell a good part of it without in the least realizing that this is just what I am after.

"Or I will start the story and then ask him, 'And now what happened?' keeping this up to the close, so that he has practically told it all himself.

"Work along patiently this way for a while, and before you know it the day will come when the child will take a delighted pride in telling a story himself. Be an absorbed and enthusiastic listener.

"When your child will tell you the stories that you tell him, try to get him to make up little tales of his own. My small boy of three is beginning to do this now. When he hesitates—and of course he does that very often—help him out with a question. This invariably starts him going again. I never give him an idea. I want the story to be all his own. The little tales he tells are usually based on little simple happenings in his own experience, though every now and then he will choose some fanciful subject.

"'But I have not the knack of telling stories,' many a mother has said to me. 'I simply cannot think them up.'

"It is true that thinking up stories for children does require a little special genius, but nothing but a little effort and practice are needed to learn to tell tales that have already been thought out by those blessed with the skill for making them.

"There is a wealth of stories for tiny children of adventure and imagination and also many of the wondrous doings of Mother Nature!

"Get a supply of such stories and read them over and over till they become part of you. You will have no further difficulty in telling stories to your child.

"For instance, when your little boy comes home from a walk get him to tell you all that he has seen while out. When he comes in from play get him to tell you all about the fun he has been having.

"Always make him feel your vital interest in his thoughts and actions."

When Opportunity Knocks.

HOW many of us are given to lamenting that our lives have not been placed in other and pleasanter lines? One hears such constant complaints on the subject. "If I had had Sir and So's advantages I might have made a name for myself," sighs this one. And "If I had been born rich, instead of poor, I would have achieved great success in such and such a direction," moans the other one.

Girls, you may be sure when you hear such plaints as these that the complainants would never have achieved success of any kind, even if they had been surrounded by every advantage.

Of course, when a man or a girl is striving for a career money is a great help, but poverty is not a drawback if the worker has the proper inward spirit.

Wasted Time.

Girls, life is too short to waste time in moaning about what you would have done had things been different. Do the work at hand and put all your heart into it.

The future is in your own hands and depends entirely on what you make of the present. Of course, if you spend your entire time in dreaming of a golden future you may be quite sure that it will be anything but golden in reality.

No matter what kind of career you are longing for, you must work hard now. Wasted moments can never be recalled, and each one is precious.

Keep your goal in mind and try to know that if you do your best you will surely attain it in the end. There is a place for every one of us in this world, but we must work and know that we can find it.

You cannot sit back and wait for opportunities to come to you. You must seek them on every hand. Work earnestly and be always ready, so that when opportunity knocks you will be fully prepared to open the door to it.

One of the greatest men of modern history was asked to define genius, and replied that in his mind genius was "one-fourth inspiration and three-fourths perspiration."

If all would-be greatness could be made to realize this it would do them more good than anything else on earth.

Girls, if you are anxious to achieve real results do not wait until you "feel in the mood" for work. You will find that this arrangement is absolutely unsatisfactory—that is, if you are really in earnest and want to succeed.

The Charm of Individualism

THAT business girl who wisely tries to be her own natural self has countless advantages over the misguided young woman who thinks she is acting cleverly in assuming an affected attitude.

The most disinterested observer quickly sees through the veneer many foolish girls adopt, and if such young women could be made to realize how ridiculous their deportment is they certainly would cease to be their charming real selves.

The False Veneer.

Persons who are very attractive and very successful, too, are always natural and unaffected. They do not try to imitate this one or that one. They know their best and can do their best work while forgetting all about others they know or have heard of. Indeed, the man or woman who isn't brave enough to be himself or herself will make a sorry showing while trying to imitate another.

It is all very fine to be brilliant or clever. Most of us wish we were. Most of us think we are, while in reality we are only mediocre, but admitting facts we can give a fair account of ourselves if we have the pluck and grit to act naturally.

The business girl who expresses herself in simple language, words that every one can understand, is a diplomatist of the first order. Indeed, in all business dealings the simpler and plainer one's language may be the better it is for all concerned.

The man or woman who can cover an important subject in a few simple words is not often found in the ranks of the unemployed. Every one is willing to listen to a person whose remarks are brief and to the point, but no one will grant an audience to a "big" speaker.

Every girl is at her best when she is her own, natural self. If she has had few advantages let her wisely keep quiet about these facts and bravely try to catch up. There are free libraries in every city in the land, and the really ambitious young woman can patch up her education if she but makes the right kind of effort. On the other hand, trying to imitate such and such a girl who enjoyed better opportunities will only subject her to ridicule.

Persons who aim to be what they are not deceive only themselves. Most persons can quickly tell an imitation from the genuine—hence the affected girl or woman simply courts general criticism.

Every one has an individuality. The way some women have while doing their housework is an inspiration to the looker on. Such women put their individuality, as to the humblest task and the result is a beauty spot for all concerned.

Be yourself and do not be afraid to act naturally. Forget all about those clever persons whom you are so anxious to imitate. Are cannot do your work well while your mind is occupied with thoughts of them and their achievements. Have a "way"—your own individual way—about what you do, and let those clever or otherwise attractive persons take care of themselves.

An "Every Day" Girl.

The natural everyday girl or woman shines out from others around her as brightly as the North Star. In nine cases out of ten she isn't either pretty or talented, but there is a something about her that is charming. Perhaps her attractiveness lies in the fact that she makes the best of things in general and tries to do her best. She doesn't spoil results by pretending to be what she is not. She has a smile and a pleasant word as she passes on her way, meanwhile forgetting all about the plaudits that others are receiving.

There is a sort of first cousin relationship between envy and affection. Hence the girl or woman who wishes to be really attractive should root both from her mind and wisely resolve on all occasions to be her own charming, natural self.

In Corea women occupy a place in society which has no parallel elsewhere in the Orient. They are both better and worse off than in China or India or Japan—better off because there are more fields open to them, worse because they are overworked, often ill treated and until recently were actually enslaved.

GOOD FOOD WHICH COSTS LITTLE

NOTHING is more certain than that the "proof of the pudding is in the eating." The following recipes have all been tried and found true and have been requested by our readers. If there are new ones you make their appearance now.

Macaroni with Nuts.

Cook some macaroni in boiling water until tender. Put a layer of the macaroni in the bottom of a buttered baking dish, cover with a layer of chopped nuts, sprinkle with salt. Place another layer of macaroni, then nuts and so on till the dish is full.

Make a sauce of one cupful of boiling milk thickened with one teaspoonful of flour, season with salt and pepper and one teaspoonful of butter. Pour this sauce over the macaroni and nuts in the dish. Cover with buttered bread crumbs and bake in a moderate oven for a half hour or a little longer.

Corn Pudding.

A most delicious accompaniment to a meat course. Take one quart of milk, five eggs, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one tablespoonful white sugar, twelve large ears of corn; grate the corn from the cob; beat the whites and yolks of the eggs separately, put the corn and yolks together, stir hard, add the butter, milk, sugar and salt, beating all the time.

Last of all add the whites folded in. Bake slowly at first, covering the dish, for one hour. Remove the cover and brown nicely. Serve with sugar and butter. Use half of the quantity for a small family. Canned corn may be used.

Indian Tapioca Pudding.

Two tablespoonfuls Indian meal soaked one hour in one-half pint of cold water, one-half cupful tapioca soaked until soft in water. Bring to a boil one quart of milk and add Indian meal and tapioca and stir until it scalds.

Take from the stove and add two eggs beaten, one-half cupful of sugar and one-third cupful molasses, salt, cinnamon and sugar, one-quarter teaspoonful each. Bake a half hour, add one cupful cold milk, bake two hours longer and serve with whipped cream.

Butter Cakes.

Mix one quart of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of butter. Mix to a soft dough with milk (about one-half pint), roll out three-quarter inch thick and cut in round cakes.

Fry on a moderate hot greased griddle and when pale brown turn and brown on other side. Test open, butter liberally and send to table hot. These are fine served especially for breakfast.

MAUDE'S WAY.

The Dashing General is Compared to Wolfe.

The dashing Maude again demonstrates that this is not everywhere and necessarily a war of trenches and of pounding. We last heard of him whirling up the Tigris at such a gait that the Turks were throwing their guns in the river in their mad rush to get away. Then the canopy of heat descended on Mesopotamia, putting an end to the fighting as effectually as the snows and rains will shortly end it in France. Now he finds the Turks moving to cut his communications, and turns their trap for him into one for themselves. There is not a particle of pounding in his method. He suddenly seizes a commanding ridge where the Turks are not expecting it. By the time they are aroused their main position is being attacked on the south-east, while the cavalry assails them from the north. The seizure of the ridge, it is to be conjectured, was made before daybreak, and by nightfall the Turks are penned in, with the Europhrates on the north, the British infantry and artillery on the east and south, and the cavalry on the west. The position held by the cavalry seems the easiest to break through, and the Turks spend the night in fruitless efforts; the cavalry always drive them back. Day comes, and the surrounding army attacks from all sides with such fury that by nine o'clock the Turks surrender, thousands of them, including their general and his staff.

This is a victory won by strategy, dash, and determination, a victory of the old-fashioned kind of fighting, a victory won in Maude's own way. Followed by anxiety rather than hope, this general set out on his campaign in a region sinister with repeated disaster to the British arms; an ill-omened region. The hopes that followed his fore-runners, but did not follow him, he has more than fulfilled on every occasion. He has met with no defeats, only with victories, victories won with that satisfying thoroughness which leaves nothing to be desired. His plans seem to be perfect and are always carried out to the letter. Whenever he strikes, he strikes like a thunderbolt. This accomplishment of his, the capture of an enemy army, has no precedent on the side of the Allies since the war began; and in the fact that it was won by sheer strategy, combined with the vigor of action that is always his, it has no precedent on either side. Maude is reminiscent of Wolfe.

Psychology of Sleep.

The psychology of sleep is a vast and little explored subject. Sleep deepens to trance, trance to death. Therefore in life, speaking somewhat paradoxically, sleep is most akin to death. Whether the spirit is parted from the body and goes long journeys through space or whether it is in a state of one long dream, parts of which we are alone conscious of, is a matter for the Society of Psychical Research. Yet many of us have dreamed things, seen things or even spoken and heard things in sleep which we have seen, heard or spoken later on in reality. We can more or less follow the stages up to the final sleep of all, but here we must pause and, with Hamlet, in vain attempt to learn what lies beyond the veil. "And in that sleep of death what dreams may come!"—London Globe.

A Minister of Magic.

In the course of an address delivered in London Canon Parfit of Bagdad said that what impressed native rulers in the east was the scrupulous honesty of the English officials. The sultan of Turkey on one occasion was watching a conjurer. The British ambassador, who was present, remarked that it was "wonderful."

"No," said the sultan, "not so wonderful as all that. I once had a minister of marine who swallowed a battleship—at least he had the money for it, and I've never seen the money or the ship!"

Know Value of Money.

"That young chap you are going around with is a regular pinhead!" stormed Bertha's father. "He doesn't even know the value of money!"

"Oh, yes, he does!" said Bertha. "He says that he wouldn't give a plugged nickel for your opinion on anything."

GOT WET FEET TOOK AWFUL COLD
COULD NOT SLEEP FOR COUGH

A bad cold accompanied by a distressing cough that keeps you awake at night is most aggravating, and unless it is attended to at once may develop into something very serious.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the remedy you should take. It heals the mucous surfaces, relieves oppression and tightness of the chest, removes the accumulation of phlegm, quiets the most obstinate and distressing coughs, and secures rest and sleep at night, not only to the sufferer, but to others whose rest would be otherwise broken.

Mrs. Ezekiel Acker, Lake Pleasant, N.S., writes: "I got wet feet and took an awful cold; could not sleep at night, and would do nothing but cough. My husband got me a bottle of medicine, but it was not worth bringing home. I was going to call the doctor in when a friend asked me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I told her I had little faith in it, but she urged me to get a bottle. I did, and I must say that of all the medicine I ever took, it is the best, and relieved me the quickest of anything I ever saw."

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

How an Author Achieved Success

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Elliott Kenton was writing a Sicilian story in his room in a tenement building in which various nationalities had their abodes. His first dwelling place since he had begun writing was a handsome bachelor apartment house. He had not found literature profitable and had moved from time to time, each move carrying him downward.

His literary aspirations had come down with his ill success. He had begun by "firing over the heads of the people" and had ended by firing low enough to cut off some people's toes. This was what he was writing at the present time:

This detective who has come among us, who seeks for evidence to convict our most valuable members, must be obliterated. I shall rely on you and the others to keep me advised of his movements and inform me of the opportune moment to strike him. Send me word at what hour he usually goes out—whether he is alone or attended. Does he ever cross the park? If I can catch him there, where the danger of witnesses would be at the minimum, I would finish him at a single blow.

Kenton wrote this twice, and, selecting the copy that he liked best, he threw the other on the floor. Then he went on with his story, which ended with a certain person known only as "the detective" being murdered in cold blood while crossing the park.

It was late in the afternoon when Kenton finished the last chapter and, wrapping up his manuscript and addressing it to a publisher, went out with it, dropped it in a receptacle for bulky mail and proceeded to a restaurant for dinner. In the evening, having a deadhead ticket to a movie theater, he attended a play and about 11 o'clock started for his room. As he approached he saw a number of men standing before the entrance, among whom were several policemen. On drawing nearer he noticed that the front of the building in which he lived was scattered on the pavement and the street.

"What's the matter there?" he asked a man coming toward him from the wrecked building.

"Bomb," said the man as he hurried on.

Kenton paused. He knew that the building had been filled with a miscellaneous people, including Germans, French, Norwegian, Italian and other nationalities. He did not relish the fact that he as a roomer there might be mixed up with this bomb throwing. He turned to walk away, was seen by a policeman and followed the fact of his turning having excited suspicion. The policeman took him to the building where the owner, standing among the others, recognized him.

"That's the man," said the landlord.

"What man?" asked the policeman.

"The man that rooms where you found the note."

A pair of handcuffs were clapped on Kenton's wrists, and he was taken to a police station. The landlord went along as a witness. There was a preliminary examination, at which the landlord swore that Kenton occupied a room in which an incriminating paper was found. Then the prisoner was put into a cell.

The next morning, when Kenton was wondering what it all meant, a lawyer was ushered to his cell who said that he had been retained by certain parties to defend him, but that the defense would not amount to anything. The prisoner's friends relied rather upon terrorizing any witnesses that might testify against him. "But why," asked the attorney, "were you so careless as to leave that letter where it would be readily found?"

"What letter?" asked Kenton

"That letter to the gang announcing that you were ready to kill the detective."

"I never wrote such a letter."

The lawyer shrugged his shoulders.

"For heaven's sake, man," cried Kenton, suddenly remembering his story, "you don't mean that they have found a scrap of my Sicilian story?"

"They found a letter offering if those to whom it was written would put the writer on to how to get a certain detective you would 'do' him."

"Why, that is fiction."

"Fiction be hanged! You can't play that game with the public prosecutor, but you needn't be afraid. That letter doesn't prove that you threw the bomb. It's only circumstantial. You keep quiet. Your friends have got it all fixed, and you can't be convicted."

"You needn't consider yourself my counsel. I'll take care of my own case."

"Very well, if you want to be sent up for a term of years or to the 'chair' go ahead. All I have to say is the only thing that can save you is terrorizing any witnesses who may be brought against you."

With that the man of law departed and Kenton sent for a friend who was also an attorney. When the latter arrived Kenton told him that he had got into a fix from writing a blood and thunder story and must be helped out. The lawyer called on the publisher to whom his client's manuscript had been submitted with a copy of the scrap of paper that had been picked up and found its place in the novel. He succeeded in procuring Kenton's release without his being brought to trial.

The incident attracted the publishers' attention to the story and procured a reading for it. The reports concurred that the story was thrilling and especially adapted to the style of reader the firm desired to reach. It was published, was a great success and established the reputation of the author.

A police patrol from Herschel will meet the Dawson patrol at McPherson, and the Dawson patrol will get back here around the first of March.

MAY SAVE U.S. $400,000,000.

Sweeping Economies Planned on U. S. Railways by Sec'y. McAdoo—Conserve Coal Too.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Director-General McAdoo plans on saving $400,000,000 annually in Federal operation of the railroads. Sweeping economies will be inaugurated immediately after passage of the rail control bill now being considered by Congressional Committee. These economies are expected to net more than sufficient money to pay the increases to be granted railroad workers.

Aside from the saving automatic in centralizing authority and unifying all the systems into a single national line—hundreds of thousands of dollars will be saved in the following moves contemplated by McAdoo: Cut in big salaries and elimination of unnecessary executives. Elimination of elaborate structure of competitive agencies under private management—passenger and freight solicitors, advertising, etc. Conservation of coal by curtailing unnecessary traffic.

HUGE SURPLUS OF POTATOES IN U.S.A.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 8.—A. D. Wilson, State Food Administrator, speaking before the members of the Minnesota Farm Bureau Association today declared, there was a surplus of from 40,000,000 to 100,000,000 bushels of potatoes in the United States.

"Eat more potatoes," Mr. Wilson urged. "Farmers must realize a loss on their potatoes this year, even below the cost of production. They are perishable and as a war food fall below corn, beans and wheat."

NORWAY LOST 367 SHIPS.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Last year 367 Norwegian vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 566,000, were sunk, an exchange telegraph despatch from Copenhagen reports.

Since the beginning of the war 215 Danish ships, with a total tonnage of 224,000, have been sunk, and 234 Danes have been killed.

DESTROY DOGS, USE GAME.

Food Controller Has No Control Over These Suggestions.

OTTAWA, Jan. 8.—The Food Controller's office has been receiving letters suggesting that regulations in the different Provinces of the Dominion protecting game and fish should be modified so that these foods might be available to a greater extent as substitutes for beef and bacon. Letters are also being received urging taxation and other steps to reduce the number of useless dogs which, it is urged, constitute a menace to sheep-raising. An official of the Food Controller's office stated to-day that these matters come entirely within the jurisdiction of the Provincial Governments, and that communications relative thereto should be addressed to them.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

VISITING BISHOP TELLS OF MUSICAL ADVANCEMENT.

Bishop Mitchell, of St. Paul, Minn., recently preached in a Toronto church on the importance of education because of its effect in enlarging the vision of the soul. In illustrating his thought he said: "Unfortunately I myself had not the early advantage of a thorough musical education, and for many years my ear was dull to the concord of sweet sounds. Thanks to the player-piano and the talking machine I have gained an understanding of some of the great music of the world and my power of appreciation is wonderfully enlarged. To that extent my life has been made fuller and more interesting. Some musicians, generally those whose performances are only indifferent, affect to look with contempt upon what they are pleased to call 'canned music.' They are surely wrong. Not long ago a young woman assured he she could not endure a player, it was so mechanical. If it were half as mechanical as the playing of this very young woman the inventor would not be proud of it.

"I come home after a hard day. I ask one of the greatest artistes in all the world to sing to me. If I do no like his song I can stop in the middle without discourtesy. If I like it, I say 'Sing it again,' and he sings it again in the same glorious and fervent tone. I may even cry 'Sing it again,' and he sings. To me, the phonograph and the player piano have opened a new world of beauty and discovered a very universe of splendour."

The eloquence of the Bishop was not ill-placed. Beyond the shade of a doubt the public appreciation of the best music has advanced more since the invention of the phonograph than in a hundred years previous to its appearance. On the remote prairies of Alberta, Scotti and Destinn and Rappold and Caruso are singing every evening. In the miner's cabin, on the frontiers of civilisation, on the widespread seas as well as in the luxurious city home, men and women are gaining an insight into the glories of an art formerly obscured by clouds and darkness. Even on the battle front the art of the greatest living musicians may be appreciated.

Many significant stories have come to us from the war zone, but one thinks most frequently, perhaps, of the request of the unlucky Townshend force captured by the Turks in Mesopotamia more than a year ago. While besieged at Kut-el-Amara and cut off from the relieving force proceeding up the river, they got a message through the enemy's lines: "Send us some phonograph needles." The needles were delivered by aeroplane.

THE TREATMENT OF YOUR PIANO.

IS THE VARNISH CHECKED? DON'T WORRY IF IT IS.

We have arrived at the time of year when the temperature in the average home has suddenly jumped an unknown number of degrees by the occasional starting up of the furnace. The doors that refused all summer to close gradually shrink back to normal. The hardwood floors that got up in ridges flatten back. The general dampness gives places to a torrid heat. Furniture solid through before shows symptoms of falling apart.

Because wood and metal are what they are and subject to climatic changes the one expanding with moisture, the other contracting when cold, the piano needs tuning. Don't imagine that because your piano has never been tuned you have saved money. You have not, you have probably impaired the musical ear of the child for whom you are buying music lessons and have let your piano drop in pitch until several tunings will be required to correct it.

But this article is to speak of the varnish on the piano case checking and this sudden change from the damp and clammy atmosphere that makes artificial warmth necessary is one of the causes of varnish checking.

While the varnish on every piano checks, only about fifty out of a thousand persons make complaint of it. To each one of these in turn it seems to be a new experience, and one that troubles him until he learns and becomes used to the facts of the matter.

We venture to say that there is no such thing as a piano two years old, in any part of the country, that is not checked. Some show it more than others. The light-coloured woods show it more than the dark ones, and it is more apparent in certain lights and at certain angles than others. A large majority of pianos stand in such places in the house that it is not really seen. People often say that the piano is so and so many years old, and is not checked, but we never have found one of these pianos that did not show checks when examined in the right light. Black and dark mahogany pianos show the checking less than others because of the colour. Bird's eye maple, figured birch, Hungarian ash, and figured walnuts show the checking more plainly than other woods.

The thicker the body of varnish, the clearer the varnish, the more lustrous and highly polished it is, the more distinctly the checks show. This is true for the same reason that a crack in heavy plate glass is more prominent than a crack in thin glass; there is more of the crack to show.

When one buys fine cutlery—for instance ivory-handled table knives—the warrant does not mean that the ivory handles will not turn yellow and crack under the ordinary conditions that accompany the use of table knives. The warrant would hold the manufacturer to real ivory; but that would mean ivory with all ivory's peculiarities.

If a piano were finished as a carriage is finished, or as furniture is finished, or with no varnish at all on it, it could rightly be claimed that the warrant called for something different; for a universal custom has established a different standard for the piano. Where varnish is used the piano is subject to both the advantages and the defects inherent in material and method. The clear lustre and high polish of piano varnish necessarily involve brittleness, and handsomely figured woods lend distinctiveness to the checking. Just as certain complexions, flawless if subjected to an unreasonable degree of care, become somewhat marred by freckles under the reasonable conditions of practical, every-day life.

Nothing has ever been made as a varnish that will not check. It is just as sure to check in the course of a short time as the skin of a human face is sure in the course of time to put off the appearance of youth and take on that age. It is not one instantaneously completed change—it begins immediately and never stops. We don't look on it as an imperfection in man that he shows his age in a natural way, nor that he bleeds when he is cut, nor that he is subject to freezing and sunstroke and every other vicissitude of life, because we are all familiar with the facts. Anyone who is familiar with varnish knows just as well that checking is a part of the nature of the article.

No one can buy or make varnish that shall have the qualities of glass. No one can change the nature of the different forms of matter or procure skill that can conjure it out from under the laws of nature. No one can find wood and varnish which, being applied one to the other so that they adhere, will, both of them expand and contract equally and in the same direction under all changes of temperature and atmosphere. Varnish is more sensitive to the liability to expand and contract than wood; it is stuck fast to the wood on one of its surfaces. It must expand or contract with every change of temperature. It is a solid body in the three dimensions of length, breadth and thickness; a small fraction of an inch thick, a few inches wide, and several feet long. Something has to give and the varnish is that thing; and the fine checks are in evidence. But checking of varnish is neither serious nor wrong. One may regret it, but no one is to blame. It is the nature of the article. Varnish is as sure to check as ice to melt in the ice-chest, for "it is made that way."

The fact is, a piano is primarily a musical instrument, but so far as case and varnish are concerned it is only cabinet work—household furniture—and it has no right, as such, to be exalted in any one's mind to any such position in the cloudland of unreason as to lead to the expectation that it isn't going to show the natural effects of time, of wear, and what is sometimes called "the inherent cussedness of matter."

A REVOLUTIONARY CHANGE IN BRITISH ADMIRALTY ANNOUNCED

Naval Policy to Be Administered By a General Staff, Divided Into Three Divisions, Governing Home Waters, Overseas and Trade Protection ---Little Activity is Recorded From the Western Front.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, January 10.—England's long expected Admiralty shake-up was to be announced in full detail to-day. Preliminary statements declared the whole naval policy hereafter would be administered by a general staff, divided into three general divisions—governing home waters, overseas and trade protection. Each department would be headed, it was stated, by naval officers of proven qualifications. The change is a revolutionary one.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 10.—The hostile artillery has shown slight activity in the neighbourhood of Gonnelieu, southwest of Cambrai, the War Office announces. Otherwise there is nothing to report.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Wednesday—Generals Kaledines and Dutoff, Cossack leaders, the Official News Agency announces have been defeated. General Dutoff is in flight pursued by revolutionary soldiers and the red guard. General Kaledines is retreating.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERNE, Switzerland, January 10.—A separate peace agreement has been signed by Russia and Bulgaria, the Bund reports.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Wednesday—Separate peace proposals made by Turkey, it is reported, has been refused by the Bolsheviki government. Turkey was requested to participate in the general conference between Russia and the Central Powers.

(By Lowell Mellett.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, January 10.—"Britain would like more details concerning President Wilson's aim for freedom of the seas." In a general chorus of editorial approval voiced in the morning press over the direct, clear-cut outlines of peace terms by the American executive, there was nevertheless a clear note of anxiety as to exactly what was meant by the freedom of the seas. The dominant British feeling is still opposed to complete disarmament on the seas, unless there is an effective international league with widest police powers. Some of the more conservative Britishers recognize the possibility of the positions being reversed, putting England at Germany's mercy. In this connection it was recalled the declaration of London in 1910 was defeated in the House of Lords. It sought to deal with this question. On the other hand there was general recognition of the fact that the whole question was one for an after-war solution, and in the meantime all factions realized President Wilson's statement on this as a shrewd move to strengthen the German Liberals.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, January 10.—Unofficial reports of the first session of peace negotiations at Brest-Litovsk when they were resumed on Tuesday, say that Leon Trotzky, the Bolsheviki Foreign Minister, insisted upon the removal of the conference to Stockholm. He is reported to have told the German and Austrian delegates that if they did not accede to his request they would feel the weight of the arms of the Russian democracy, and the weight of the voice of their own democracies. The Evening Post says the Germans did not refuse to continue negotiations, but that it was not specified where they would take place.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 10.—The Bolsheviki government intends to publish a decree within a few days cancelling the Russian national debt, telegraphs a correspondent at Petrograd of the Manchester Guardian.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, January 10.—The French easily repulsed a German raid against small posts on the western edge of the Upper Coucy Forest, says to-day's official communication. The artillery fighting was active in the region of Vauxaillon. Everywhere the night was calm.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Wednesday—The German delegations in Petrograd are reported by last evening's Post to have got into touch with the Swedish Legation here, and to have expressed a desire that Sweden act as go-between with Great Britain, France and Italy.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, January 10.—The United States now has in France an army of substantial "size ready for active service," Secretary of War Baker to-day told the Senate war investigating committee. Officers and men he explained in a statement of what had been accomplished, have been trained temporarily for modern war. Independent lines of communication and supply are in process of construction and great programmes have been formulated for the production of new instruments of war. Arms of the most modern and effective kind, the Secretary declared, have been provided for every soldier in France, and are available for every fighting man who can be sent to France in 1918.

LIVING TOGETHER AS MAN AND WIFE

Michael Grant, who appeared in police court this morning, claims nativity in France, and declares that his name is the Anglicized form of Le Grand. Chief Thompson was informed by a Toronto woman that Grant and her nineteen-year-old daughter were living together in Peterborough as man and wife. The police located them in the old Palace building where they were sharing with a man and his wife and children a single room they called home sweet home. Six persons in one room, eating and sleeping there, suggests crowded quarters.

The girl pleaded guilty to vagrancy and was remanded for a week.

Grant was charged under the Military Service Act. He didn't plead and was also remanded for a week.

PTE. HARRY BLEWETT, a Lakefield member of the 93rd Battalion, who won the Military Medal for bravery at the front. Pte. Blewett was a member of the 93rd intermediate O.H.A. team.

ANOTHER DRAFT TO JOIN LOCAL COMPANY TO-DAY

Strength of E Company 1st E. O. R. Was Increased by Sixty-two Last Night and Forty-four More Arrive This Afternoon

IMPROVING IN DRILL

The Peterborough company of the 1st Eastern Ontario Regiment is growing steadily in strength. Last night brought a quota of sixty-two to the city from Kingston in charge of Lieut. Mark, who was at the Front with the 38th Battalion.

Among the non-coms. with this draft was Sergt. Sam Mills, of Peterborough, son of Lieut.-Col. Joseph Mills. There was a large number of Peterborough boys in the detachment.

This afternoon a draft, consisting of Regimental Sergt.-Major Platt, one sergeant, and forty-three men, was slated to arrive via C.P.R. The arrival of this draft will bring the strength of E Company up to about 160 officers and men.

As noted yesterday, Lieut. White, of the Canadian Army Dental Corps, has arrived to open a clinic at the Armouries.

The draftees have been divided into five squads for training purposes, and are making good progress in drill. The improvement shown from day to day is surprising, and those who reported a week ago are making rapid progress.

BIG FIRE IN HOSPITAL

One Life Lost and Much Property Damage Done by Blaze Which Sweeps Water Street General Hospital in Ottawa

MANY NARROW ESCAPES

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.— A fire which broke out near the operating room in the east wing of the Water street General Hospital at ten a.m., is gradually spreading to other parts of the building, mainly on the top floor. So far as is known there has been one life lost. There was no one in the operating room. There were 158 patients in the hospital, including a number of children, but the nuns and nurses are thought to have safely removed nearly all of them in the incipient stages of the fire. Search is proceeding in case any more may have been overlooked. The building is well provided with fire escapes, which facilitated the work of rescue. Everyone has been ordered by the firemen to vacate the lower floor of the east wing, which is in danger of collapsing. At first it was thought that two children had lost their lives in the fire. One reported was a leg case, the little one being strapped to the bed with weights attached.

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—(Later.)— The fire is now under control, the blaze having been confined to the upper floor of the east wing. One of the children are now dead as a result of the was already dead when the fire started. The body was awaiting the arrival of an undertaker.

FOUR DEAD.

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—Four little childre nare now dead as a result of the fire which swept the east wing of the Water street Catholic General Hospital this morning. They were the victims of the dense volumes of smoke which poured into the children's ward.

Pte. Reid On Casualty List

Member of 93rd Battalion Is Suffering From Gas Poisoning

Mrs. Mary E. Reid, has received official word from Ottawa that her husband, Pte. Thomas Percival Reid, is officially reported admitted to No. 9 Field Ambulance on December 30th, suffering from gas poisoning. Pte. Reid went overseas with the 93rd Battalion and was transferred to another Canadian Infantry battalion at the front. This is the second time that he has been on the casualty list.

ANNUAL MEETING OF PATRIOTIC FUND WILL BE HELD ON JAN. 15

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund will be held in the rooms of the Association, city buildings, on the evening of Tuesday, January 15th.

All members are urged to attend, as business of special importance connected with the objects of the branch for 1918 will come up for discussion. The matter of raising the amount required for the present year, and which was referred by the City Council of 1917 to its successor, will receive attention almost at once from the newly constituted council.

Arrangements will also be made to put forward a conference with the County Council, which will be in session during the month, with a view to have the County Council extend its valuable assistance and help to the objects of the Fund. A full attendance is looked for at the meeting on Tuesday night.

SECRETARY OF WAR ANSWERS HIS CRITICS

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, January 10.—"No army of similar size in the history of the world has ever been raised, equipped or trained so quickly as the present American army," Secretary of War Baker told the Senate military probers investigating his department. Pointing to the fact that in nine months all branches of the army had grown from 9,524 officers to 110,856 officers, and from 202,510 men to 1,428,650 men, he answered his critics with a broad outline of work accomplished.

"American accomplishments," he said, "are such as to depress the German morale."

"When the Germans realize that American democracy has neither blundered nor hesitated, but has actually brought the full power of its men and resources into completely organized strength against their military machine."

UKRAINIANS AND RUSSIANS UNITE IN PEACE PARLEYS

Hope That Peace Negotiations Will Be Transferred to Neutral Soil--Russians Want Peace But Not a Peace At Any Price

MAINTAIN SOLID FRONT

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Joseph Shaplen.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 10. — Ukrania and Russia have joined hands in peace negotiations with Germany. Despatches received from Brest-Litovsk to-day expressed the firm conviction that with a united front shown by all the Russian delegates the Russian plan for a transfer of the peace negotiations to neutral soil would be forced upon the Germans.

The message from Brest-Litovsk gave this news, and also carried the following report: "On Monday (Russian Christmas Day) we crossed the trenches. Our soldiers declared they were ready to support our peace efforts at all costs, but they added: "Remember we want peace —but not a peace at any price." Trotsky replied to them: "We will not bend our heads to German imperialism. Russia did not overthrow Czarism to become the subject of another kind of slavery. You may feel certain that with your support we will sign only an honourable peace."

The Russian peace delegates were taken to Brest-Litovsk in sleighs. They first met with the Ukrainian delegates who had been awaiting their arrival. The Ukrainians agreed to publish a formal resolution recognizing the Commissaries (Bolsheviki) government, and the Commissaries government on their part agreed to recognize the Ukrainians' independences. The Russians then communicated with the Germans, suggesting that the Ukrainians be empowered to partake in the negotiations. This was accepted.

The Ukrainians and Russians, it was asserted, had agreed to maintain a solid and united front on all questions. To-day the first matter taken up by general conference was that the transfer of negotiations to a place where a free voice and a free hearing can be accorded instead of being continued in the stifling atmosphere of a ruined city/s hermitically sealed fortress is essential," the message asserted.

BROTHERS USE GUNS IN QUARREL OVER LAND.

KINGSTON, Ont., Jan. 9.—A shooting case, in which two brothers residing in Kingston Township, not far from Kingston Junction, are implicated, will likely come before Justice of the Peace George Hunter.

It is alleged that one brother fired a shot at the other with a shotgun, but the bullet did not hit him. The man with the gun, so it is stated, hid in the barn, and as his brother passed with a load of wood he shot at him through a crack in the barn.

A quarrel over property is given as the cause of the row.

FEAR THE LIQUOR SUPPLY WILL NOT LAST FOR A YEAR

Quebec Liquor Men May Ask the Legislature For a Shorter Term License or to Provide For Payments In Instalments

MUCH LOSS OF REVENUE

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 10.—The order-in-Council of the Federal government prohibiting the importation of liquors into Canada and other measures that will tend to make this province "dry" will form the subject of a discussion in the Legislative Assembly this session. Sir Lomer Gouin told Mr. Sauve, leader of the Opposition, so, yesterday, when he queried him in the house whether there was to be a statement on the position of the province in view of the prohibition.

The province in the year ended June 30 last, received a revenue of $1,326,093 from the liquor traffic.

What revenue the government may look for in the immediate future from May of this year, when license year commences, is doubtful. The City of Quebec voted itself dry, and in other places the situation appears to be such that hotel men will not be able to take licenses for a full year owing to the danger of not having supplies to last out. By the time the government is ready to make an amendment on the liquor question, representatives of the liquor trade will have been heard on their side of the question, and probably prohibitionists will also have something to say. The liquor people seem to favour, as far as the retail trade is concerned, a shorter term license than that for one year, that is payment in instalments to protect themselves against being put out of business by lack of supplies.

Gus Kastantino, a Macedonian Employed in the Kitchen Could Not Be Located and His Charred Body Was Found Several Hours Later.

BUILDING GUTTED

Time—Four-thirty o'clock.

Place—Boston Cafe.

Cause—Pan of fat ignited.

Lives lost — Gus Kastantino, a Macedonian employed in the kitchen.

Estimated damage—Twenty thousand dollars to building and contents of Boston Cafe, and forty thousand dollars' damage to store and contents of T. C. Elliot's dry-goods store.

Number of feet of hose laid—Three thousand feet comprising four lines.

The foregoing represents the bare record of a disastrous fire that occurred on George street early this morning when the Boston Cafe was badly gutted and one of the employees burned to death. Three other men had a narrow escape when the exit by the stairway was cut off by the flames. One man made his way to the ground from the second storey and the other two men were taken down by the firemen.

Was Overcome.

Gus Kastantino, who lost his life while attempting to make his way out of the burning building was employed in the kitchen and his sleeping quarters were located on the third floor. It is believed he was overcome by smoke. The body was found several hours later in a room adjoining that in which he slept. It was badly burned. Kastantino was a Macedonian, and had only been working at the Boston for a couple of weeks. He worked in this city on a previous occasion, but went away only to return two weeks ago. The other three men who were sleeping on the same floor were William Robinson, Peter Jefales and Steve Migles. The latter succeeded in reaching the ground from the second storey window. The other two men were taken down the ladder by the firemen.

Got a Good Start.

When the firemen arrived the fire was eating its way towards the roof from the second storey where the kitchen was located. Four lines of hose were laid and the steam pumping engine was pressed into commission as an auxiliary, although the pressure at the pumping station was all that could be desired.

The chef was working in the kitchen on the second floor rear when the fire started in a pan of fat that was being handled on the stove. He succeeded in extinguishing the fire around the stove but apparently failed to notice that the ceiling overhead was ablaze. The fire went up through a ventilator into the third storey where the men were sleeping. The men were removed to the ground in their night attire. The fourth man, who lost his life, could not be located up until the smoke and fire drove

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, JANUARY 10, 1918

A GOOD EXAMPLE.

The ratepayers of Enniscore are to be congratulated on their liberal spirit. At the recent municipal elections, the electors, overwhelmingly in the religious majority, placed at the head of the poll for the township council, one of the very few Protestant residents of the township.

This is creditable to both the elected and the electors—to the elected for being considered by qualities of ability and good citizenship and neighbourly relations, worthy of their confidence; to the electors for forgetting differences that do not count in secular affairs, and recognizing the not other, service, they require fact that it is good municipal, and and wish to get.

This incident is worthy of being referred to because it is an, unfortunately, isolated instance of the exercise of patriotic and practical good sense, such as tends to increase the harmony that is impaired and destroyed by insistence upon making differences of opinion upon matters not related to the issues and principles concerned, the basis of electoral and other action. As humanity and as Canadian citizenship are constituted, differences of opinion are inevitable upon many matters; but there can be no differences of opinion as to the duty of harmonious cooperation in promoting the national welfare of the country and the community and the harmony of a common citizenship.

Rationing the people of Great Britain will demand a good deal of prudence. Rations necessary for the maintenance of a bridge-playing lady won't do for a burly munition worker.

GIVE THE DETAILS.

There is pretty general demand for more details of events at the front. Gallant actions, in which Canadians are baldly stated to have "distinguished themselves," "gone over the top, etc." is all there is to it. No thrilling details are provided such as watching, waiting friends at home, and the people at home, desire and deserve. It is the people at large in Canada that bear the burden and suspense and anxiety of the war, and it does not become some cold blooded and unsympathetic official—"dressed in a little brief authority"—to judge arbitrarily what the people should hear. More details of the actions and achievements of our soldiers are demanded. We not only want to know what they do, but how they do it. If the Canadian soldiers have a copyright or patent upon their way of fighting, which might be infringed by the enemy if made known, there would be some sense in concealing details. But Canadians fight just like any other first class soldiers—only better—and we should like details of how they do it. We stay-at-homes, foot the bills, and are entitled to the courtesy of an "itemized account."

As a general thing it is held, that when information is withheld, there is something wrong to hide. The Globe points out that the policy of secrecy as to the doings under the military service act will give rise to the suspicion that the law is not being equally enforced in all parts of the Dominion. In this matter, if any, we want to practice British fair play, and to know what there is being done. The people should be given the facts and allowed to judge for themselves. There were rumours at the time of the election, and even boasts, that Quebec was to receive government favours in the matter of exemptions under the Military Service Act. To prevent suspicion and discontent, we might have information as to the response in Quebec and other provinces to the draft.

Germany hints that if she can't hold her battered lines the war must go on. Holding on and holding out are two different things.

WARMING A NATION.

With this rigourous winter weather conjoined to a shortage of ammunition to fight it, the fuel problem maintains first place. We have the necessity forced upon us of not only economizing in the use of fuel, but also that of providing new sources of supply.

We lean, perhaps, too much upon the coal fields of the United States for supply; and we have begun to experience how uncertain that source is becoming, owing to labour stringency and transportation difficulties; and it behooves this country to adopt a broad policy of utilizing our home supply of fuel material.

Canada must take measures to make herself indtpendent, or largely so, of her neighbour's coal bin. We have considerable deposits of coal in Canada—not so much anthracite coal but something that must be made to take its place; though among our coal resources are estimated resources of anthracite in Alberta of 846 million tons. Alberta has also deposits of bituminous coal, which added to the 77 and 11 millions respectively of British Columbia and Nova Scotia, make a total of Canadian bituminous deposits of 306 million tons. The whole Northwest has 111 million tons of lignite, a rather poor sort of coal, but according to Prof. Ruttan, of McGill University, capable of being artificially treated to produce a fuel equal to anthracite in fuel value, at a lesser cost.

Then in a case of emergency, which is the case now, we have the peat and wood sources of fuel, which by proper organization, can be made conducive to supplying the national demands.

When everything capable of producing heat is under consideration, we look to the government to initiate action, and even our local authorities can cooperate with them. We have a good deal of talk of making fuel of domestic refuse. Now we wastefully burn material that in other countries is being converted into fuel. In England, according to the Sanitary Engineer, plants have been established for the conversion of household refuse into fuel—a double benefit; for sanitary removal is provided, and fuel produced.

We don't know how climatic and labour conditions would make such a treatment of refuse profitably practicable in Canada; but the thing seems to be worth thinking over. In our own Peterborough incinerator, running day and night, 365 days in the year, inconceivable quantities of heat generated in its operation, are going absolutely to waste, and even the cost of operating is not saved. The heat equivalent of hundreds of tons of coal is allowed to go to waste every year.

When coal is so scarce, and heat becomes so dear, would it not be possible for inventive genius and enterprise to utilize our waste, our refuse, and make it a benefit, instead of a costly nuisance to remove? The whole fuel problem of Canada demands national action and the more so that the problem can be solved. This is shown by the conclusions of an article contributed to the Monetary Times by Mr. A. V. White, which is reproduced on this page. This war has worked revolutionary conditions in all arenas of national, domestic and individual life, and necessity compels us to face new conditions with adequate measures for meeting them.

Woman is nobly justifying her demand for the franchise. In a hundred new arenas of service in this war she has take a worthy place, and done her work well.

NATIONAL ACTION IS CAPABLE OF SOLVING CANADA'S FUEL PROBLEM

Once a broad national policy has been determined, financial and other assistance should be promptly rendered to enable sane and businesslike development of Canada's lignite, peat and other fuel resources for the benefit of the nation, to be carried out by competent technical officials entrusted with this great and honourable responsibility.

There is no need to start again learning the A. B. C. of this fuel problem. Officials of the government of Canada, such as those in the Geological Survey, Department of Mines, the Commission of Conservation, and other organizations, have knowledge of existing conditions and of practical means by which much of the stress may be relieved. To carry out these measures of relief and to place Canada in a reasonably independent position with respect to fuel will take time but there is no doubt that if matters are dealt with in a broad statesmanlike manner, and the necessary encouragement of financial and other assistance is given to those who are competent to handle the same, Canada will, at a minimum of effort and expense be relieved of a menace with respect to her coal supply which threatens not only her economic life, but the physical life and well being of a large proportion of her citizens.

Statements to the effect that we cannot afford to produce and transport our peat or our lignites, because the cost may be even a few dollars more a ton than imported coal, are simply ridiculous. Anthracite coal, due to war conditions, is now practically unobtainable in the countries of Western Europe. In the winter of 1916, for such coal as as available, France was paying about $40 per ton, and Italy $50 per ton. Recent reports from these countries state that coal at present is selling at $60 per ton. Now, Canada imports annually about four and one-half million tons of anthracite from the United States. Suppose that circumstances prevailed for a year such as would make the citizens of Canada willing to pay even a fraction of the advance in European countries—say, $10 advance as—this would amount to about $50,000,000. When one thinks in such terms of increased YEARLY outlay, surely a million dollars, or even a few millions of dollars if necessary, placed at the disposal of technical officers, assisted by men of sound commercial judgment, in order to get our own lignite and peat resources under national development, constitutes so intrinsically small a sum in comparison to the results as to be practically unworthy of debate.

From the foregoing we clearly perceive that there is no need for Canada, with her vast resources of fuel and water power, to go cold or to have her industries throttled by reason of power shortage; but Canada may have a sore trial in both these respects unless every possible effort is speedily made to deal with the fuel and power situation in a comprehensive manner.

Shall it weakly be said, "There is a lion in the way"? or with confidence in Him to Whom belongs "the earth and the fullness thereof," and Who ever guides men in all honest effort, will Canadians forthwith assume the responsibility of this fuel question and unite in energetic action until this great national problem is satisfactorily solved? — Arthur V. White, in Monetary Times.

The "Trench Club" request a full attendance at their meeting to be held on Monday night, January 7th, the first meeting for the year.

Mr. Robert Jack of town, has been called to his home in Bognor to attend the funeral of his mother, Mrs. D. Jack, who passed away on December 22nd, at the age of 78 years.

Deceased was a former resident of Havelock some years ago. The sympathy of a host of friends in town and heartfelt regret will be extended to the bereaved husband and son.

Mr. Frank Coon of town will be the manager of the open air rink in town this season which opened on Saturday last, when many availed themselves of the privilege of the first skate.

Sergt. Bert Williams, of the old 93rd Battalion, who was wounded on Nov. 4th last, has since succumbed to his wounds. He was a brother of Mrs. James Draper, formerly of town, but who now resides in Shoting, Eng. Her husband, Pte. James Draper, has been wounded in the knee, and she has lost her father and two brothers during the last eight months. Heartfelt sympathy is extended to her in her terrible bereavements.

Sergt. Traynor of the 93rd, well-known here, has also been severely wounded, and is now at Boscombe Hospital, Eng.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

A meeting of the A. F. and A. M. was held recently when the anniversary of St. John the Evangelist, was celebrated and the installation of officers took place, the ceremony being performed by Very Worshipful Robt. Anderson, assisted by other local Past Masters. The officers installed were as follows:

John Howe	W.M.
Bruce Puffer	S. W.
L. G. Hagerman	J. W.
Rev. Jas. Skene	Sec.
H. F. McNichol	S. D.
W. Mollurney	J. D.
A. Wight	S. S.
Wm. Rose	J. S.
R. Buchanan	Chap.
W. Anderson	D. of C.
H. Burnett	J. J.
H. Bound	Organist
M. White	Tyler

A very quiet wedding was celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Johnston, Ladylands, Silkirk, last Wednesday afternoon, when their daughter, Helen, was married to Jas. W. Rose, Havelock, Ont., Canada, a sapper in the Canadian Engineers, B. E. F. The Rev. Andrew Ross officiated. The bride was given away by her father, with Miss Annie Turnbull acting in the capacity of bridesmaid. Mr. George Scott supported the bridegroom. A number of relatives and friends of the bride sat down to a daintily served wedding breakfast, at which several congratulatory telegrams were read. One was received from the nurses at Westhouse Hospital, Edinburgh, where the bride has been in training for the past three years. Other messages came from the company of Engineers to which the bridegroom was attached. Mr. Rose has been invalided to France and is returning to Canada, whither his bride will accompany him in the near future.—The Southern Reporter, Selkirk, Scotland.

Mrs. W. A. Deremo of Toronto, spent the week end in town, the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. W. Bryans.

Mr. Garnet Barlow of Trenton, spent the week end at his home in towns.

Miss Marguerite Webster, who has been saleslady in M. A. O. Sawyers' store for the past few months, has returned to her home in Lakefield.

Election in Belmont, resulted as follows:

For Reeve: Wm. Griffith.

Councillors: Gilbert Steenburgh, Frank Breckenridge, Coleman Elliott and Norris Whitney.

MEAT PRICES RAISED ON LONDON MARKET.

London, Ont. — A powerful factor towards the adoption of meatless days in London was reported on the local market to-day, when beef unexpectedly advanced from two to four cents a pound, while mutton simultaneously took an incline of from two to three cents. Heifer and steer beef sold at 16 to 18 cents by the carcass, cow beef at 13 to 15 cents, mutton at 15 to 18 cents and yearling lamb at 25 to 27 cents.

For the purpose of encouraging the production of food and thus attacking the high cost of living, the Board of Health to-day made it known to the people that the maintenance of pigs within the corporation limits will be winked at if the neighbours do not object.

If You are Suffering from Backache, Kidney Trouble or Rheumatism, TAKE DR. BANTA'S KIDNEY AND RHEUMATIC PILLS

PRICE 50c A BOX

They have helped Hundreds of Citizens of Peterborough the past year, and they will help you. It is the most efficient Medicine on the Market for Diseases of Kidney and Bladder; it puts them in proper running order and rids the system of the acids and poison gases that cause these terrible Bodily ills.

A GUARANTEE

This Medicine is sold on the understanding that if the purchaser has not benefitted after one or two boxes the amount Paid will be REFUNDED.

KIDNEY & BLADDER TROUBLE

There is no complaint that saps the life and activity out of a person as quickly as Backache and Lumbago. These ailments are simply a sympton of a disordered condition of the Kidneys or Bladder. Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills will assist nature in expelling from the system the inert and poisonous gases that are the cause of these ailments which if allowed to remain will lay the foundation of many serious diseases. You may have tried other medicines and received no benefits but take our advice and have no hesitation in trying Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills as they are positively guaranteed to do what we claim for them.

So Positive are we that you will find this Medicine of great value to You that we make the above offer. Sold in Peterborough at LYNCH'S DRUG STORE, 168 Hunter Street, and Every Purchaser has their Guarantee Behind It.

☞ MAIL ORDERS Attended to Promptly

RHEUMATISM

Comes in many disguises all due to the condition of the blood, which is overburdened with acid poison and shows that the kidneys are out of order. With the kidneys and bladder in a diseased condition, literally clogged with matter they are unable to expel, there can be no relief from the terrible pains of Rheumatism. Rheumatic pains are classed as acute, chronic or muscular, largely in the joints and sometimes accompanied by swelling that refuses to be reduced. In its early stages Rheumatism can be quickly relieved by using Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills to help the kidneys to do their work and get them in condition again. Long established cases may be stubborn but are bound to yield to continued treatment. Your money back if they fail.

FUNERAL OF ALD. SMITH

Employees of Wm. Hamilton, Civic Representatives and Many Other Citizens Attended

The funeral of Ald. John H. Smith took place yesterday afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery, and was largely attended by friends and neighbours of the deceased. In the death of Mr. Smith, although comparatively a young man, Ashburnham loses one of its oldest continuous residents, and the William Hamilton Co. one of its oldest and most trusted men.

All his life he took an active interest in public affairs in which he was well versed, and in every way he did what he could to be of service to the city, having offered himself and been accepted by the people as their representative in the Old Ashburnham Council, the Peterborough Board of Education and as alderman for the city. He was also prominent in the Oddfellows and Foresters fraternal societies. Strong in his opinions yet respectful of those of others, he made many friends. He lived practically all his life in this city, and there are many who will miss his quality, and his good heart.

The plant of the William Hamilton Co. shut down for the funeral and the employees walked in a body to pay their last respects to their late superintendent. His Worship Mayor Duffus and Council, as well as civic officials also attended in a body. Rev. R. A. Whattam, of Mark St. Method.st Church, conducted the funeral and service at the house, and his remarks were most fitting.

The floral tributes were beautiful, testifying to the respect the deceased held in the community.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. Harry Morgan, A. A. Fowler, Wm. Madill, Robert Fair, Frank Adams and Walter Rooney.

Original Motion Was Carried

The Re-appointment of W. G. Morrow to the Public Library Board Was Confirmed

In yesterday's report concerning the Board of Education, it was stated that the proposal to reappoint Mr. W. G. Morrow to the Public Library Board had been deferred. This was not the case, as Mr. Morrow's appointment was confirmed on motion of Messrs. Hill and Crane. The amendment, moved by Mr. G. N. Gordon, to have the matter deferred, failed to get a seconder, and the original motion carried, re-appointing Mr. Morrow to represent the School Board on the Public Library Board.

PETROGRAD IN DIRE STRAITS.

Only Intervention Can Give Relief and Russians Look to Germany.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—The situation in Petrograd is depicted in the most gloomy colours by the correspondent of the Times, who, in a telegram under date of Monday, the Russian Christmas, says that no Christmas in 300 years has been celebrated in such tragic circumstances. Petrograd, he adds, is full of dirt, disorder and grime, while starfation appears to be staring the people in the face. The only bread to be had is black, gritty and underdone, and is composed of millers' refuse and mixed with straw. Potatoes are getting scarce and dear, while meat is a rare luxury. The wretched conditions have been aggravated by blinding snowstorms drifted by violent winds and cold nights.

"Russian affairs," he sums up, "have become so desperate that only the intervention of the allies or the Germans can prevent catastrophe. As this can no longer be expected from the allies, the disheartened Russian looks to the Germans."

WAR SUPPLIES LOST IN FIRE.

BOSTON, Jan. 9.—It was estimated to-day that at least half a million dollars' worth of war supplies was lost in what the police believe to have been an incendiary fire in the building of Bigelow and Wowse Co., manufacturers' agents for heavy hardware. Four firemen are in the hospital, but will recover.

The total for the British Red Cross which has reached Hon. T. W. McGarry, Provincial Treasurer, now reaches over $1,000,000. This is not counting the contribution from Toronto, which is yet to be received.

Soldier's Embroidery Skill Wins Position

Pte. M. Urquhart, the convalescent soldier who stole the embroidery prizes from the ladies at the autumn exhibitions has been appointed instructor in the large class in fancy needlework at Mowat Memorial Hospital, the sanatorium conducted at Kingston by the Military Hospitals Commission for returned men suffering from T.B.

Urquhart not only worked so well with his needle as to take the prizes, but so completely out-embroidered the record holders that they declared that it must be machine work. For several months he has been directing the class which number 18 in various sorts of fine embroidery within the range of the boys' strength and ability.

Covets Prizes for Boys.

Before Pte. Urquhart came to the convalescent hospital his ability as a needleman stopped at sewing on buttons. To-day he is one of Canada's first embroiderers intent on filling, second, third and fourth places in the 1918 exhibits with convalescent soldiers and "whitewashing" the ladies.

His appointment lasts until he is discharged from the hospital when it is expected that he will have a pupil sufficiently expert to take his place.

Presentation To Mrs. Meserve

Mothers' Club of the Y. M. C. A. Say Farewell to Their President

The regular monthly meeting of the Mothers' Club was held yesterday in the Y.M.C.A., when the members said good-bye to their president, Mrs. Meserve, and presented her with a silver bread plate and the following address:

Dear Mrs. Meserve.

We, the members of the Mothers' Club, hear with deep regret of your removal from amongst us, and we feel that we cannot let this occasion pass without expressing in some small degree our appreciation of the interest you have always taken in the club, especially the last two years, when you have worked so cheerfully under many difficulties. We all unite in wishing yourself and Mr. Meserve every success in your new and larger field of labour, and we feel assured that you will fulfill your duties there in the same efficient manner as here.

So we ask you to accept this little gift as a slight token of our esteem and when you use it we hope your thoughts will turn to Peterborough and the many pleasant hours spent in the Mothers' Club.

We wish you and your family God-speed, and may you have many happy New Years.

Signed on behalf of the Mothers' Club.

Mrs. Meserve thanked the members for their gift and kind words, and wished them every success in their work.

Tea was served and a social hour spent.

The officers for the year were elected as follows:

President: Mrs. (Dr.) Morrison.
1st Vice-Pres.: Mrs. W. Conway.
2nd Vice-Pres.: Mrs. Cannift.
Rec. Secretary: Mrs. McNeely.
Treasurer: Mrs. Rishor.
Cor. Secretry: Mrs. Craig.

RHEUMATISM CURED

In the days of our fathers and grandfathers rheumatism was thought to be the unavoidable penalty of middle life and old age. Almost every elderly person had rheumatism, as well as many young people. Medical science did not understand the trouble—did not know that it was rooted in the blood. It was thought that rheumatism was the mere effect of exposure to cold and damp, and it was treated with liniments and hot applications, which sometimes gave temporary relief, but did not cure the trouble. In those days there were thousands of rheumatic cripples. Now medical science understands that rheumatism is a disease of the blood, and that with good, rich red blood any man or woman of any age can defy rheumatism, can be cured by killing the poison in the blood which causes it. There are many elderly people who have never felt a twinge of rheumatism, and many who have conquered it by simply keeping their blood rich and pure. The blood making, blood-enriching qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is becoming every year more widely known, and it is the more general use of these pills that has robbed rheumatism of its terrors. At the first sign of poor blood, which is shown by loss of appetite, palpitations, dull skin and dim eyes, protect yourself against the further ravages of disease by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They have cured thousands of people—if you give them a fair trial they will not disappoint you.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Big Italian Ship Is Sunk

Canadian Press Despatch:

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—The Italian steamship Milazzo, 11,477 tons gross register, was sunk during the early part of December by a German submarine, while the ship was in Mediterranean waters. It is understood no lives were lost. The vessel was practically new, having been launched in 1916.

British Tommy Adores Having Picture Taken

Event Is Of Solemn Importance To Him and Preparations Are Great.

BEHIND THE BRITISH LINES IN FRANCE.—One of the flourishing trades in the little towns and villages behind the line in France is the photographer's. The soldier has a universal fondness for having his picture taken.

With the British Tommy, the visit to the village camera man is a regular event of the greatest importance, and requires great preparations. He borrows the best pair of puttees in his section, or, better still, a pair of field service boots, brushes his clothes with great care, cleans his belt and bandolier, and polishes his buttons.

If he belongs to a mounted corps, his spurs and cutting whip will make a great display, for although everybody agrees that in this war the infantry is the most important branch, there is still a glamour attaching to the mounted man, even if his mount be only a cart horse or a mule. Equestrian portraits are much in demand, it is said, by the girls at home.

As often as not, Tommy gets photographed in a group with four or five men from his section. For one thing, this is cheaper. For another, it supplies a testimonial of the good company he keeps, and of the fine fellows that his section—always the "finest in the army"—is composed of.

Thousands of these photographs are sent every day from France to Britain. The officers whose business it is to censor Private Atkins' correspondence gets very tired of seeing that noble hero's countenance enclosed in every letter he sends for weeks after the event, and the number of feminine admirers entitled to copies of the photographic artist's production seems to be unlimited.

The prevalence of the group photograph leads to many romantic developments. Some "girl friend" of the recipient admires "the good-looking lance-corporal next to you, Tom," and a new correspondence starts up under the fatherly eye of the censorship officer.

YOUNG'S POINT NEWS PARAGRAPHS

YOUNG'S POINT, Jan. 10.—The minimum temperature recorded by the thermometer during the cold period was 30 degrees below.

Dandruffy Heads Become Hairless

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

True happiness consists in the pursuit of a thing rather than the catching thereof.

Huns Complain Of Inefficiency Of Their Officers

REGULAR OFFICERS CONSERVING THEMSELVES FOR AFTER THE WAR.

FRENCH FRONT, Jan. 10.—German prisoners are complaining of the inefficiency of their junior officers, who are, they say, often placed in command of sections after only four weeks' training. One prisoner told the Associated Press correspondent that the majority of the professional junior officers still fit for service, had been transferred to the depots and instruction camps in the interior to train the boys of the 1919 and 1920 classes now called for service. These vacancies in the ranks were filled by youths from the universities and by the sons of merchants and manufacturers.

The number of officers also has been reduced. At the beginning of hostilities each company of German infantry had five, the captain and four lieutenants are second lieutenants. Early in the war the creation of new machine-gun, trench-mortar, gas and grenadier officers from the infantry battalions brought the number attached to each company down to only three.

Owing to the frequent absence of officers on furlough or for the purpose of following some special instruction course, there are often only two officers, and sometimes one, on duty with a company, even when it is holding the front line trenches.

Among the German prisoners taken in recent battles on the French front the number of active officers is very small. Battalion commanders and the commanders of companies are nearly always reserve officers. The chiefs of sections are sergeant-major-lieutenants, who bear the insignia of officers on their shoulder-straps, but wear the non-commissioned officer's collar and hold their rank only for the duration of the war. Since the end of 1916 however, simple sergeants are often in command of platoons.

The reason given by the prisoners for the creation of so many temporary ranks is that the regular officers of the Germany Army are determined to maintain after the war the military caste which has so long existed in Germany and which excluded from the possibility of attaining commissioned rank any man belonging to the commercial or industrial classes.

NERVOUS DEBILITY SLEEPLESSNESS

Doctor Said He Could Do No More So Peterboro' Woman Turned to the Great Food Cure With Splendid Results

Mrs. Chas. E. Wiley, 136 London St., Peterborough, Ont., writes: "About three years ago, I was suffering from nervous debility, sleeplessness and loss of appetite. My nerves were so bad that I could not attend church, or any place where there was a crowd or excitement. During the night I would lie awake for two or three hours. I had tried several remedies, and taken treatment from doctors. The doctor finally said he could not do any more for me, and it was then I started using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I had read in the newspapers of how highly it was recommended, so I secured some and commenced using it. After the third box, I noticed an improvement, so I kept on taking them until I had used eight or nine boxes. The results were such that I could sleep and eat well and could go to places where there was a crowd or excitement, without any difficulty. My health was generally benefitted greatly. Since that, from time to time, when I am not feeling up to the mark, I take a few of the Nerve Food pills, as I usually keep some in the house. I would recommend this treatment to any one suffering from nervous trouble of any kind."

It feeds the nerves. That is the great secret of the success of Dr Chase's Nerve Food. That is why cures effected by this treatment are both thorough and lasting.

The great difficulty when the nerves become exhausted is to get enough nourishment from the food you eat to restore the nerves. By supplying the elements from which Nerve Force is created in concentrated and easily digested form Dr. Chase's Nerve Food feeds the wasted and depleted nerve cells back to health and vigour.

You feel the benefit obtained by renewed energy and ambition, pain and weakness disappear, digestion improves, the complexion takes on new colour, and in a score of ways you find the proof of the good this food cure is doing you.

When you have decided to use Dr Chase's Nerve Food make up your mind to give it a fair chance to cure, and then insist on getting the genuine article, bearing the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author. Price 50 cents a box, full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

PAY OF ENUMERATORS.

Cheques Being Sent Out as Lists Are Received by Returning Officers.

OTTAWA, Jan. 9.—Auditor-General Fraser stated to-day with regard to the complaints of delay in paying election list enumerators in Toronto that the cheques would be sent out as soon as possible.

"We have over fifteen thousand accounts to deal with," he said, "and we are doing it in the exact order that they are received from the returning officers who certified as to their accuracy."

Americans Urged To Eat Less And Serve The Allies Thereby

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9. — The American stomach should follow the example set by those of her Allies—and her enemies—in the war.

Tons of food can be saved daily if America would quit eating a third to a half again as much at each meal as it needs, food officials declared today.

"Most of us eat ourselves stupid," one said to-day. "In Germany and England and France they have been compelled to quit that and insurance statistics show that, except where the food supply in Germany has sunk below the amount actually needed to insure health, the people are better off for it."

Government information shows that what this man says of Germany is true of the middle and poorer classes only. The rich still find opportunity and inclination to make dining-room pigs of themselves.

The official referred to made the suggestion that American overeaters quit their appetite habit voluntarily. But in Germany, where the scarcity of food is critical, many strange tricks have been resorted to, to compel the reform.

To lessen discrimination by hotel keepers in favour of the rich of heavy appetite, Vienna hotels have established "standard meat," paid for at a set price out of a common fund subscribed to each hotel by the guest rich and poor alike. Everything calculated to encourage appetite has been eliminated from the "simplified" hotels.

In Berlin, Vienna and other cities food prices in hotels and restaurants have been boosted by Government order from 50 to 100 per cent to "insure moderate eating."

The American official does not advocate these measures for us, but he does say that "every American who gets up from the table with a satisfied, not a full feeling, who makes himself the fed human instead of a stuffed animal, renders the nation and himself a genuinely patriotic service."

the searchers from the building. His body was not recovered until about five hours later.

Dry Goods Store.

Mr. T. C. Elliot, whose dry goods store adjoins the Boston Cafe, suffered heavily from smoke and water. Mr. Elliot was summoned about five o'clock, and when he arrived on the scene the fire was burning in the fourth storey of the Elliot store. Tons of water were pumped into the fire flooding both buildings. The store will be closed as a result until the insurance adjusters complete their task, when the entire stock will be sold. Several inches of water lay on the hardwood floors throughout the store to-day and an effort was being made to minimize the damage to the floors. Mr. Elliot estimates the damage to the stock at about forty thousand dollars. In addition to this there will be some damage to the building. The damage to the building and contents of the Boston Cafe is estimated at twenty thousand dollars.

Recently Opened.

Mr. Nicholas Douros, the proprietor, had only recently opened to the public the grill room on the front half of the second floor of the Boston. It was handsomely appointed with new furniture, carpet, plush hangings and the wood-work that formed the private compartments for guests. This section suffered from both smoke and water.

Mr. Douros was in Toronto yesterday, and up until this afternoon could not be located.

Cars Tied Up.

The tie-up of the George street car service north of Hunter street, caused by the stringing of the hose across the street railway, left the north-end residents who work in the south-end factories without the regular service upon which they depend. There are usually two cars of workmen for the Henry Hope Company every morning, in addition to those who are employed at the C.G.E. Works and De Laval Co. For them the fire meant an unaccustomed long walk, with probably a number reporting late.

The clothing store of Le Brun and Company to the north of the Boston Cafe suffered damage as the result of smoke and water which found its way into the building.

Gus Kastantino, who died this morning as a result of suffocation and burns received at the Boston Cafe, was born in Macedonia 25 years ago, and had been employed for the past two weeks on the cook staff at the cafe. Previous to coming to Peterborough he had been employed with a restaurant in Toronto. He lived in Peterborough some time ago. In religion he was a member of the Greek Church.

The funeral, from Bellechens's undertaking parlours, will take place on Saturday afternoon to the Little Lake Cemetery.

No inquest will be held on the body of the deceased.

TO HUSBAND COAL.

COAL $10.50 IN GUELPH.

Fuel Controller Sets the Prices for Business There.

GUELPH, Jan. 9.—The local coal situation appears much brighter, due largely to the receipts of additional supplies of fuel and the efforts of Fuel Controller Foster. Since Monday morning over 450 orders have been placed, and it is understood that the majority of these will be delivered by to-morrow night. In order to accomplish this the dealers have all given their best efforts.

In order to equalise the prices of coal, and make the same more or less uniform, the following increased price has been decided upon:

Coal in one-ton lots, $10.50.
Coal in half-ton lots, $5.50.
Coal in quarter-ton lots, $2.85.

There have been many reports of parties going to the Fuel Controller for coal who were said to have a good supply in their cellars, and in almost every instance these cases were investigated and found to be untrue.

LOW SHOES AND SPATS TO CONSERVE LEATHER.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Low shoes and spats for women were advocated to-day by members attending the convention of the National Shoe Retailers' Association as a war measure to conserve leather. John J. O'Connor, of Chicago, was elected president of the Association to succeed A. McGowen, of New York.

The Silver Tongued Orator of Minnesota, Charles A. Towne, Former United States Senator

Late Member of Congress from New York—Nominated for Vice-President

Recommends Nuxated Iron to All Who Feel the Need of Renewed Energy

Says That Henceforth He Shall Not Be Without It

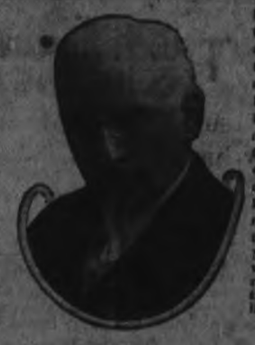
Probably no remedy has ever met with such phenomenal success as has Nuxated Iron. Over three million people annually are taking it in this country alone, to say nothing of the vast number who are using it in France, England, South America and other countries. It has been highly endorsed and used by Former United States Senators and Members of Congress; physicians who have been connected with well-known hospitals have prescribed and recommended it; Monseigneur Nannini, a prominent Catholic Clergyman, recommends it to all members of the Catholic Church. Former Health Commissioner, Wm. R. Kerr, of Chicago, says it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician; Dr. H. B. Vail, formerly Physician in the Baltimore Hospital and a Medical Examiner, says that time and again he has prescribed Nuxated Iron and surprised patients at the rapidity with which the weakness and nervous debility were replaced by a renewed feeling of strength and vitality; Former First Assistant Postmaster General of the United States, C. P. Grandfield, strongly endorses and recommends it to the tens of thousands of civil service employees who know his name and signature; Sarah Bernhardt—"the Divine Sarah," the world's most noted actress, has ordered a large quantity sent to the French soldiers to help give them strength, power and endurance.

The famous "Cyclone" Davis, Member of the 64th United States Congress, says the effect of Nuxated Iron on him was almost magical, that after taking it, nothing seemed to tire him out, no matter how strenuous it might be. Dr. A. J. Newman, late night Dr. A. J. Newman, late Police Surgeon of the City of Chicago, and former House Surgeon of Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago, says Nuxated Iron has proven through his own tests of it to excel any preparation he has ever used for creating red blood, building up the nerves, strengthening the muscles and correcting digestive disorders.

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon to St. Elisabeth's Hospital, New York, says he has never before recommended any remedy to the public, but that in the case of Nuxated Iron he would feel he were remiss in his duty not to mention it. Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author, says that in his recent talks to physicians on the grave and serious consequences of iron deficiency in the blood of American women he has strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for their weak, run-down, nervous, haggard-looking patients. Dr. Cobb, the greatest baseball batter of all time, took it to help give him renewed energy and great staying power. No matter what anybody may

What Senator Townes Says:

"As a member of Congress from New York, as a member of Congress and Senator from Minnesota, as participant in political campaigns and candidate for Vice-President, my nervous energy and reserve force were tremendously drawn upon. That I survived these trials and came into advanced middle life with the elasticity and strength of a boy is unquestionably due to the rigorous attention I have paid to the proper care of my body. Recently I have been taking Nuxated Iron and have found it of the greatest benefit as a tonic and regulative. Henceforth I shall not be without it. I am in a position to testify for the advantages of others, to the remarkable and immediate helpfulness of this remedy, and I unhesitatingly recommend Nuxated Iron to all who feel the need of renewed energy and the regularity of bodily functions.



Minnesota's Man of Mark

Former United States Senator, Charles A. Towne, graduated from the University of Michigan, twice elected member of the United States Congress, served in the United States Senate, nominated for Vice-President, takes Nuxated Iron; now recommends it to all who feel the need of renewed energy.

you could not, at this day, get such prominent men to endorse a remedy that has no value—doctors, lawyers, politicians, athletes—a great array.

Dr. E. Sauer, a Boston Physician who has studied both in this country and great European Medical Institutions, said: "Nuxated Iron is a wonderful remedy. Not long ago a man who came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of twenty, and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact, a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking Iron—Nuxated Iron—had filled him with renewed life. At 38 he was in bad health; at 46 he was careworn and nearly all in—now at 50, after taking Nuxated Iron, a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. If people would only take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak and rundown instead of dosing themselves with habit forming drugs, stimulants, and alcoholic beverages, I am convinced that in this way they could ward off disease, preventing it becoming organic in thousands of cases, and thereby the lives of thousands might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, kidney, liver, heart trouble and other dangerous maladies. The real true cause which started their disease was nothing more or less than a weakened condition brought on by a lack of iron in the blood. Thousands of people suffer from pale bloodless faces, who do not know it.

If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test and see how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two to five grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which has been used by Former United States Senator Townes with such surprising results, and which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, rundown conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 100 per cent, or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

GOALS NOT GAMES COUNT IN DECIDING THE JUNIOR DISTRICT

Petes Will Therefore Have to Beat Lindsay by Three Goals To-morrow Night to Get on Even Terms—Much Interest in Friday's Game

The officials of the Peterborough Hockey Club were informed yesterday by Secretary Hewitt of the O.H.A. that in the double schedule between Lindsay and Peterborough in this group the team scoring the greater number of goals in the four games will win the round. Both clubs had the idea that games instead of goals would count in deciding the group winner.

Secretary Hewitt's ruling has therefore put a new complexion on to-morrow night's game. Instead of merely having to win in order to even things up with Lindsay, the Petes will have to beat the visitors by three goals to get up on even terms with the Midgets.

The local youngsters, however, showed plenty of speed and greatly improved team work at last night's practice, and should come out of to-morrow night's game with a comfortable margin on the visitors. However, Lindsay will have to be watched and it will be a real game, especially as lightning fast ice is promised.

Stan. Burgoyne of Toronto will handle the bell, and will get the teams away at 8.15 o'clock.

There is one change in the Peterborough line-up from the team that played in Lindsay, Girard dropping back to the defence to take McMahon's place, while Park, of last year's juniors, will be at right wing, where he will alternate with Williams.

The team will line up as follows:
Goal: Murray.
Right defence: Girard.
Centre: Cherrett, capt.
Right wing: Park.
Left wing: Bartley.
Substitute: Williams.

JOE LALLY OF LACROSSE FAME IS ELECTED MAYOR OF CORNWALL

CORNWALL, Ont., Jan. 10.—P. J. Lally, who is familiarly known as "Joe" Lally wherever the game of lacrosse is played, was on Monday elected mayor of his native town of Cornwall over Mr. Adam C. Fetterly, by a majority of 288. Joe Lally was born in Cornwall on August 27, 1868, being a son of the late Francis Lally. At the age of eleven years he left school and went to work in the Stormont Cotton Mill here as a water boy, one of his associates at that occupation being the present general manager of the three Cornwall mills of the Canadian Cottons, Limited. During his spare hours after work he went into the local office of the Great North-Western Telegraph Company, where his quickness of intellect soon mastered the intricacies of the telegraph key, and a few years later he was appointed local agent of the G. N. W. Telegraph Co., a position he held for some fifteen years. When he resigned from the service of the G. N. W. he took over the business of the Lally Lacrosse Manufacturing Company in 1903, previous to which this business was conducted by his brother, Frank Lally, who established it in the year 1881. At that time the factory employed only a few hands, but since P. J. Lally became the controlling spirit in the business the trade has gradually extended, until now there are from 60 to 70 hands in the employ of the company.

TWENTY YEARS REFEREE.

Mr. Lally entered the lacrosse arena as a referee some twenty years ago, his first match being between Montrealers and Shamrocks on the Montreal grounds. This he handled alone, and so excellent was the reputation he made on that occasion that he immediately became in great demand, and his services were eagerly sought up to a couple of summers ago, when he decided to drop out of the refereeing business. He had previously been prominent in local athletics, and in 1892 he won the open all-round championship medal at the games in Cornwall, and also won a great number of medals and trophies in competition with some of the best athletes in the country.

Mr. Lally has the unique distinction of having refereed no less than five Minto Cup matches, these being between Brantford and Shamrock, Souris, Man., and Shamrock, St. Catharines and Shamrock, new Westminster and Vancouver. This latter match was in 1911, and Mr. Lally travelled 3,000 miles across the continent especially for those games, a distance never before or since equalled by any referee solely for refereeing purposes. When the games were over he was tendered a banquet, at which the late Sir Richard McBride, then Premier of British Columbia, who passed away in London (Eng), a few months ago, presided.

DIAMOND RING.

In recognition of the fair and impartial manner in which Mr. Lally handled the cup games, he was presented, by both teams, with a valuable diamond ring, suitably engraved, which is yet one of his most cherished possessions.

TORONTOS WON FROM CANADIENS

TORONTO, Jan. 10.—The Toronto professionals battled their way to a tieing position with the Canadiens in the N. H. L. race when they defeated the Flying Frenchmen by a score of 6 to 4 in a game that was fiercely contested from start to finish at the Arena last night. The victory of the Blue Shirts is directly attributable to the excellent work of Harry Holmes, ex-Pacific Coast League goaler, who played a spectacular game. If it had not been for the cool, clever work of Holmes in goal it is more than likely that the Canadiens would have further increased their lead in the N. H. L. standing.

A FAST OPENING PERIOD.

The first fifteen minutes of play was perhaps the fastest period of the entire game. Each team realized the advantage that would be gained by scoring the first tally and battled furiously for the initial goal. Alf. Skinner, the Toronto forward, put his team in front when he scored from the side. The period ended with Toronto leading 1 to 0. The second period saw Toronto with a score of 3 against Canadiens 1, while in the closing period both teams notched three goals.

Toronto had the better of the first and last periods, while Canadiens had a slight advantage in the second period. The Blue Shirts won because of their effective back-checking and the work of Holmes in goal. Besides prevailing a more effective defensive game, the local team furnished a more aggressive offensive. The Blue Shirts' forwards not only held Lalonde, Pitre, and Malone in check, but frequently broke away for combined rushes, outskating the speedy easterners and outguessing the Frenchmen's clever defence pair—Corbeau and Hall.

OSHAWA JUNIORS DEFEAT COBOURG.

OSHAWA, Jan. 9.—Oshawa defeated Cobourg's O.H.A. junior team by a score of 11 to 3. The ice was in good condition, and a good crowd in attendance. The teams:

Oshawa: Goal, Smith; right defence, Osborne; left defence, Williams; centre, Bone; right wing, Vienne; left wing, Southwell.

Cobourg: Goal, Simpson; left wing, Falks; right wing, Bulger; centre, Myer; right defence, Waldron; left defence, Landymore.

LIEUT. HOBEY BAKER, FLYING IN FRANCE 'WINGS' HUN AVIATOR

PARIS, Jan. 10.—The former captain of the Princeton football team, now serving in the Flying Corps, brought down his first German plane Saturday, says the European edition of The New Yord Herald.

The Princeton football captain referred to in this despatch is probably Lieut. "Hobey" Baker, who is now with the American Flying Corps in France. Recently his work in the air has attracted much attention. He was not only a football star, but a crack hockey player on the Princeton team.

VICTORY BOND CONTEST.

The Victory Bond blind score five-pin contest closes on 6th February, when the score will be drawn. There is still time left for the bowlers to make sure that they are in the final contest by making the scores between 110 and 170.

To-night the High Rollers and the West-Ends meet in a League fixture, and a good, interesting game is expected.

For the prize for highest three consecutive games for this week, Mr. V. Dawson has yet to be beaten. His score is 201, 213, 203—617.

BRITAIN TO SUFFER HUNGER

Food Controller Says the Testing Time Has Come.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—Lord Rhondda, Food Controller, in an interview given to Harold Begbie, referring to the intended rationing of the British people, says that for the remainder of the war he intends to play Socialist, but directly the war is over he will go back to individualism. "I believe," he adds, "that the divine force in human affairs is selfishness. No doubt matters were so arranged by a discerning Providence." He continued:

"Powers of organization are going to beat the Germans if the country will back me up. But it is not going to be a pleasant experience for the British people. They must not think rationing is a cure or a limit to what is coming. For some time they will be hungry.

"People with property may find themselves without property. The State may have to turn farmer and butcher a few months later on, but there will be a 'testing time,' and the test will be applied to the stomach of the Briton, sharply applied.

The food wanted by mankind does not exist. The word "shortage" is not strong enough for the situation. Lord Rhondda could make a little go a long way, but his first difficulty is to get hold of this little, and, having got it, to make it go the whole way.

"I am not anxious about getting a certain amount of supplies," said Lord Rhondda. "My one anxiety is whether the nation will support me. I mean in their personal consumption when it comes to the real pinch. Is the spirit of Britain ready for the pinch? Is there a spirit among us which will bear the pinch when the pinch is past the smiling point? I wonder! Well, we shall soon see. The pinch is coming. It is going to be a sharp one. It is going to try British character to the last ounce of resisting power."

Fools are not the only ones who get a quick divorce from their money during the holidays.

All Toronto Papers Boost "Out There" WITH Elsa Ryan

Referring to this stirring Drama which comes to "The Grand" next Monday, January 14th, the Toronto papers have the following to say:—

The Mail and Empire—

It is a safe thing to say that if many productions of the type of "OUT THERE" had reached Canadian points a year ago, there would have been much less necessity for any form of compulsion in this Country, for the play, quite apart from providing an unusually entertaining evening and affording interesting glimpses of some of the most lowly classes of English life, carries with it an intensely patriotic flavour, and is calculated to stir up the sluggish blood of any whose place should be in the army.

The Globe—

The role of the young advocate of recruiting, Nannie Hudd, is taken by Elsa Ryan, who, it may be remembered, made a hit here in "Three Little Maids." She invested the part with quiet and quaint significance and her portrayal was suggestive of earnest purpose, without its being forced upon the audience by declamatory intensity.

The World—

Delightfully human, tender to tears, and stirring in its fine presentation of stern reality, "OUT THERE," the J. Hartley Manners dramatic offering, which was given its first local presentation at the Princess Theatre last night, is all that the New York press claim for it—and even then the critics were modest in their praises.

Varty Issues Writ For $10,000 Against Squire of Havelock

Gordon, Widdifield and O'Brien, solicitors for Walter Varty, of Belmont Township, have issued a writ against Mr. F. J. Squire, of Havelock, for $10,000 damages for alleged malicious prosecution, false arrest and slander resulting in his arrest. This action is an outcome of the arrest of Varty under the Military Service Act following the Havelock fires in the store and warehouse belonging to Mr. Squire. The evidence in the charge of perjury against Varty was heard recently, and the hearing transferred to Peterborough, where Magistrate Langley will hear the argument of counsel.

PASSENGER RATES GO UP ON FEB. 1ST

A 15 Per Cent. Increase in Freight and Passenger Also is Now Announced

Beginning February 1, all freight and passenger rates on the main Canadian railroad lines will be advanced 15 per cent., it was learned yesterday. Milage rates thus advance from 3 cents to 3.54 cents. The applications of the railway companies to increase their rates have been approved of by the Government, it is understood, and only the detailed schedules of the various lines have yet to be passed upon by the Government officials. The increase in rates is justified, railway officials claimed, by the higher cost of fuel and union labour.

CAR REPAIRERS IN DEMAND.

Thousands of Broken Down Freight Cars and Locomotives Discovered.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Steps were taken by Director-General McAdoo to restore to service the thousands of broken down freight cars and locomotives which Interstate Commerce Commission inspectors have discovered on sidings and in shops throughout the east.

Scores of locomotives, the lack of which is largely responsible for the slow movement of freight in the east, have been allowed to freeze during the last few days through neglect and improper attention. Shortage of repairmen and machinists was reported from many localities.

In Conway Yard, west of Pittsburg, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, 1,747 cars needing repairs were found, and less than half that number of repairmen available a year ago now are employed there.

In the Erie terminals at Buffalo 600 of the 3,000 cars needed repairs. This road was unable to deliver freight to the Grand Trunk and Nickel Plate because those lines were congested and lacked locomotives.

REMOVE 400 GREEK OFFICERS FOR PRO-GERMAN LEANING.

Athens. — More than four hundred officers of the Greek army who had rejected overtures made to them by the present regime and continued to proclaim their conviction in the ultimate victory of Germany and the reinstatement of Constantine as King, have been dismissed from the service and removed from Athens. The Minister of War states that they are enjoying full liberty in the islands to which they have been sent.

FARM WORKERS NEEDED.

Saskatchewan Will Require Ten Thousand Men.

REGINA, Jan. 9.—Saskatchewan will need 10,000 men for the spring and summer work on its farms this year, in addition to those labourers who are available within Saskatchewan. This estimate was made by T. M. Mulloy, Commissioner of the Bureau of Labour Department of Agriculture for Saskatchewan, when discussing the farm labour situation in this Province.

SOLDIERS LEARN TO MAKE FALSE TEETH

Dental mechanics is one of the little known trades in which returned men are manifesting an interest when they return to Canada incapacitated for their former occupations. The vocational training of the Military Hospitals commission have been called upon to make provision for it in their re-education courses.

The work requires mechanical skill and a fine eye for detail and holds, through its demands for fine work and ingenuity, an unusual interest for the able man who has been incapacitated for heavier work.

In France a school of dental mechanics has been established for disabled soldiers by Dr. Quintero of Lyons, and a large class of veterans is under instruction, but the Military Hospitals Commission has made arrangements for Canadian men to take the work in established schools here. The work pays well and a skillful man can become an efficient workman in eight months.

The course has been granted to several soldiers, one a Montreal man who before he enlisted was a very successful salesman, drawing a good salary. He suffers now from an injured hip and cannot walk without pain. He must have work at which he can sit.

Enquiry into his past showed that his father had been an inventor, and that he too inherited a certain ingenuity with mechanical things. He had demonstrated this in helping the dental officer on active service, and so an eight months' course was granted him by the government. His progress in the first month gives promise of great success

GRAIN MARKET

Peace rumors coming thick and fast from many sources had an effect in inducing a decidedly weaker undertone to the grain markets yesterday. The cash situation weakened considerably, closing at Winnipeg 1 1-4c below Wednesday. Corn eased down rather sharply at an early stage but picked up later on prediction of a coming blizzard, which might still further hamper transportation.

SOMETIMES.

If times are hard, and you feel blue,
Think of the others worrying, too;
Don't think that others haven't any.
Life is made up of smiles and tears,
Joys and sorrows mixed with fears;
And though to us it seems one-sided,
Trouble is pretty well divided.
If we could look in every heart,
We'd find that each one has its part,
And those who travel fortune's road,
Sometimes carry the biggest load.

CATTLE MARKET

UNION STOCK YARDS—Receipts 80 cars, with 525 cattle, 51 calves, 2,795 hogs, and 876 sheep and lambs.

The feature of the market yesterday was the strong position of hogs. Keen competition on the part of one or two buyers forced the market up about 50c, making the fed and watered price at the close of the market $19. This was the highest for some months past, but not up to the high-water mark of last year when hogs came within 5c of reaching the $20 mark.

Butcher cattle continue in a strong, steady market.

Sheep, lambs and calves continue steady and firm.

Broadway Crowd Sees Girl Shoot Traffic Policeman; Fall To Street In Struggle

Young Woman Is First to Regain Feet and Calmly Surveys Wounded Man, Who Calls For Her Arrest—Near Tragedy Outgrowth of An Affair of the Heart

SEQUEL TO A ROMANCE

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—A young woman snugly wrapped in a sable cape, her hands in a fluffy muff, and her daintily clad feet picking the safe places in the pavement stepped from the hurrying crowd in front of the Metropolitan Opera House, at Broadway and Fortieth street, at fifteen minutes after 6 o'clock and approached "Big Joe" Ward, the traffic policeman in the centre of the intersection, who was directing the streams of taxicabs and automobiles.

Hundreds of persons were passing the Broadway Theatre, the Cafe Boulevard, the Empire Theatre, Browne's Chop House and the numerous brightly lighted shop windows in that busy section, and many of them were attracted by the appearance of the young woman stepping out into the turmoil of vehicular traffic. They saw her go up to the policeman and saw her lips move as if she had said something with some vehemence.

Then the passing crowds saw the young woman withdraw her right hand from the muff. There was a glistening pistol in it. Policeman Ward threw up his left arm as if to shield himself. There was the sharp crack of a shot and Ward's left arm dropped limp at his side.

With his right arm he seized the woman, crushing her right hand and the weapon between them. There was a brief struggle. Then they both slipped and went down on the car rails.

All traffic, vehicular and pedestrian, stopped instantly. Before any one could reach the struggling couple in the street the woman rose and stood, quite coolly, above Ward, who remained prostrate, and cried:

"Arrest her! Call an ambulance!"

There are always many detectives in that part of Broadway, and soon several of them were carrying Ward and escorting the young woman into a clothing shop, seeking refuge from the great crowd that began to envelop them.

While waiting for an ambulance in the store it was learned that the girl was Miss Marie Leddy, twenty-one years old, of No. 1,026 Ogden avenue, the Bronx.

"It will all come out—it will all come out!" she said at first, glancing at the policeman, who believed he was seriously hurt. Ward was sent to Bellvue hospital in an ambulance; the physicians saying that the bullet had lodged in the left hand, back of the index finger, and was not serious.

Miss Leddy accompanied Policeman Hugh Downie to the West Thirtieth street station, where at first she was quite calm. She said she and Policeman Ward had been friends a long time—"yes, more than friends; we had loved each other." She had trusted him and then his affection seemed to cool and she could obtain from him no explanation.

When she went to Fortieth street and Broadway last evening it was to demand an explanation and when he tried to evade her demand she frankly said she had used the weapon.

She was calm until she had finished the narration of her little romance. Then she wilted and wept softly as she was turned over to a matron to be held on a charge of felonious assault. She said she was the daughter of Patrick Leddy, a retired member of the Police Department, and that she had used his pistol. Ward is 31 and single.

Jesus Begins His Work.—Mark 1: 12-39.

Golden Text.—Repent ye, and believe in the gospel.—Mark 1: 15.

1. Verse 12: What "spirit" was it that drove Jesus into the wilderness?
2. Verse 13: What or who were the angels that ministered to Jesus; and what form did their ministry probably take?
3. How would you consider that Jesus spent the forty days in the wilderness?
4. Verse 14: When our most intimate friends are cast into prison, or die, how should that affect us in the quality and quantity of our work?
5. How do you understand the phrase "preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God?"
6. Verse 15: Give a specific case of repentance, and say what is the meaning of the word.
7. Verse 15: If a man is truly penitent, does he, or not, and why, necessarily believe the gospel?
8. Verse 16: How much has God had to do direct with the choice of the business we are in?
9. Verse 17: Take the two occupations, literal fishermen and "fishers of men," and say which, and why, is the more honourable calling to one whom God wants to be a literal fisherman?
10. Verse 17: Give your reason, and state whether Jesus invited or commanded these fishermen to follow him?
11. Verse 18: Did Jesus have any previous acquaintance with these men; and whether or not, how do you account for their promptness in following him?
12. Verse 19: Why would this story not harmonize with the hypothesis that Jesus had been associating with these men with a view to becoming his apostles?
13. Verse 19: What would you say is the reason that Jesus selected unlearned fishermen to be His apostles, rather than scholarly men?
14. What reason is there to believe that God never calls a man to a work for which he has not the natural adaptation?
15. While admitting that the churches should require candidates for the ministry, as a rule, to come up to a certain educational standard, why is a church not highly blamable for rejecting an outstanding preacher and soul-winner because he cannot pass the educational test?
16. Verse 20: Why would you say or not, that no man should leave a business and join the ministry without first making full provision for the honourable closing or the carrying on of his business by another?
17. What would you say will be the result to a man whom God clearly calls to the ministry, if he refuses to obey the call?

The Girardet Estate

By F. A. MITCHEL

Albert Girardet was left ten years after his marriage with one child, a son, Jules, eight years old. Two years later the father married a widow with one child, a daughter, Louise, also eight years old. Jules, who was inclined to be wild, was very fond of his stepmother, and she alone had any influence over him.

About the time Jules came of age the second Mme. Girardet died. Jules, who had entered the army, was at the time fighting with his regiment in Algeria and, of course, could not come home. His father was much embittered, needing his son in this second bereavement, especially since he was getting old and desired a younger man on whom to lean. He had been much troubled by his son's disposition to lead a reckless life and had opposed his following the career of a soldier. He wished his boy to remain at home and learn the business of his own estate, which was a large one.

But all his pleadings were in vain. Jules seemed fitted for a turbulent life and could not be [illegible] as a country gentleman. The boy's only redeeming trait—so his father considered it—was his affection for his stepmother, somewhat unusual in stepchildren, and his unselfishness with regard to Louise. His father, in order to make him subservient to his wishes, had once threatened to leave all his property to Louise. Jules told him that he could not do anything that would please him better.

Soon after the death of the second Mme. Girardet the old man called his stepdaughter into his study and said to her:

"It is now a month since Jules was notified of your mother's death, and not a word has come from him. Could a father be treated worse by a son?"

"But, papa, Jules is campaigning. He may not have received our letters and if he has may not have had an opportunity to answer them. The newspapers report a great deal of fighting at the front."

"That may be, my dear girl, but it does not alter the case, so far as I am concerned. I am an old man, and I have one son, on whom I should be able to rely. That son has disappointed me—not one thing I have asked of him that he has granted. I am not well, and I shall not live long. I must settle my affairs. You shall be my sole heir. But a woman is not fitted to manage an estate. You must have a husband, and that husband must be a steady man, with a heart for business. I have such a man in view. I have entered upon negotiations with M. Meydieu for his son, Armand."

One would naturally suppose that Louise, on being told that she would inherit an estate worth 1,000,000 francs, would rejoice. But the look on her face indicated that she was not at all favorably impressed with the plan, yet realizing that her stepfather was in no mood to be opposed she accepted the situation, at least temporarily.

M. Girardet made his will in her favor and ignored his son. He also made a marriage contract between Armand Meydieu and Louise. When it was signed he showed the will to Armand, explaining why he had made it and that Armand was expected to take care of the estate. All these matters having been arranged, the old man tried to deceive himself that he felt content. But he did not. He loved his boy and would have much rather left his estate in the natural way.

Not long after the making of this marriage contract the war in Algeria came to an end, and Jules' regiment was ordered home. At the time the troops reached the French coast M. Girardet was lying at the point of death. Louise, seeing a notice of the arrival of Jules' regiment, telegraphed him that his father was dying and if he desired to see him alive he must come at once.

The next day the old man, his life ebbing away, saw his son standing over his bed in a colonel's uniform and covered with decorations. The young man bent down and uttered the words:

"Forgive me, father."

"A notary," gasped the old man, "a notary! I must make another will."

Too late. Before a notary could be summoned the old man died.

After the funeral Louise, to whom her stepfather had given his will for safe keeping, led her stepbrother into the library, shut all the doors and took the instrument out of a desk. A bright fire burned on the hearth, and Louise stood near it.

"Jules," she said, "papa has been unjust to you in trying to make you what you are not and trying to keep you from being what you are. By this paper he has deprived you of your rightful inheritance."

"To whom has he left it?"

She threw the paper into the blaze and when it was consumed replied, "To me."

Jules sprang toward her and caught her in his arms. Not a word was spoken, but each saw in the other's expression what neither had seen before.

"What papa would have done if he had lived to do it I have done," said Louise presently. "You are your father's sole heir, and no will is necessary to insure his estate to you."

"And as my wife it will all be yours."

Nothing was needed to get rid of the marriage contract that had been made with Armand Meydieu except to make it known that no will existed in Louise's favor and that Colonel Girardet as heir at law would inherit the estate.

Best Law by a Nose.

One evening a short time since Maude Radford Warren witnessed the following race against time that was staged near Victoria Station, London, at an hour when traffic is thickest:

"Presently a shouting and cursing arose at the center of the intersecting streets. People turned, peering and gaping. Straking straight through the traffic, regardless of thundering trucks and sliding cabs and obstructing pedestrians, came a Scotchman. His eyes were glassy and staring, his kilts were flying, his knees were twinkling. On he came, straight for the public house. If he could get a hand on a glass of his national vodka by 9.29½ he was saved. Would he make it? A group of ribald Americans cheered him on, yelling at him in race-track fashion. His fellow Scotchmen silently made way for him and some of them even pushed people out of his path. But they did not cheer; it was a matter too deep for sounds. On came Sandy; panting, glaring, he leaped through the door, and a sympathizer from over the seas who followed him reported that at 9.29¾ he had a strong Highland paw curled around three fingers of Scotch. The Early Closing Law, thanks to good sprinting, had been respected—but nevertheless, the trench had been taken and the day saved."—Everybody's magazine.

Walpole's "Fooleries."

It is amusing to find Horace Walpole indulging in what he terms of his "fooleries" on the subject of airships. A balloon had passed over Strawberry Hill, and he cogitates on the prospect of the world's appearance if balloons were to take the place of ships: "I supposed," he says, "our seaports to become deserted villages; and Salisbury Plain, Newmarket Heath, and all downs (but the Downs) arising into dockyards for aerial vessels. There will be prodigious increase of land for tillage, especially in France, by breaking up all public roads as useless." Quite a fantastic subject for one of the famous letters. A "foolery" for centuries, and then truth beggared fiction.

Australian Railroads.

During the year ended June 30th, 1916, 5,149,259 train miles were run on the Government railways of Western Australia, this being 255,525 miles less than during the previous year. The gross earnings were £2,088,100—an increase of £29,866. The working expenses amounted to £1,511,655, this being an increase of £13,823. As there were 236 additional miles of line to operate, the smallness of the increase is regarded as having been satisfactory.

In the American Magazine Thomas S. Wilson, the Chicago packer, says:

"I often ask a man why he is doing a thing a certain way. If he tells me that he does it that way because it has always been done just like that I am inclined to be somewhat dubious about his ability. Not infrequently the fact that custom has been in force for thirty years is the only reason he can give. We should be constantly on the lookout for better ways of doing things. Any business not showing constant advancement usually deteriorates. Individual positions are no exceptions.

"One of the great foes to a good organization is the practice of promoting by seniority alone. John Smith is moved into a vacancy because he has been in the department longer than some other fellow. This plan permits an inferior man to block the way of a good man. There should be no rules about promotion which can in any way hamper the selection of the best man for a place. In fact, I do not like to have too many rules about anything. Rules tend to make people follow custom without knowing why and without using much initiative."

What Ireland Needs.

"'What Ireland needs is money—money for education, for industry, for agriculture. No amount of bloodshed will give us chemical fertilizer; but a factory will, and that's what we need. We need some little light railways and water-power and we need our mines working—oh, and a lot of things. If some of your big chaps will drop a little money by way of investment in Ireland, it will do more for the country than gun-running. England is going to give Ireland her freedom! that is certain. She'll have to make Ireland as free as Canada—dominion home rule. But when that comes, then the real work begins. We've got to shake loose of our politicians. If we don't, we'll be eaten up by them."

"'English, you mean?' asked William.

"'English, no. Irish.'

"'You mean that Irish politicians graft on Irishmen?' asked William.

"'There's nothing wrong with the Irish,' he said to us; 'they're the kindest hearted people in the world. But there's a kind of noxious vermin that politics breed, and that's where our trouble comes, and trouble it is. The Irish politician, my boy—have you ever studied the breed?'

"'Yes,' answered William.

"'Well, well, and you so young!' said Father Murphy. 'Why, look you now, we've had local self-government for many years, the Irish cities run by Irishmen, no Englishman interfering at all in that. And do you think that brought us freedom? Take, now, the corporation in this city, Irish to a man. And run your glance through this fat report, and what do you find? Rotten slum property owned by members of the corporation; fifty people using the same closet, and that a very dirty one; crowding, disease, immorality; protests filed, and nothing done. I tell you lad, it's ourselves we must watch. When we get our country back again, and I shall live to see it, then we must make the fine deeds of these young boys come true. These grand young fellows go out and die to free Ireland; but all they do will be wasted if we still have the old crowd on top.'"—Arthur Gleason in Century.

Cold Settles On The Kidneys

Hence the Backaches, Rheumatic Pains, and Lumbago — Relief Comes When the Action of the Kidneys is Aroused.

Kiltarlity, N.S., Jan. 11.—It is not only the lungs that suffer during the cold, damp seasons. The kidneys are almost equally susceptible to sudden changes of temperature, and many a serious case of kidney disease has its beginning with a cold, which settles on the kidneys.

Persons working out of doors are most likely to be victims of such trouble and suffer from backaches, lumbago, rheumatism, and crippled, aching limbs, but anyone is liable to sit in a draught or expose his back to a current of cold air.

Cold settling on the kidneys causes congestion, a clogging of these filtering organs and consequent derangement of the whole digestive and excretory systems. The liver fails to work, the bowels become constipated, and the stomach gets upset.

Because of their direct and combined action on these organs, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are of most prompt and most lasting benefit for such derangements. They are positive in their effects and are backed by the experience and integrity of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous Receipt Book author.

Mr. Neil A. Cameron, Kiltarlity, N.S., writes: "I am glad to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to anyone who is suffering from rheumatism. For about twenty-five years I was bothered more or less with this affliction. I was treated by doctors all over Nova Scotia, and when on business in New York, had an opportunity to consult one of the greatest specialists there; but I never gained more than temporary relief. In an effort to get rid of the accumulating development of the disease, I tried Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and when I had taken eight boxes, I was, to my astonishment, totally cured. I therefore heartily recommend these Pills to all who suffer from rheumatism, and anyone who doubts this testimonial may write me as proof to the contrary."

(Rev. James A. Collins, P.P., says: "This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. Neil A. Cameron, and believe his statement is true and to my personal knowledge correct.")

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

CHURCH CHOIRS SING FOR THE WOUNDED MEN.

Church choirs in Canada have found a new way to do their bit in war work. They are giving concerts in the military convalescent hospitals, where the boys who have been returned to Canada wounded are still fighting glooms and pain.

A church choir made up of soloists and a chorus finds that it has in its organization all the elements of a grand opera company. To divert its talent to entertainment for the wounded soldiers, six days a week, if necessary, is giving a new interest to practise. Repertoires, which heretofore have been limited to anthems and occasional festival cantatas, have been enlarged to include many laugh-provoking ditties and the boys in the hospitals give them a royal reception.

CONCERT SERIES.

In some cities so many choirs have offered to co-operate that a series which will last the whole winter season of the young people are generously offering to go out to the hospitals and sanatoria located in the country to entertain the men there.

These concerts do a great deal to relieve the monotony of the long days of the same routine. They are something to look forward to and a boon to the boys who are not able to get out. The recreation rooms and concert halls are filled long before the hour and the effort of the entertainers to over-reach even the boys' anticipation has resulted in concerts far above the average.

STAGE STARS, TOO.

In Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver, the members of big musical comedy companies and vaudeville stars have also manifested a great interest in the convalescent men. They have sung in training camps in the United States, but to sing to the wounded heroes who have done their bit has an added attraction, and they are doubly eager to do their bit. Such treats make red letter days on the hospital calendars.

CHILDREN MUST BE PROTECTED

The children must be safeguarded, for, if they do survive the frequent coughs and colds, it is often with the lungs so weakened that they become chronic sufferers from bronchitis or consumption. Being composed of simple ingredients of undoubted value, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is admirably suited as a treatment for children. It is pleasant to taste. So much so that children delight to take it on this account, as well as because of the quick relief it affords them.

CAPT. BISHOP WON ADMIRATION OF ALL.

Official Account of Canadian V.C.'s Exploits Is Gazetted.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—The London Gazette to-day publishes a statement of the services for which Capt. William Avery Bishop, of Owen Sound, Canada, was awarded a bar to the Distinguished Service Order announced on 26th September last. It says:

"His consistent dash and great fearlessness have set a magnificent example to the pilots of his squadron. He destroyed no less than forty-five hostile machines during the past five months, frequently attacking enemy formations single-handed, and on all occasions displaying fighting spirit and determination to get to close quarters with his opponents, which earned the admiration of all in contact with him."

The Ramparts, Quebec City.

St. Louis Gate, Quebec.

Echoes of Old Wars in Quebec

HOW unending are the charms of Old Quebec. No matter how often visited, it never fails to cast its spell over the sojourner or to visualize for him the rich and romantic past. There, indeed, one can step from the seventeenth to the twentieth century, from yesterday to to-day. One is taken back to the birth of Canada and to the historic period when France ruled a half continent.

Let us have a few glimpses of Quebec. I like best to ramble over its ramparts, where one can take in the terraced streets and the jumble of steep roofs and chimney pots, and towering church steeples. It makes a strange hit or miss canvas but one of unique charm.

Or swing around to the Grand Allee and pass under the imposing St. Louis gate. If you would get another Quebec picture of striking beauty. The very fact that the comparatively new gate joins the ancient Citadel walls, makes the effect all the more striking.

Or wander at will anywhere in Upper or Lower Town and queer street views will be revealed, such as St. John Street, where it turns up the hill past the City Hall and the Basilica. Many a house that comes within the view carries a great history, as does the noble obelisk that stands in the Governor's gardens and overlooks the Dufferin Terrace and the kingly river far below. There it stands in memory of Wolfe and Montcalm, the only monument it is said in the world erected to the memory of both victor and vanquished.

Then, as we steal away, the panoramic view of the Citadel City is in some respects the most impressive of all. How regally the Citadel crowns the heights of Cape Diamond, and what an eye both Cartier and Champlain had for a city site.

Such are a few only of the glimpses to be had of dear old Quebec, the birth city of Canada.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Colonel Bunker

By M. QUAD

Copyright, ..., by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"You have asked me, sah," began Colonel Bunker, "which was the strangest duel I ever fought. Of the fifteen or twenty I think that two might come under the head of strange.

"Majah Blazer and I were friends and neighbors and had been for years. Not a word of discord had ever passed between us. He had a cat and I had a dog, and they were also friends.

"One morning the majah came into my office and called out:

"'Colonel, tell your dawg that if he will come over he may have a look at them.'

"'What is it, majah?'

"'Our old cat has kittens.'

"'You don't say! How many of them?'

"'Just twenty-one, sah.'

"'You counted them yourself, did you?'

"'Colonel, do you question my statement?'

"'Not at all, major; but twenty-one kittens in a litter is certainly a wonderful thing.'

"'It may be, sah, and—good morning, sah!'

"And, sah, it wasn't an hour before he sent a friend to me to arrange a duel. I had seemed to doubt his veracity, and he must clear his honah. I agree with you that it was silly, but men were mighty peppery in those days. The majah's wife came and begged that I refuse the challenge, but at the same time she couldn't show me how I could do it and maintain my honah. I asked her the number of kittens and was not at all surprised to learn that the number was only four.

"The explanation was that the majah's wife had been canning strawberries, and in speaking of it to him she gave the number of the cans as twenty-one.

"Well, sah, the choice of weapons lay with me, and I chose swords. A week before that while out for a walk I crossed the dueling ground, and I observed that close by in a fence corner was a bumblebees' nest. We were to meet at sunrise, which is a very uncomfortable hour, by the bye, and the night before I had a confidential talk with a colored brother.

"The night passed, and the morning came. I was first on the ground, and I had time to see that the colored brother was up in the part he was to play. On my word, the majah knew no mo' about sword play than a Lapiander. I could have had him out in one minute, but I did not want that. I gave the colored brother the nod, and he stirred up the bees through the fence with a pole. They came out of the grass by the hundred, and I alone saw them in time to get away.

"But the bees, sah—the bees! Those men left behind were a sight to see when the insects got through with them. All of them had to be led home, and not one of them got out of the house for a fortnight. As for the majah, when he could get out he came to the office to say:

"'Colonel, I have bad news for your dawg.'

"'What is it?'

"'Every kitten is dead.'

"'Sho! That's too bad.'

"'And the shelf fell down and broke all the fruit jars.'

"'Too bad, too bad.'

"'And you take notice, sah, we didn't get the kittens and the jars mixed up.'"

At this juncture Colonel Bunker remarked that he would tell the story of another duel.

"Captain Benton was my good friend and had been for years. One evening as we sat on the verbena of his house, smoking our pipes and saying little, he carelessly observed:

"'It's a wonder those grasshoppers can keep that noise up the way they do.'

"'You mean crickets, captain,' I corrected.

"'I mean what I mean!' he snapped.

"Well, here we were," said the colonel—"there we were. It made no difference whatever to either one of us whether it was a cricket, a grasshopper or an owl singing, but there are times when the best of men are attacked by what may be called a fool perversity. We sulked for five minutes, and then I said:

"'Captain, the songs of those crickets are not so unpleasant after all.'

"'You mean the songs of those grasshoppers, sah,' he replied.

"'Crickets!'

"'Grasshoppers!'

"'Colonel Bunker, my friend will wait on you and arrange!'

"'The sooner the better, sah!'

"And within an hour his friend came, and a duel was arranged for sunrise.

"You may say we were a couple of idiots, sah, but in those days a man's honah was held to be a sacred thing. If I was out walking with a gentleman and remarked that there was a ring around the moon and he replied that he couldn't see it, honah required that I send him a challenge.

"And, sah, perhaps there was neither moon nor ring showing!

"We were on the field and the distance was being paced off when a bullfrog got after a drove of mules out at pasture, and the mules got after us. All hands were driven up trees, and as we roosted fifteen feet high one of the seconds called out:

"'Gentlemen, I don't think it was either crickets or grasshoppers!'

"'Then what?'

"'Tree toads!'

"And they did—and shook loose, and the duel was off, sah—and the last was off."

A Medieval Tale

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Medieval times were prolific of stories of the devil, who was supposed to be going about making bargains for souls. A great many such tales illustrating his methods have been handed down to us from that age in which they were believed by those who circulated them. Here is one that has remained dormant for many years. It was told me by an American multimillionaire who bought a castle in Germany and found the legend among papers that had not been disturbed for hundreds of years.

Count Caspar Ardenreid, the lord of the castle in question, was in love with Bertha, the daughter of a neighboring Baron Cronsheld. There had been a feud between the families, and Cronsheld refused the young count the hand of his daughter.

One evening the count was sitting in his cabinet, disconsolate that he must be deprived of his love, when the door opened and a man entered wearing a pointed beard and an upturned mustache.

"Who are you," asked the count, "and how did you gain access to me unannounced?"

"I am the devil," was the response, "and I have come to help you to win the hand of the girl you love."

"You are right. I must have the soul of your firstborn child."

"Begone, I say; I will have nothing to do with you."

"Then you must give up all hope of a union with the Countess Bertha. Her father will never yield."

The devil stuck to his work, conversing with the count and constantly getting him under his satanic influence. Caspar asked him how he would accomplish his object, and he said the baron was a skillful chess player. The devil would taunt him into playing a game, the winner to name a husband for his daughter. Caspar, who was desperately in love, finally consented, but only after wringing from the devil a certain condition. He might redeem his child's soul if he could beat the devil at a game of chess. This did not seem likely, but it was the only hope Satan would give.

The bargain having been struck, Satan sent the baron word that he had heard of his remarkable skill at chess and challenged him to a contest. The baron, much flattered, invited the challenger to his castle. Satan appeared in the person of an agreeable young man giving evidence by his rich attire and general lavishness of being a grand personage. He told the baron that he would play him a game of chess, the stake to be what he had named to Caspar. The baron, supposing that he wanted Bertha for himself, consented. Of course the devil beat the baron, and the winner named for a husband for his daughter Count Caspar Ardenreid. The baron consented, cursing the trickster at the same time and wondering why he had befriended the lovers.

Since there was nothing against Count Caspar but the feud with which he had nothing to do, Baron Cronsheld made the best of it and soon became attached to his son-in-law. Caspar told him how he had won his consent and what he had agreed to pay for it. This excited the old man to spend a great deal of time studying difficult chess problems in order that when the devil came to claim his grandchild he might redeem him by beating the arch fiend at his own game. He was so proud of his ability as a chess player that he really aspired to beat the devil.

The day a man child was born to the count and countess was both a happy and a sad one. The lady had learned from her husband the secret that her baby's soul must go to the devil, and since she was very religious the calamity was the more awful. Her father assured her that her son was safe, for it had been stipulated that if any one could be found to beat the devil at chess the bargain would be off. He (the baron) had learned a number of combinations any one of which was sure to win.

The mother proposed that the baby be baptized at once, hoping that this might forestall Satan, but before it could be done he appeared and claimed the child's soul. Since all depended on a chess contest the count proposed that three games be played between the baron and the devil, (wo games to win. So they sat down at once and began to play. Satan said he would play the first game with his eyes shut. He purposely threw away the game, but even without seeing the chessmen he could have beaten his antagonist if he had been so disposed. The second game he beat the baron in less than a dozen moves.

Cronsheld refused to play the third game, declaring that the best chess player in the world could not beat one who played using superhuman means. The count went to his wife to impart the news that their son's soul depended on the third game, which the devil was sure to win. Bertha said she had been praying to the Virgin Mary for help and had been told what to do. When her husband went back to the devil he said he would play the third game himself. Satan laughed scornfully, but sat down at the board.

Half a dozen moves had been made and Satan had but two more to make to checkmate when Caspar threw back his doublet and displayed a gold cross. Satan cringed under the table and left the room like a dog with his tail between his legs.

And he never came back for his pay.

McTavish's Compromise.

A canny Scot owned a wonderful badger it was reported no dog could tackle. However, a friend of his had a dog he proposed to back against the badger, and a match was in due course made for £100, to come off in two months' time.

As the time drew near there were rumors that all was not right with the dog, and the Scot's friends were making sure of victory for him.

Imagine their surprise and disgust when they heard that McTavish had accepted £50 as a compromise in lieu of the £100.

"You've been done, Mac," said one of them. "The dog is so mangy and unfit he could not kill a rat."

"Ah," said McTavish, "I dare say, I dare say, but my badger is dead."—London Globe.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its colour and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even colour, that beautiful dark shade of hair, which is so attractive, use only this old time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite to impart colour and a youthful appearance to the hair. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

MOTOR CAR FUELS.

British Government Undertakes Important Work.

In addition to plans for developing the fuel resources of Ireland, two steps that may have far-reaching effects upon the supply of home-produced motor fuel have just been taken by the British Government. They concern petroleum and benzol, writes Conrad Dennison from Birmingham. As regards the former, a bill has been introduced into Parliament giving the Government power to develop the latent petroleum resources of this country. At present the production of this fuel is a negative quantity, though for the period 1891-1900 there was an average annual production of 67 tons, this decreasing to a mere eight tons in the ensuing decade, and then ceasing altogether. Experts are satisfied that, given proper development, good supplies will be tapped, since signs of the occurrence of petroleum exist in many parts of the country. For instance, in Staffordshire, which is in the Birmingham district, it occurs in the coal measures of Longton.

The Government, too, it is stated, is taking steps to assist in the marketing of benzol after the war through the agency of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, in which it holds a predominant interest. The proposal is that the British petroleum Company, formerly a German concern, but now a British subsidiary of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, should actually handle the spirit, of which vast quantities should be available when benzol is no longer required in connection with the production of high explosives.

The great shortage existing in the supply of gasoline and its high price has resulted in drawing attention to coal gas, and its use as an alternative fuel is growing rapidly. In this district many firms are beginning to use coal gas to either augment their inadequate gasoline allowance or to keep their vehicles running in the absence of any gasoline supplies. The Walsall Corporation has been experimenting with this new fuel with such success that it is understood all the motor busses owned by that municipality are about to be altered for running on coal gas. If a reasonably light metal container for compressed gas could be placed on the market there would be a big future for this fuel. With compressed gas the distance that could be covered on one charge would be much greater than is at present the case with gas at atmospheric pressure.

The Government has also decided to investigate the possibilities of Irish peat as fuel. Peat is one of many available sources of alcohol. Most engines can be run on a half-and-half mixture of alcohol and benzol, and both of the spirits comprising this mixture are produced in the United Kingdom—the former in unlimited quantities, since it is a vegetable product, and the latter to the extent of about 100,000,000 gallons per annum (after the war). This means that the country ought to be able to produce 200,000,000 gallons annually of an alcohol-benzol motor fuel, or nearly twice the amount of gasoline that was being imported annually before the war.

Early Marriage in China.

It is nothing rare in China for boys twelve to fourteen years old to marry. The physical, moral and intellectual development of the contracting parties has nothing to do with the matter. Other considerations entirely regulate the affair.

An old Chinese aphorism says that the great business of life is ended when the sons and daughters are married. The Chinese parents do not care to run the danger of postponing the marriage of their children, especially of their sons, until after their own death.

Possums Are Stupid.

The free toes of opossums are used the hands for grasping, and the young cling firmly to the fur of their mother while being carried about in her wanderings. They are rather slow moving, stupid animals, which seek safety by their retiring habits and by non-resistance when overtaken by an enemy. This last trait gave origin to the familiar term "playing possum."

Wanted the Goods.

The late Jack London once arranged with a magazine editor to do a short story for $1,500.

"And," said London hopefully, the deal being concluded, "can I have the money now before I write the stuff?"

The editor gave a shrug.

"Your stories, my dear London," he said, "are immortal, but you, unfortunately, are not."

Coal in Queensland.

The Queensland Mines Department has received a report from its experts, who have been boring in the Bowen district for some time, stating that they have now proved that within an area of one square mile there are twenty-two million tons of coal.

A Great Demand for Gas.

Fears of a British coal shortage have led to an enormous increase in the demand for gas fuel for household purposes. All gas undertakings report an excessive demand for gas fires, cookers, and geysers. Difficulties of manufacture have led to the cancelling of numbers of orders, and the Gas Light and Coke Company, the largest of its kind in the world, is now working entirely on its reserve stocks of appliances.

The increased consumption of gas the editor of the Gas World stated also extends to a number of munition works, and in many districts the day load for cooking and power is considerably greater than the night demand when lighting is at its fullest.

Astronomer Killed.

The journal of the British Astronomical Association reports that Richard F. Roberts, a member of the association and also a fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society, was killed in the aeroplane raid on London, June 13. His daughter was killed in another house during the same raid. Mr. Roberts was an amateur astronomer and took part in an eclipse expedition in 1900.

Alkali in Shampoos Bad For the Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Not Likely.

Palpitation of the Heart and Nerve Troubles

WERE CURED BY

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills

When the heart begins to beat irregularly or intermittently, palpitate and throb, skip beats, beat fast for a time, then so slow as to seem almost to stop, it causes great anxiety and alarm and the least excitement or exertion seems to affect it.

Many people are kept in a state of morbid fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable through this unnatural action of the heart.

To all sufferers from heart troubles we would advise the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, which by their action in strengthening the heart and regulating the beat remove all the distressing conditions, and impart vigor and vitality to the system.

Mrs. Thomas Davidson, Mount Brydges, Ont., writes: "I have been a great sufferer in the past with nerve troubles and palpitation of the heart. I tried several remedies, but without any good results. My son came in one day and advised me to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. After using one and a half boxes, I am fully recovered, and am in a perfect state of health, thanks to your valuable medicine."

THE WANTS WILL HELP

What do you want most? Would you be glad of the chance to rent a room or two to congenial people? Would you like to secure a more profitable position where the chances for advancement are more certain? Would you like to dispose of household property or realty at a fair price? Would you like to locate a business partner?

These are but a few of the score or more questions that may be asked and answered through the Want Columns of the Examiner.

Those who wish to rent rooms are put in touch with those who have rooms to rent. Business partners are located, realty is bought and sold, employer and employees are brought together, buyers and sellers meet each day as a result of the little Want Ads that have come to play such an important part in modern business.

Are you taking full advantage of the Wants in the Examiner?

TO AN EIGHTEENTH CENTURY PORTRAIT.

In an East Side Junk Shop.
Lamely you stand there, in your velvet coat,
Its lace frills dangling 'round your idle hands,
Your haughty eyes bent on the dirty streets
Through which none passes by that understands;
None your pathetic history to trace,
None to restore you to some fitting place.

The leavings of the stately centuries
Scatter'd around you lie, grown foul and strange;
Children's old-fashioned garments, gray with dust,
Bear silent witness, love and fashions change:
And broken and forgotten, two quaint fans,
Toss'd with old boots and shoes and pots and pans.

Candlesticks, censers, silken chasubles,
Stolen long since from consecrated halls;
Armour, rare carvings, ragged tapestries
That might have graced your own ancestral walls—
Scornful, superior, in this old melee,
You stand—poor ghost of a departed day.

—Marietta M. Andrews.

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well As Men

Glass of hot water each morning helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the poisonous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations, and poisons, before putting more food into the stomach.

These subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation.

MOTHER AND SON SENT UP.

New York. — Mrs. Anna Lichtermann, 40 years old, and Nathan Haas, her 27-year-old son by a previous marriage, were found guilty of [illegible] and were given prison sentences by Federal Judge Hand. Affidavits that Haas was the sole support of his mother, was the basis of the charge on which they were convicted. Haas was sentenced to the Federal prison at Atlanta for a year and a day with the additional order that he suffer when his term expires. His mother was sent to the Tombs prison for 30 days. Judge Hand severely censured both prisoners.

"Tell Them To See Me" Says Newman

"If Anybody Wants to Know What I Think About Tanlac"

"Speaking from my own experience with Tanlac, I can recommend it because it has helped me, and I believe it is just what lots of other people are needing," said John Newman, of 43 Mason Avenue, Toronto. Mr. Newman has lived in Toronto for the past fifteen years, and is employed at the plant of the Canadian Kodak Company.

"I was all run-down and very nervous," he continued; "couldn't sleep well at night and all day, at my work, I felt restless and fidgity. My nerves and muscles were always twitching and jerking and, at times, I would limp like I had an electric shock. I had that tired feeling all the time and would come home from my work at night almost exhausted. My appetite was no good and my food failed to give me proper nourishment. I kept patching up and somehow managed to keep going, but I was losing weight and strength, and seemed to be playing out right along.

"What I needed was an all 'round building up and Tanlac is doing that very thing. One day I met up with my friend, Bert Codd, and after he told me how Tanlac had helped him I immediately got me a bottle and it was the very thing for me. I have taken two bottles now and have already gained five pounds. I never suffer any more from that no-account, worn-out condition. I feel strong and good, and have a fine appetite. My nerves are steady—I don't have any more of that twitching and jumping of my muscles—and my sleep is sound and restful at night. I am certainly well pleased with what it has already done for me, and if anybody wants to know what I think about Tanlac, just tell them to see me."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd.

THE FOOD PROBLEM, 1918.

(With Apologies to Hamlet, Prince of Denmark.)

To eat or not to eat: that is the question:
Whether 'tis nobler for each one to suffer
The pangs and tortures of outrageous hunger,
Or to take arms against a sea of submarines,
And by devices sink them? To fast: to eat:
No more: and by a fast to say we end
The heart-burn and the thousand natural pains
That flesh is heir to, 'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wish'd. To eat, to fast;
To fast: perchance to starve: ay, there's the rub;
For in that fast of War, what pangs may come
When we have given up our daily meals,
Must give us pause; there's the respect
That entertaining brings from all our friends;
For who would bear the snubs and gibes of men,
The gourmet's anger, the epicure's dismay,
The loss of popularity, Society's wrath,
The insolence of "Kultur" and the "strafe"
That free-born England from the Hun Junker gets
When he himself his appetite might slake
With one good luncheon? Who would tickets bear
To stand and wait for hours in crowded queues,
But that the d redhaatt wn-i——17
But that the dread that, after all, supplies
From long-discovered countries over sea
May yet, alas, run short, and this same thought
Should make us rather save the bread we have
Than turn to stricter ways we know not of?
Thus, danger does not make heroes of us all;
And thus the innate British love of freedom
Will triumph o'er the lower appetite
And sacrifices of great pith and moment
Will urge all men to ration.

—Olga Montagu, in The Scotsman

DANIELS IS SPHINX-LIKE.

Washington. — Secretary of Navy Daniels declines to disclose any information regarding the inquiry into the loss of the American army transport Antilles, recently torpedoed with considerable loss of life. Only meagre details of the loss have been made public. Admiral Benson yesterday told the House Naval Committee it was due in part to the convoy arrangements. It is known, however, that following an investigation, Rear-Admiral B. Fletcher, formerly in charge of the American convoying forces in French waters, was recalled to the United States.

FISH CONSUMPTION IS INCREASING.

Ottawa. — As an indication of the increasing consumption of fish in Ontario and Quebec, it was stated at the Food Controller's Office, that one fish company had reported that the week's shipments from one of its nine branches were over approximately 85,000 pounds.

THE DOUBLE CROSS.

'Twas Jacob's voice, but Esau's hand,
And Isaac knows it well,
The Pulpit, Press and Post-cured Grits
Like leaves in autumn fell
They pleaded with him earnestly
He finally gave consent,
But ere the day, they slunk away—
They caught that bacon scent.

Yes, honest George was double crossed
By men considered true:
Conscription bill or Union pill
Had naught whate'er to do.
The powers that be, were quick to see
That eager, anxious throng,
Who with the multi-millionaires
Were wont to march along.

"We won the day!" Big Interests say,
And profiteers rejoice,
But this we know, 'twas ever so,
The poor will pay the price.
They gum-shoed up and down the street,
They whispered in the lane
A kind of talk—their entire stock
Which brought disgrace and shame.

When Borden's bunch of boodle fame
Dissolved, the House to fight,
The people lined Sir Wilfrid up
To put the crooks to flight.
Big Interests then got in the game,
And sad 'tis to relate,
That scores of Grits, who lost their wits,
Reached out and took the bait.

"We'll win the war," Sir Robert said,
To camouflage his faults,
And Grits, who took him at his word,
Have since been taking salts.
Conscription was the ground he chose,
But early saw defeat,
And turned his tail, and set his sail—
An ignominious feat.

They shot the bill to pieces as
They travelled in their car,
Where e'er they found they'd lose a vote,
They give the thing a jar;
Their candidates were falling down,
Disaster was in sight,
They sprung a lie—'twas do or die—
That farmers needn't fight.

They villified our honoured chief—
They rode a racial steed,
Pulled down the flag, and like a rag,
Tramped o'er it with their feet.
But now the smoke has cleared away,
We hear them call the roll,
Min—or—i—ty, Ma—jor—i—ty,
With Tories in the hole.

A.M.P.,
Lindsay, December 25, 1917.

Don't Diet Yourself TO CURE DYSPEPSIA IT ISN'T NECESSARY

The sufferer from dyspepsia and indigestion who has to pick and choose his food, is the most miserable of all mankind.

Even the little he does eat causes such torture, and is digested so imperfectly that it does him little good.

What dyspeptics need is not dieting, or artificial digestants, but something that will put their stomach right so it will manufacture its own digestive ferments.

For forty years now Burdock Blood Bitters has been making weak stomachs strong, and curing severe cases of dyspepsia and indigestion that other remedies were powerless to reach.

It restores the stomach to a normal healthy condition so that the food no longer causes distress, but is thoroughly digested and assimilated, and goes on its way making rich, red blood.

Mrs. Henry Shaw, Campbellton, N.B., writes: "I was for five years troubled with a weak stomach, and could not eat any food that would agree with me. I tried different medicines, but could not get cured. A friend advised me to take Burdock Blood Bitters. I took four bottles, and now I am in perfect health."

Are You Breaking The Law?

A recent amendment to the Motor Vehicle Act requires that Motor Cars shall not show a beam of light more than 42 inches above the surface on which the car is running at a distance of 75 feet in front of the car.

This law is now in force and Chief Thompson has directed the attention of Peterborough motorists to this change in the Act, requesting them to govern themselves accordingly.

GERMANY MUST COME DOWN OR FIGHT RUSSIA AGAIN

Statement of Lenine and Trotsky That Russia Will Fight a New Revolutionary War Against Germany is Regarded in London as Very Significant---Artillery Fighting at Several Points on Western Front.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 11.—The statements of Premier Lenine and Foreign Minister Trotsky of the Russian Bolsheviki Government, to the effect that Russia will fight a new revolutionary war against the Germans, are regarded here as very significant, of new energies and new vitality in Russian affairs. The resumption of war is inevitable unless the Germans come down, it is believed here.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 11.—With the exception of hostile artillery activity east of Vimy Ridge there is nothing to report, says to-day's official announcement.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, (Delayed) — The official statement issued to-night by the French War Office reads: "There was reciprocal artillery action in the region of Monts in Champagne. No infantry activity."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, January 11.—French troops carried out raids last night in Argonne and in the Vosges region, bringing back prisoners from the German lines, the War Office announced to-day.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, January 11. — Vienna newspapers, according to despatches from that city, consider President Wilson's proposed peace conditions such as could only be imposed if the quadruple alliance was completely defeated.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ARMY OF THE EAST, January 9.—The artillery on both sides was active west of Lake Dorian. Enemy patrols were repulsed near Staravina on the right bank of the Cerna. There is nothing to report from the west or front.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, January 11.—Austro-German forces yesterday were forced to evacuate some trench sections near Cavazucchurena on the Italian mountain front, the War Office announced to-day. The retreating Teutons were caught under the Italian fire and suffered considerable losses.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, January 11.—"We have arrived at a great crisis in the war, only to be satisfactorily solved by vehement effective action of the United States," declared Minister of Munitions Winston Churchill at the American Luncheon Club. Churchill graphically and eloquently pictured the peril resulting from the unceasing German reinforcements being piled up on the west from the east front, and then shouted: "America, come and aid us with all your might and speed. For this is the time for action on the largest scale ever planned.

"All are now agreed that Lloyd George's and President Wilson's war aims must be enforced," the Minister declared. "Even the most pacific are agreed that without these right will be worsted and wrong will triumph.

"Probably the worst Armegeddon is yet to be encountered," he added gravely, "but we do not lack confidence in the final result. We are sure to win the whole of President Wilson's programme if we utilize all our resources fully."

Mr. Churchill said that England had sufficient reserve material to fully equip several thousand Americans when they landed in Europe. He advocated that shipping should be devoted to bring men and finished or half-finished products rather than bulky raw materials.

CHURCHILL APPEALS FOR MORE AMERICAN SOLDIERS FOR OVERSEAS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 10.—Winston Spencer Churchill, British Minister of Munitions, addressing the American Luncheon Club to-day, made a powerful appeal for the sending of American soldiers to Europe quickly and in as large number as possible.

"The reception of Premier Lloyd George's and President Wilson's war aims by the Central Powers," the Minister declared, "showed a gulf that no bridge could span." He added that Great Britain and the United States having issued their war aims, must now bend every effort to the practical work of enforcing them on the enemy. "England must melt all her resources," he continued, "into war work. Women must draw nearer to the firing lines and do more manual labour to relieve working men for the ranks of the army. Rations, he said, must be cut down. "The only way to shorten suffering and torment," the Minister asserted, "is to increase the pace."

MEN IN WORKSHOPS MUST CO-OPERATE WITH THE SOLDIERS

Interests of the Workmen of America as Well as Those of England Are Bound Up In the Defeat of the German Army

THIS YEAR THE TEST

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, Jan. 11.—"The interests of the workmen of America as well as of England, are bound up in beating the German army. It cannot be done except by the willing co-operation of the man in the work ships with the men in the field."

Expressing his most emphatic approval of President Wilson's outline of war aims, the Rt. Hon. G. N. Barnes, M.P., member of the British War Cabinet, sent this word to the American workingmen to-day through the United Press.

"This year will be the testing time for the fighters for freedom," Barnes declared. "Germany's U boats will make their last great effort before America gets in. Germany's armies may attack the French, the British or the Italians in great force within the next three or four months.

"Effective American help must then be in the field. I hope every one in the working ranks in the United States will see that, so far as lies in their power, they will contribute to that help being there in time.

"I speak as one who has been in the labour Socialist movement on this side of the water for thirty years. My sympathies are all with the working folk. I am one of them in sympathy with their claim for the fuller life, but I know that everything just now must be subordinated to winning the war.

"I hope President Wilson's speech will stimulate the men in the workshops to do their part by working during the next few months with all their mind and all their strength, so that militarism may be dethroned. It cannot be done, except by willing co-operation of the men in the workshops with the men in the field—and this, although the latter will have, after all, to carry the heaviest part of the burden.

"The value of President Wilson's speech lies in the fact that it reaffirms the common aims of the democratic people of the United States with their allies on this side of the water, making common cause with Premier Lloyd George's statement regarding Russia. It expresses on the whole mind not only of America, but of Britain. The people of this country have nothing but the most kindly feelings for the Russian people. It is our wish that order will come out of the existing chaos as speedily as possible, so that the Russian people may enjoy orderly democratic rule.

"It is our wishes that the western provinces of Russia should not become the appendages of Prussian militarism.

FUTURE DEMOCRACY.

"It is our wish that future democracy should be carried on in the light

"NEAR" BEER AND ALE ARE UP IN PRICE

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Jan. 11.— Beer and ale have gone up in prices. Toronto standard hotel proprietors and licensees have been notfied by the brewers of an increase in the price of "near" beer and ale. This is a 2 1-2 per cent. product. The increase is due, it is stated, to the tremendous increase of hops, malts and other materials which enter into the manufacturing of near beer and ale, but this does not mean that Toronto thirsty ones will have to pay more for their beer.

The Toronto hotel keepers are not even thinking of raising the price, but they are hot under the collar at certain breweries for raising the price. According to down town hotel men the new prices in effect are: Lager beer, per barrel, $9 net, an increase of about a dollar a barrel. Ale has been increased 35 cents per barrel. Beer and ale will sell per case, at: Quarts $1.90 net cash, pints $1.40. This is an increase of twenty cents per 24 bottles.

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR" THRILLING NEW SERIAL

The Examiner's new Serial Story will commence on Saturday and promises to prove one of the finest that readers of this paper have been offered. "The Clue in the Air" is the title, and the author is Isabel Ostrander. No fiction lover can afford to miss this story. In the last few years Isabel Ostrander has gradually risen to a point where she is classed as America's foremost writer of detective stories. "The Clue in the Air" is Isabel Ostrander at her best.

Literally out of a clear sky, "something" drops to the sidewalk at the feet of Timothy McCarthy, ex-policeman — and from that moment your head goes forward a little, your eyes begin to grow brighter and brighter, and you subconsciously thank the gods for such a story as this. It is a tale that treads on tip-toe in the dark —expectant eager, probing, probing, probing for the very heart of things that are hidden from view.

IF YOU ENJOY A DETECTIVE STORY, DON'T MISS THIS.

93RD OFFICERS HOME ON LEAVE FROM FIRING LINE

Capt. E. R. Hughes Who Won the Military Cross For Gallantry in the Field and Capt. Thompson of Hastings Are In City

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Two officers of the old 93rd Battalion were in the city to-day renewing old acquaintances, in the persons of Capt. E. R. Hughes, of Bowmanville, and Capt. Thomson, of Hastings.

Capt. Hughes, who was wounded some time ago, and is home on a short leave, left Peterborough as a Lieutenant in command of the Apsley Platoon, D Company, of the 93rd Battalion. Before the war he was an officer of the 3rd Prince of Wales' Dragoons. After going overseas with the 93rd he was transferred to the 1st Battalion in France. Since going to the front, he has had the brilliant and successful record that his friends had expected of him, winning the Military Cross for gallantry in action, and also being promoted to Captain.

Capt. Thomson was second in command of D Company of the 93rd Battalion, when he went overseas. He reverted to the rank of Lieutenant to go to France with the 21st Battalion, and is now home on leave for a month. Captain Thomson lives in Hastings.

WITH THE DRAFTEES.

E Company of the 1st E. O. R. at the Armouries has now a strength of 100 officers and men. A draft forty-five strong arrived last evening via C. P. R. from Kingston. The train was three hours late, and they did not reach Peterborough until 7 o'clock. They immediately marched to the Armouries, where supper was waiting them.

There are no drafts scheduled to arrive to-day. The new soldiers are hard at work learning the mysteries of squad drill, saluting, etc., and will be initiated in bayonet fighting, a Sergeant-Instructor having arrived from Kingston.

CLOSING SERVICE OF THE WEEK OF PRAYER TO-NIGHT

The closing service of the week of prayer will be held this evening at St. Andrew's Church, and once more all the churches of Peterborough will unite. Last evening St. John's Church was practically full, and a most inspiring and helpful service was held. Canon Davidson was assisted in the service by Rev. R. B. Grobb, Rev. Robert Pogue, Rev. Dugald Brown and Rev. Mr. Wharram.

The people are reminded that the only offering of the week will be received to-night. This will be used for the expenses incurred.

Town Planning In Peterborough

Mr. Thomas Adams Will Visit Peterborough on January the 18th —Town Planning

Peterborough is like Topsy—it has just "growed up." So have most Canadian cities and towns. In the development of the land on which the town is built the chief consideration should have been how to secure the healthiest conditions for the citizens at the least cost, and how to produce the greatest efficiency for carrying on industry. To get these things would have meant that the land speculators would not have had such an easy time, and that some plan for the city should have been prepared in which proper regard was paid to economy and natural features. In cities want of planning leads to some streets being too wide and some too narrow, to steep grades, to want of directness of route, and to wasteful paving. It also means bad sanitation, vacant lots, and a high tax rate.

When conservation of human life and development of human skill is the greatest need in Canada, more attention should be given to health in Peterborough and all Canadian cities; but we cannot afford to remedy unhealthy conditions once they become established. The only sound and economic method is to prevent bad conditions by proper planning.

It is not too late to plan the extension of Peterborough, although comparatively little can be done to alter what is already built up. But Peterborough will grow in the future; and it will grow faster if the lines of growth are laid down in a satisfactory manner so as to encourage new industries and give them the most efficient services and good housing for the workers.

The question of the development of Peterborough and other Canadian cities is being dealt with at a lecture to be given by Mr. Thomas Adams, Town Planning Adviser of the Commission of Conservation, on the 18th of January. The proper development of town is just as important a war measure as the settlement of agricultural land—and production in Canada needs to be stimulated in the town as well as in the country.

At first it was arranged to have Mr. Adams visit Peterborough on 17th January, but Mr. Adams will not be able to come until the day following. A conference will be held at the Empress Hotel, to which the public and all public bodies will be invited, including the Horticultural Society, the City Council, and others.

Bank Manager Is Found Dead

Canadian Press Despatch:

GANANOQUE, Jan. 11.—V. S. Ketchum, the well known and popular manager of the Bank of Toronto here for nearly thirty years, was found dead in bed this morning by some of his household, who became alarmed at his failure to appear. He was a son of the late Judge Ketchum, of Cobourg and held many public offices in this town.

The Huns Will Not Stop Fighting Until They Are Made—See That Militarism and War Does Not Pay—No Chance of a Revolution

HINDENBURG IDOLIZED

NOTE — Frederick William Wile, former Berlin correspondent of the London Daily Mail, is regarded as the best informed British journalist on inside conditions in Germany. He went originally to Europe as correspondent for several American newspapers, and is an authority on "men around the Kaiser."

(By Frederick William Wile.)

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Jan. 11.—We still shrink from facing the facts regarding Germany. We prefer comforting theories to disagreeable actualities. This is convenient, but it is not war.

Through Dutch, Swiss and Scandinavian channels, which serve as the filters for alleged news, Germany would like to have the world believe we again hear the old familiar word, "crisis"—political "crisis," food "crisis," etc., etc. In view of our inclination to make the wish father to our thoughts, let me present in tabloid the elements, personal or otherwise, of these "crisis."

Hindenburg is the supreme dictator of Germany. Ludendorff is the actual generalissimo under Hindenburg, whose popularity is now so great that practically anything can be accomplished by invoking it. The Kaiser has never been so much in the hands of military despots as he is to-day. He is emperor no longer by divine right—but by grace of the great god, Hindenburg.

HINDENBURG THE BOSS.

The Crown Prince is a thick and thin supporter of Hindenburgism. Chancellor Hurtling is Hindenburg's political manager. Foreign Secretary Kuehlmann is permitted to do only what is ordered. His Brest-Litovsk tactics, far from irritating Hindenburg, were dictated by him—and are alterable if and when Hindenburg decides it is necessary. Kuehlmann will go or stay, according to Hindenburg's pleasure. The Reichstag to-day is precisely what Bismarck founded 47 years ago—merely an imperial debating society, where the people's representatives blow off steam and can call the government names without police interference. Its only vestige of power is in voting of funds—which duty it has performed dutifully. The only untamed independent Socialists number 22 out of a total membership of 397 in the Reichstag, and they are the only ones who ever oppose war credits. The government haggles with Reichstag party leaders merely for the purpose of saving itself trouble.

The food situation was probably never so bad—but it is not critical to the breaking point. Regularly near the middle of the winter comes the "starvation" theory out of Germany. The coal shortage has undoubtedly been aggravated, but the way the Germans have stuck it out so far, indicates they will survive the present winter discontent.

WAR WEARY ARMY.

"The German army is unquestionably war tired. The German nation is war-weary—but this applies also to others. There is probably no more popular growling in Germany than here. Munitions trains continue to roll to the west, and Germany is making aeroplanes, submarines and shells at a rate hitherto unequalled. Two or three million prisoners are all making munitions in one form or another. As to the possibility of a revolution, Heine, the keenest student of Prussian psychology once remarked that "revolutions in Germany were impossible because verboten." That is cynical—but it is literally true. The machine gun awaits every German with revolution in his heart. Liebknecht, the only Prussian who would ever lead a revolution, is now in penal servitude. The Germans won't stop fighting until we make them see that militarism and war does not pay. That is, when we are able to impose peace on a defeated German army and navy.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, JANUARY 11, 1918

FORTUNATE PETERBOROUGH.

We people in Peterborough may think we have our troubles, as we have; but in some respects we are fortunate, that is, comparatively fortunate. We have a little coal trouble. Other cities and towns have a coal famine, and are compelled to close schools and churches, and shiver in unheated homes for lack of coal supply. In this respect, Peterborough in unheated houses, from lack of coal situation is quite serious enough; but, thanks to our city authorities, and our dealers, we are not half as badly situated in this respect as many other places.

Many places, Guelph, Galt, Tillsonburg, etc., have street car traffic shut off, owing to insufficiency of electric supply, or factories have to close down for the same cause. Fortunately, we in Peterborough have plenty of electricity for our purposes—the advantage of having it of our own local production. There are few places so fortunate as Peterborough in respect of electrical energy. We have plenty of developed power, and what is very important, undeveloped but conveniently located resources, at points on the river between here and Lakefield; and at Burleigh Falls we have a large source of potential energy only waiting to be developed for our use. It is sometimes asked why the power at Burleigh is not turned into electricity and made available for use in Peterborough for domestic purposes, heating and cooking. Lack of money means is perhaps the chief cause, and access to fairly adequate local sources of supply is doubtless a modifying cause.

The 50,000 additional horse power of electrical energy to be developed by the Hydro Commission, will do the work, and incidentally save the use of a great many tons of coal.

RE BACON AND FUEL.

We had a good many rumours of contemplated government action during the election, which were evidently floatd for political effect, for little has been heard of them since. Among these was the suggestion that the government contemplated taking over the control and operation of the packing houses, and all packing house activities. This pseudo promise appealed strongly to the popular mind, in view of the high prices of packing house products, and of the popular belief that largely obtains, to the effect that governments can do almost anything, and that they were equal to the miracle of lowering prices—by doing as a government, packing at a lower cost than well organized private enterprise.

It is not at all probable that the government will go into the packing business. Mr. C. S. Blackwell, of the Matthews-Blackwell Company, tells the Financial Post that such action is highly improbable, since the government has limited the packing houses to the smallest possible minimum in the matter of profits, and could not manufacture food products more cheaply than the companies themselves.

It appears that we shall have to stand the high prices, which are due, not altogether to the greed of food producers and profiteers, though they might tighten the hold, but to general conditions produced and induced by the war. There are many things the government can do that is not being done, or not done well, by private enterprises, such as undertaking systematic measures of increasing growth of food; and utilizing by some larger and systematic means our sources of fuel supply, wood, coal, peat, electricity, etc.

In this connection it is to be pointed out, that, though electricity is not available in the matter of price, as a direct source of heating it can be made to do so indirectly. In 1911, the railways of Canada used nearly nine million tons of coal. If our railways were electrified or partially electrified, the saving of coal would be great, and, added to the more extensive use of electricity in manufacturing industries, the question of the fuller development of our water powers to produce electricity, to increase use of electricity as means of saving of coal, is important. The Hydro-Electric increase of 5,000 horse power from the Chippawa-Niagara extension, is estimated to be equivalent to the saving of millions of dollars in coal.

Premier Lloyd-George and President Wilson reach virtually the same result by different lines of talk—in both cases using words that fight the causes of the allies.

A SPUR TO ACTION.

We have all sorts of disadvantages and hardships, through food scarcity, coal scarcity, high prices, and a general disturbance of our commercial, domestic and individual livnig. We have the flower of our population withdrawn from the activities of peaceful production, and suffering hardships, wounds, and even death. We consider all these things "hard lines," but we are willing to endure them all and more—for cause. Our nerves stiffen, our muscles harden, and our determination strengthens, when we read of the Huns deliberately torpedoing a hospital ship. We must bear all things, we have borne and are bearing in order to maintain the fight that is to put an end to the power to do such diabolical things as sink hospital ships, shell land hospitals and Red Cross stations, not to speak of the bombing of peaceful cities, and the murder of women and children, nor of the endless list of outrages that Germany, through her militarist masters is committing from day to day.

All this must be ended; and we in Canada must help to end it; we must continue to sacrifice, practice self-denial, contribute, work and put forth every effort to support with food and raiment and comforts those who are fighting, or going forth to fight with arms. Civilization — humanity — is menaced in its highest interests and civilization and humanity must unite, must present an unbroken front; sustain unresting endeavour, show, in deed, unfaltering courage.

The government will receive general credit and support in its declared policy of shipbuilding in Canada.

BE GOOD TO THE BIRDS.

It is estimated that, expressed in terms of wheat, the field crops destroyed last year in Canada, amount to a total sufficient to feed our entire population for a year. Men and governments cannot deal effectively with these pests; and they get abundant help from our insectivorous birds. But for the birds, and their continuous campaign against our insect enemies, the latter could not be kept down; so that it comes to this, if the entire bird life of the country were destroyed, insect pests would destroy all our field and orchard crops, and starvation would follow.

It is, therefore, obvious that the duty of governments, and men, women and children, is to foster and protect our bird life, as absolutely essential to the protection and preservation of our food crops. When we see, as we do in towns, cats killing birds by the hundreds in a season, we may reasonably speculate as to the value or injury to the community and country, of cats and boys with catapults operating, killing, destroying bird life from one end of the Dominion to the other.

If as many fatal casualties befell infantry in training as befall flying cadets in proportion to numbers, we should be a long time in getting one hundred thousand to the front line.

RIGHTS AND DUTIES.

It is almost hopeless to expect things ever coming right in this world. Take, for instance, representative institutions. Barrels of ink, whole atmosphere of oratory, and some blood, have been spilt to give us parliamentary institutions practically condensable into the right to vote.

Do we value what has been so hardly fought for. In almost every parliamentary and municipal election, only a fraction—not much more than half—of the electors exercises the franchise, so that hardly any question is decided by a full vote of the electorate. Those persons who neglect to exercise their franchise would very properly raise a great outcry if they were deprived of th right too vote; if their names were lofs off the voters' list, or they were disfranchised by an iniquitous act of parliament, as thousands of good Canadian citizens of alien origin were treated by the last parliament. But in thousands of cases what harm would disfranchisement do—when electors do not use their franchise rights? We, however, still cling to, and gloat over, our representative institutions—glory in the right of universal suffrage, which is not universal, because it is not universally exercised.

Not only is there failure to use the ballot by a very respectful minority—sometimes a majority—of electors, but many of those who use the ballot do not do so intelligently or from conviction. There is reason to inquire, what is the proportion of the electors who do not think what they are voting about; do not cast their votes as the result of thinking and as the expression of a matured judgment upon the issue or issues they are helping to decide. They vote as they do—or as they are told—because they are virtually stampeded by some irrelevant sentiment, some side issue into which passion and prejudice enter more largely than principle.

The food situation in Great Britain must be acute when Lord Rhondda speaks of the approaching necessity of putting the people on rations— only the more reason we should save foods for export.

ROMANTIC AND BUSINESS ASPECTS OF BRITISH COLUMBIA SALMON FISHING INTERESTS

British Columbia salmon is a staple product the world over. The superior quality of the sockeye salmon, especially, has created a market for them wherever there is a demand for canned fish. This world-wide reputation has naturally led to an extensive exploitation of the fishery, and in spite of a measure of restrictive legislation and artificial propagation, there has been a steady decline in the catch during the past twenty years. This is especially true of the Fraser River fishery. The international character of the stream has made it impossible, up to the present, to secure adequate restrictions and regulations.

As is well known, the life history of the sockeye salmon extends over a period of four years, and each year the fish that were spawned in the upper waters of the Pacific Coast rivers four years before, come in from the sea to deposit their spawn in turn, and then die. It is during these seasons of inward migration that the fishermen gather their harvests. One of the strange and romantic features of these migrations is that every fourth year the run of fish is many times larger than during any of the three years preceding or following it. This phenomenon has occurred so regularly that it is commonly spoken of as "the run of the big year." The explanation most generally accepted is that at some period, before the advent of the white man, the fish were overtaken by some disease, or other spawning, which either prevented spawning or destroyed much of the spawn during a period of three years. As if to confirm this theory, the enormous rock slide in the Fraser in 1913—a big year—which prevented the salmon getting up the river to spawn, caused a tremendous falling off in the catch of 1917. Thus, in 1913, 2,491,488 cases were packed by Fraser river canners, while a close estimate of the total pack of 1917 is only 429,000 cases, or only about 18 per cent. of the pack of 1913. Such a decline is a calamitous one and only the most carefully enforced restrictions over a period of years can restore or even save, the fishery.

At the Ninth Annual Meeting of the Commission of Conservation, Mr. J. P. Babcock, Assistant Commissioner of Fisheries, British Columbia, said:

"The history of the fishing in the Fraser River district in the past 14 years, is a record of depletion—a record of excessive fishing in the lean years; a record of failure on the part of the authorities of the State of Washington to realise the necessity of conserving a great fishery, notwithstanding the convincing evidence submitted to them by agents of their own creation that disaster was impending to one of their great industries.

"The Canadian authorities, on the other hand, have, by their representations and acts, evinced, in unmistakable manner, their willingness to deal squarely and adequately with conditions that forestall depletion, and to join with the State of Washington or the United States Government in legislation to prevent it."

If this can be done there should be no reason why in the course of time "every year should not be a big year." On the other hand a continuance of the present wasteful methods of fishing, especially by American fishermen, can only result in the complete depletion of this valuable fishery.—Conservation.

TURNERS' MOTOR TRUCK PRESSED INTO SERVICE TO DELIVER COAL

The police filled most of the emergent orders for coal from the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Company's yards on Wednesday, and are receiving every assistance from that company. Only a few tons of the "mine run" coal remained yesterday, but while it lasted it kept many a fire burning.

The co-operation Chief Thompson has received from citizens who had the facilities required to meet the crisis was exemplified yesterday when Mr. Achilles Turner became a coal delivery man for a few hours. Late in the afternoon the Chief was faced with a number of orders he was anxious to send out, but every vehicle the city could muster had already been commandeered. Even the big truck of the Utilities Commission was flitting around the city doing its bit. An inspiration suggested to the Chief to ask the J. J. Turner Company for the use of their big truck, and it was immediately put into commission for the city. Mr. Turner and Detective Meagher climbed aboard, and by 5:30 o'clock the last of the orders had been delivered. It is safe to say that some citizens received coal who might otherwise have had to wait until to-day.

H. B. Taylor & Son have also materially helped the Police Department, and the smoothness with which this phase of the work has been carried out is due to the cordial assistance Chief Thompson has received on every hand.

EVERY CITIZEN A FUEL CONTROLLER

Every citizen who is short of coal is a self-appointed fuel controller these days. One of them, a resident of the south end within sight of the G.T.R. "storage" of Romaine street, noticed seven cars of coal the "moonlight" had dropped there until they were delivered to the local consignees. This particular controller probably imagined that here was a promise of replenishing his coal bin, but his enquiries brought the disappointment that six of the cars were steam coal and only one was anthracite.

Application To Parliament

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that an application will be made by the Corporation of the City of Peterborough to the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario, at the next session thereof for an Act for the following purposes:

1. TO PROVIDE that in the first election of members of the Council by the general vote of the electorate of the City of Peterborough the six candidates receiving the highest number of votes shall be elected for two years, and that in every annual Municipal election each elector must vote for at least four candidates for the City Council.

2. TO CONFIRM By-law Number 2045, being a By-law entitled, "A By-law to authorise the borrowing of $250,000.00 "by the issue of debentures, to construct a high level bridge over the Otonabee "River at Hunter Street, and a bridge "across the Otonabee River at or near "London Street, to at or near Hadley "street," and to provide for the amendment of said By-law that debentures may be issued thereunder for thirty years instead of twenty years, as provided in said By-law, and to carry out such amendment and variation in said By-law.

3. TO AUTHORIZE the said Corporation and the Peterborough City Trust Commissioners, (a) to apply any surplus which may arise in the general administration of the City's sinking fund as a whole, after full and adequate provision has been made for the individual sinking fund of all debenture debts, as required by by-laws, constituting them, towards the creation, addition to, and maintenance of sinking funds for the purpose of providing for the payment in full as they mature, of these debenture debts of the Corporation which do not now provide for sinking funds, or which only provide for partial sinking funds; (b) instead of investing separately the annual sinking fund levy, in respect of any particular debenture debt, or the interest arising from the investments in the sinking fund applicable to any such debt, to invest from time to time the whole or any part of the sinking fund moneys which may be on hand in such amounts as may be deemed desirable, provided that a return shall be made by the City as at the 31st December in each year, showing the exact amount that should be accumulated as a sinking fund for each individual debt, in accordance with the terms of the By-laws constituting such debt, and the aggregate of the securities held applicable to the sinking fund as a whole; (c) and to transfer to the sinking fund from time to time, the unrequired balance of any loan which may have been secured through the issue of debentures, also any other moneys which may from time to time be received by the Corporation in the realisation of real estate or other permanent assets.

4. TO PROVIDE that any member of the Peterborough City Trust who absents himself from three consecutive meetings of the said City Trust, without leave being granted to him, or being authorized to so absent himself by resolution of the said City Trust, shall thereby vacate his position as a member of the said City Trust, and cease to be a member of said City Trust, and that the other members of the said City Trust may then appoint in the place and stead of the said member, whose position is vacated, a new member, who shall hold office during the unexpired period of time for which the said member vacating his office was appointed.

5. THAT Chapter 101 of the Ontario Statutes, 1908, be amended to permit the said City Trust to expend any monies in its hands not required for immediate use, in the alteration or reconstruction of buildings owned by the said City Trust or in rebuilding the same or for any other purpose mentioned in the Act set forth in Chapter 504 aforesaid.

6. The amount of the rateable property of the Municipality is the sum of $11,264,115, and the existing debenture debt, exclusive of local improvement debts payable by local special rates, is the sum of $2,099,055.34, of which the following are the particulars: Waterworks, $616,000.00; electrical lighting and power plant $220,000.00; local improvements, $349,280.29; public schools, $253,650.00; Collegiate Institute, $72,021.05; Protestant Home, $10,000.00; general city debentures, $554,100.00.

DATED at Peterborough this 30th day of January, 1918.

No Canvass At Present For Belgian Fund

Citizens However Are Asked to Realize the Needs of the Work

A regularly-called meeting of the Belgian Relief Committee was held at the Patriotic Rooms on Wednesday afternoon, Mr. Robert Harstone presiding. On motion, it was decided that the affairs of the committee in so far as related to the canvass of 1916 be wound up, and that the balance in the treasurer's hands, $436.90, be remitted to the Central Committee at Montreal.

The following resolution was also passed:

While the committee feels that the present is not an opportune time for a public canvass, it is hoped that many will recognise the continued necessity for generous contributions to this worthy fund. No individuals are authorised to canvass or receive subscriptions, but the bank managers of the city have kindly consented to receive subscriptions, which will be acknowledged from time to time in the press.

Four Local Boys With The Aviation Corps

The following from a Calgary paper refers to two well-known former local boys, Messrs. Frank and Ab. Donnelly:

"Life in the aviation corps of the Canadian Army is making a strong bid for the best athletes in the country, and the latest departures from this city to join this branch of the service are Frank and Ab. Donnelly, two well-known characters in baseball circles. The brothers made up a battery on the Cub ball team two years ago, and they have always made friends with the fans in Calgary. Both boys left for the East on Wednesday to sign up, and sport followers of the city will gladly go hand in hand in extending to the Donnelly brothers their best wishes for success in the service and a safe return from the war."

Another Donnelly boy, formerly of the wholesale firm of Donnelly, Watson & Brown, joined the Army in the early stages of the war, and was killed in action about a year ago.

Inadequate Hotel Accommodation And Railway Service Reasons For No Open Bonspiel This Winter

Lack of hotel accommodation, crippled railway service and general war conditions influenced the members of the Curling Club in deciding last night not to hold an open bonspiel here this season. The Club was reluctant to cancel the biggest feature of the winter, but in view of the difficulties that were emphasized in the discussion the curlers were of the unanimous opinion that the wisest counsel was to dispense with the big open bonspiel this year. The train service has been so reduced that it was felt the visitors would experience delays in their connections. Usually the bonspiel attracts over one hundred visitors, who, it was stated, would have great difficulty in securing hotel accommodation. And lastly, the Club was moved by war effects that subdued the high spirits that characterized the games in the pre-war days.

Good Local Bonspiel.

The local bonspiel will probably be the feature of the season. It will probably be made more attractive than heretofore in view of the withdrawal of the open competition. The following committee was appointed to make the arrangements: Messrs. R. M. Waddell, T. Brightman, D. Davidson, H. Foote and G. H. Giroux.

CERTIFICATE OF HONOUR PLAN PLEASES VETERANS

In the little corridor circles of wheel chair patients in the military convalescent hospital of Toronto, where many men from all sections of Canada requiring special treatment are being cared for by the Military Hospitals Commission, gossip gives an interesting hint to many municipalities eager to recognize the valuor of their men who have fought in France.

Brantford, Ontario, has hit upon a plan which pleases the men and might easily be followed by other cities with great satisfaction to the veterans who would like some tangible evidence to hand down to their children and grandchildren that they did their bit in the Great War. Some men have medals and special tokens of recognition, but none knows better than the returned men themselves how many brave deeds have been done under the cover or darkness or isolation and never came to official notice.

Certificate of Honour.

The citizens of Brantford have prepared a "Certificate of Honour", which is presented to every Brantford man who returns from the front. It is engraved on substantial paper, beautifully decorated with heraldic designs and the flags of the allies and inscribed in the following manner:

"Presented to ....., by the municipal corporation of Brantford, in grateful recognition of services rendered to Canada and the Empire by participation in the struggle for freedom and justice, as a member of Canada's Expeditionary Forces. Signed and sealed this day ..... by the Mayor of the City, etc. etc."

At the bottom of the certificate are printed the following lines by the Indian poet, E. Pauline Johnson:

"Few of you have the blood of kings,
"And few are of courtly birth,
"But none are vagabonds or rogues
"Of doubtful name and worth.
"And each has one credential,
Which entitles him to brag,
"You fought for Right and Canada
"And upheld the British Flag."

Crews Were Not Responsible

(Canadian Press)

MONTREAL, Jan. 11.—That the block signal system was not altogether reliable and might have been deranged by particles of frost, was the decision arrived at this morning by the Coroner's Jury investigating the wreck at Dorval, when several Vancouver soldiers were killed. The crews of the trains, the jury said, were not responsible for the wreck.

Paper dipped in paraffin and rolled will serve to heat soup or coffee while camping.

Elsa Ryan in "Out There" coming to "The Grand" next Monday, January 14. What the New York press say:—

Journal—"Out There" makes a tremendous appeal to the better side of humanity."

Times—"There is more that is good and true and appealing in "Out There" than in any other play the great war has brought to our stage."

American—"Out There" is one of the most genuinely effective plays that New York has ever seen."

Globe—"In "Out There" Manners has done the best work of his life. Nothing happens but reality."

World—"Out There" grips its audience and holds it in its spell."

Sun—"There has not been any first-night audience this season which has been so moved to tears and laughter and back again to tears and then such spontaneous and vociferous expressions of pleasure."

BED-TIRED MEN FIND RECREATION IN WORK

In the Montreal General Hospital, the Royal Victoria Hospital, and the Grey Nunnery there are about 150 soldiers confined to bed, but the days are not too dreary for most of them, for thanks to the vocational training branch of the Military Hospitals Commission these men are learning all kinds of work, such as basket making, weaving, embroidery and candle making; the instructors are the ladies of the vocational training staff, who visit the military wards every morning. Basket-making is very popular with the men, and in surprisingly short time they learn to make pretty and useful articles—fern pots and little traps, for instance. Simple as these objects appear, it requires patience to twist the obstinate reed, and to make the weaving look neat and regular, and patience is not an easy virtue for a convalescent.

In one ward at the Grey Nunnery there are a hundred and twenty men who are very sick, but in spite of this a part of each day is devoted to lessons in basket-making and weaving. Mr. F. Robert and Mr. F. H. Spinney, from the Alexandra School and Corporal Le Grove are the teachers of this class, and their work is much appreciated by the medical.

Making Beads.

Fashioning necklaces out of coloured paper and glass beads is a favourite occupation at the hospitals, and the amateur jewellers are real artists in their choice of form and colour. They make long shell-like beads out of coloured paper, magazine covers generally. They cut this up into cone-shaped strips, which they roll tightly round a hat pin—later the men shellac the beads and this gives them almost a china effect. The soldier patients have become experts at this work and very artistic results have been achieved. One soldier in the Grey Nunnery became so adept that he made nine necklaces in a day.

Maimed Soldier Leads In Draughting Class

Private Wm. Allen, who enlisted with the 65th Battalion at Prince Albert, and who lost an arm while with the Canadians in France, has demonstrated what a disabled soldier can do in the way of re-educating himself through the opportunities offered by the Military Hospitals Commission.

Private Allen, on returning to Canada, spent some months in a military convalescent hospital receiving treatment to his amputated right arm. When discharged from the hospital he came back to Saskatchewan and on November 1 entered the University of Saskatchewan taking the associate course, the course taken by farmers' sons, which comprises agriculture and draughting.

First in Class.

Out of a class of over 40, Private Allen came first in the draughting section and took high marks in agriculture, this despite the fact that he had to educate his left hand to do what his right hand did before the before.

He has clearly demonstrated what a disabled soldier can do by applying himself to study. A great deal of credit is due to Dean Rutherford and Professor Greif of the university, who have spared no pains in re-educating the soldiers, and also to Sergeant F. M. Riches, vocational officer, who keeps a friendly eye on all men taking the courses.

Takes Stock Judging Prizes.

At the recent stock judging competition at the winter fair at Saskatoon Private Allen took a prize for stock judging, and is known as one of the best judges of stock around the university.

When he works at draughting he keeps his papers in position by using a bag of shot attached to the stub of his right arm, which was cut eight inches from the shoulder.

RETURNED MEN OPERATE GOVERNMENT TRACTORS

Returned soldiers trained as expert operators by the instructors in the vocational training centres of the Military Hospitals Commission, will run the Government tractors on the farms of Ontario next year.

There will be 130 tractors in operation next spring, and men who have done their bit overseas will get the first call providing they have secured the proper training. The course offered by the Commission to the men whose disabilities, incurred in military service, make it necessary for them to learn a new occupation, requires from six to eight months and has been particularly attractive to men who formerly were farmers.

Courses are under way at London, Whitby and Kingston, and 60 tractors have been sent to these centres by the Ontario Department of Agriculture to be overhauled. This action on the part of the provincial government is a boon to the training centres, for while crippled motor cars are fairly easily to secure for practice work in the motor mechanics' course, tractors ran at a premium.

NEW MEMBERS ON EDUCATION BOARD

MR. J. M. GREENE.

One of the new faces on the Board of Education this year is that of Mr. J. M. Greene, the energetic manager of the Greene Music Company, whose return with the highest vote given to any of the new members, shows the high opinion in which he is held by the ratepayers.

Mr. Greene is bound to be a valuable man on the Board, and one whose coming will be welcomed by the older members as one from whom they can expect intelligent assistance. At the present time, when the Board is losing three well tried, strong and valued old members, the newer men will get a more direct introduction to their important work, with fewer of the well-trained older men to father their efforts, and gradually bring them into the harness, as may have been the case hitherto. Under these conditions, Mr. Greene's business training in managing a business that constantly involves the handling of big questions, will stand him in good stead.

The Greene Music Company began in a very small way just thirteen years ago. Its success has been steady and continuous, growing from rented quarters in the Opera House Block to its present permanent home in its own building on Charlotte Street. This store is now the headquarters for four other prosperous branches in Kingston, Lindsay, Belleville, and Madoc, and the combined business passing through the company's hands is of such volume that it ranks among the largest retail concerns of the city.

All of this very satisfactory result is entirely due to the keen, business capacity and instinct of our new Board of Education member-elect, Mr. Greene, on whose entry into the conduct of civic affairs on its largest spending Board, the city has indeed something to congratulate itself.

MR. J. W. WORTH.

Mr. J. W. Worth, a new addition to the Board of Education, made his debut at the inaugural meeting held last evening. Mr. Worth has a very ambitious programme, and among other things, will endeavour to promote the textile end of the technical school question. Furthermore, Mr. Worth is convinced that the School Board should exercise closer supervision over the pupils during the extended holiday periods so as to perpetuate the discipline that is instilled during the school periods of the year. In some cases the careful training is often lost during the mid-summer holiday period when the pupil is removed from the restraining influence of the teacher. As a means to this end Mr. Worth suggests that the School Board assume responsibility for the maintenance and operation of the supervised playgrounds, and an effort made to keep the playgrounds open during the spring, summer and fall months, instead of closing them down at the end of the summer holiday period, when the children return to school.

Mr. Worth is a graduate of the Bradford Technical College, England, and is also a member of the Canadian Textile Institute. When the Standing Committees of the Board of Education were appointed last evening, Mr. Worth was disappointed to learn that he had been left off the Advisory Commercial Committee. The former committee is in close touch with the matter of technical education. Mr. Worth is particularly qualified to deal with problems pertaining to technical training, and this is one of the chief reasons why he sought a place on the School Board. In any capacity Mr. Worth will fill an important place on the Board, where his valuable and successful business experience will find ample scope.

MR. E. G. PATTERSON.

A newcomer to the Board of Education this year, but yet a familiar figure in many circles in Peterborough, is Mr. E. G. Patterson, one of the quartette of new candidates whom the ratepayers endorsed on election day. It seems hardly necessary to say that Mr. Patterson is general superintendent of the Canadian General Electric Works. His record at the head of this huge industry augurs well for his career on the Board of Education. His experience should make him invaluable in view of the possibility of an advanced programme in technical training. This is the first occasion upon which Mr. Patterson has been persuaded to offer himself as a candidate for public office, and the large vote that he received in such a splendid field, shows that the public appreciate what he has accomplished in his own profession and realize that the qualities he has shown there will make him a most useful member of Peterborough's Board of Education.

MR. G. O. CAMERON.

Mr. G. O. Cameron's executive experience as manager of the Peterborough office of the Bell Telephone Company should be an asset to the Board of Education. The enthusiasm that impels his educational ideals will not blind him to the war-time financial restrictions which, it is felt, must restrain the desires and curtail the plans of the Board in meeting the pressing problems and progressive programme that are demanding initiative and action.

In his business contacts, Mr. Cameron has revealed broad sympathies, a sense of proportion, a keen and quick comprehension, general qualities, in brief, which should ensure successful service with the Board of Education.

Women Heard Men Screaming

First Warning of the Boston Cafe Fire—Fires Were Well Handled

To Mrs. A. Rowe and Mrs. W. Rowe, who reside over B. Shortly's store, 371 George street, is conceded the credit of first notifying the fire department of the fire at the Boston Cafe. The two ladies heard the men in the burning building screaming for help. They ran downstairs in their night attire and turned in the alarm from the box at the corner after which they notified the Police Department.

Considerable comment has been made regarding the able and efficient manner in which Fire Chief Grange and his men handled the fire at the Boston Cafe, also at the Peterborough Canoe Factory on Sunday morning last. The property loss was minimized as a result of the skillful handling of the two fires. It is a matter of regret to the Chief and his men that they were unable to locate yesterday's victim of the fire in time to save his life. At the Boston Cafe fire streams of water were directed on the walls of the LeBrun Clothing store and the T. C. Elliott drygoods store in such a manner as to confine the fire within very narrow limits.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE MEDICAL HEALTH OFFICER

Dr. C. H. Amys Deals in Detail with the Work Accomplished By the Board of Health—Several Valuable Suggestions

Dr. C. H. Amys' Medical Officer of Health, presented the appended annual report to the Board of Health. The report is full of interest and deals in detail with the work of the department during the past year.

To the Chairman and Members of the Peterborough Board of Health, Peterborough:

Gentlemen,—I beg to present to you my report upon the sanitary condition of the Municipality.

During the ten and a half months past we have been blessed with a freedom from any serious epidemic, as the reports on the following will indicate:

Measles—We placarded 314 houses; this represented about 600 cases in all—4 deaths.

This epidemic commenced on November 27th, 1918, and, in spite of cases being promptly reported and isolation enforced, it spread all over the city in a few days.

The general opinion among medical men is that the quarantine for measles is too long, and I trust we will see a change in the near future.

Typhoid Fever—4 cases, 3 deaths. On September 1st, was the last case. Three or all of these cases came from out of town, or had been visiting out of town. It might be well for me to state that with two large hospitals and several public institutions in our midst, inhabited by what might be called a floating population, it is a marvel that we have been free during the last year, of any serious epidemic.

Typhoid is a water-borne disease, and I would advise the Board to take immediate steps to better our domestic ice supply. If we continue to use in the house as at restaurants, ice cut from the Little Lake we are certainly courting disaster.

Scarlet Fever—9 cases, 0 deaths. April 19th gave birth to the last case. Several of these came from one institution where there was quite an outbreak towards the close of last year.

Diptheria—45 cases, 4 deaths. On October 11th was our last case.

The School Nurse's work, coupled with rigid isolation (hospital treatment) was, I consider, the chief factor in eliminating this dread disease from our midst.

You will agree with me when I say, that, as the schol nurse's work is chiefly, if not entirely, to do with public health, she should be employed by the Board of Health. We would then extend her work to the Separate schools and Collegiate Institute and Normal school; and when if necessary give her an assisant. I trust you will take this matter up with the School Board and Council before next year.

Tuberculosis—No cases reported as required by law. 15 deaths recorded.

Smallpox—No cases.

Chicken pox—3 cases. This disease is not reported as required by law.

Erysipelas—3 cases; deaths, 0.

Whooping cough—3 case; deaths, 1.

Cerebro-Spinal Meningitis—3 cases; deaths, 2.

We had, I believe, only one case of the epidemic type during the year.

Infantile paralysis—No cases.

Before closing I wish to touch on the night soil problem, which is, I believe, causing our City Fathers a certain amount of thought and trouble. There is an axiom, "Tax anything and everything you want to get of. Tax it, I say, and have no scruples about it, because almost every house in Peterborough has sewer and water at its door. These houses should be connected up and every man, rich or poor, should know he is not taking the full advantage of this city's blessings, if he fails to connect up. Sewer connection will make his property more valuable, give him more space in the house an dreduce his fuel bill, and his neighbours purer air, less flies, fewer doctors' bills and a healthier and happier wife and family.

Thanking you, gentlemen, I am,

Your obedient servant,

Medical Officer of Health.

Board Of Education Adopts The Estimates For The Current Year

The City Council Will Be Asked to Pay $111,600.00 For the Maintenance of Peterboro's Educational Facilities—A Big Increase—Standing Committees Appointed—General Business

THE INAUGURAL MEETING

At the inaugural meeting of the Board of Education held last evening Mr. V. Eastwood was re-elected chairman of the Board for the current year. Mr. Eastwood thanked the members for their renewal of confidence and incidentally referred to ah retiring members which include Messrs. W. H. Hill, J. Crane, J. W. Miller; also the late Dr. George Burnham.

"Dr. Burnham was a valuable acquisition to the Board, and his passing is greatly deplored," said Mr. Eastwood. Messrs. Hill, Crane and Miller rendered efficient service for many years and the present high standard of Peterborough's educational system is largely due to their unselfish devotion to the work of the Board. In the matter of increased school accommodation, Mr. Eastwood said that the Board might be obliged to rent class accommodation rather than ask the city to issue bonds for new buildings under present unsettled conditions. Technical education is a matter that will come to the attention of the Board during the year, and Mr. Eastwood asked the members to give this important matter careful consideration.

Referring to the estimates, which are over seventeen thousand dollars higher than last year, Mr. Eastwood said that the increase was mainly due to salary increases and the high price of fuel.

"Economy of time and strict attention to the business of the Board are very desirable attributes," observed Mr. Eastwood, in conclusion.

COMMITTEES APPOINTED.

The following committees were appointed:

Finance Committee—G. N. Gordon, chairman; T. B. McGrath, E. G. Patterson and R. Denne.

Property Committee—A. A. Fowler, chairman; Dr. F. C. Neal, J. W. Worth and J. M. Greene.

Supervision Committee—Dr. F. C. Neal, chairman; A. A. Fowler, G. O. Cameron and E. G. Patterson.

Committee on Appointments — R. Denne, chairman;; J. M. Greene, E. G. Patterson, Dr. F. C. Neal, G. O. Cameron, V. Eastwood, G. N. Gordon, T. B. McGrath, A. A. Fowler, and J. W. Worth.

Advisory Industrial Committee — W. R. Denham, Reid Sandiro, Wm. Sangster, T. H. C. Denne, John Corey, W. R. Breyfogle, V. Eastwood, T. B. McGrath, A. A. Fowler, Dr. F. C. Neal, G. N. Gordon and E. G. Patterson.

Advisory Commercial Committee—W. R. Morris, W. H. Pretty, A. W. Cressman, E. F. Mason, J. W. Worth G. O. Cameron, J. M. Greene and T. B. McGrath.

Referring to the increasing cost for fuel which for 1917 and 1918 totals seven thousand dollars over 1916, Mr. Patterson sought the Board's opinion of the advisability of limiting the summer holidays to two weeks, and closing the schols for a month or six weeks in the middle of winter.

Both Mr. Eastwood and Mr. G. N. Gordon said that this was a matter that would have to be dealt with by the Department of Education as the present school periods are fixed by Provincial enactment. The Secretary of the Board was instructed to refer this suggestion to the Department of Education.

ESTIMATES ADOPTED.

It took the Board about five minutes to adopt the estimates for the current year. When Mr. Denne suggested the possibility of an overdraft in the Property Comittee's department, due to a minium appropriation Mr. Paterson suggested an increase in the appropriation. "Better increase the estimate now rather than wind up the year with an overdraft" observed Mr. Patterson.

On motion of Mr. Patterson, and Mr. Fowler, the estimates, as presented to the Board, were unanimously adopted. The estimates are over seventeen thousand dollars in excess of last year.

Women's Suffrage Welcomed

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Jan. 11. — The morning newspapers welcome heartily the decision of the House of Lords on woman suffrage, which gives the vote to about six million women and ends the long wrangle which has troubled the country for years. It is true that the third reading of the bill is yet to be taken, and a motion to submit the question to a referendum is to be disposed of, but it is not believed that this has any prospects of success even if pressed to a vote. Miss Christabel Pankhurst said: "The vote will be used for the national good." She added that the women of Great Britain now had only one idea, namely, to assure victory for the allies.

IS RETURNING TO DUTY AGAIN

Lieut. Bruce D. Clegg, R.N.V.R., who was called home owing to the illness of his father, the late Samuel Clegg, left Wednesday on the midnight for Ottawa en route for England, to report for duty.

of day so that every people will know to what they are being committed.

"It is our wish that the countries in the future live under terms enabling an exchange of goods to mutual advantage, and that compulsory military service be no longer a blight on civilization.

"In short, it is our wish that the nations, great and small, shall live their own way and develop according to their own bent.

"In the concrete application of these principles to the moment's problem we also agree that French territory should be restored and compensated for and that other small countries which have been ravaged by militarism should be restored to full territorial, economic and political existence.

IN THE WAR TOGETHER.

"We are in this war together—the free peoples of the west and the free peoples of Europe. We on this side are bearing a great burden and we want help speedily and effectively.

"My message to the industrial workers of the United States and Canada would be that they should carry on the building of ships and the equipping of armies by which those armies may be made effective in Europe."

A Generous Place

Occasionally you hear that a certain business has had a successful season, but not often that a firm wants to share its success with its patrons. There is such a case just now, however, and it is proposed by the Peterboro' Shoe Store to give its customers a buying day on which they will sell any boot or shoe in the Store at such a greatly reduced price that all profits, and in many cases part of the cost, is left in the hands of the buyer as a profit-sharing bonus to the patron. The store has just completed stock-taking, and the result looked so well that this generous plan was suggested. The reductions are not only on odd lines brought out by the stock-taking, but any pair of shoes in the store will be a bargain for to-morrow (Saturday). Of course there are also a lot of odd lines that are priced less than half value, and if you find the shoes on the special bargain tables to suit you, the saving will represent a double bonus in that case.

Come to-morrow, and share in this bargain offering.

LINDSAY MIDGETS HERE TO-NIGHT FOR JUNIOR O.H.A. BATTLE

There will undoubtedly be a big crowd at Brock Street Rink to-night when the local hockey season will be launched by a junior O.H.A. game between the Lindsay Midgets and the Peterborough Juniors. The Lindsay team have a lead of three goals from the first game, but the Petes are confident of being able to pull this down to-night and starting the second part of the double schedule between the two teams with a margin to the good. The ice is in good shape and everything points to a real old-time junior battle. The game is called for 8.15 o'clock and will introduce the Peterborough fans to six-man hockey. The teams will line up about as follows:

LINDSAY		PETERBORO
	Goal
Oliver		Murray
	Right Defence
Garnett		Girard
	Left Defence
Willford		Hagerman
	Centre
Lyons		Cherrett
	Right Wing

GROVER HALPIN'S CASE DISCUSSED IN HAMILTON

The Hamilton Herald says:

This chap Grover Halpin, of Peterborough, who is residing in Sarnia, doesn't seem to know just what he is going to do. He is working in Sarnia again, after being at his home in Peterborough since November, and has signed a Sarnia certificate. His appeal of the Peterborough tribunal's decision in his case under the Military Service Act has been dismissed, so the Peterborough newspapers report. Still Grover refuses to do anything until he hears something definite from military headquarters. If he receives orders to enlist shortly, he says he wants to join up with the C.O.R.

MAKE ALL MEN GO TO WORK.

Jamaica, N. — Mrs. Alfred J. Eno, suffrage leader of Queen's County, announced at a meeting here that she had drafted for introduction in the Legislature a bill which would compel every man in the state between the ages of 18 and 50 to go to work. Under the provisions of the bill all men would be required to register, and the government would assign them to work either for the state or for private employment.

TOO MANY PETERBORO' BOYS ON THE SARNIA TEAM SAYS HERALD

Hamilton Paper Points Out That Dwyer, Montgomery, Adams, Halpin and Rose All Come From This City—Well, How About Harold Parker of the Hams?

The Hamilton Herald says:

Why shouldn't Sarnia and Kitchener be able to drop first-rate hockey clubs on the ice? And at the same time, when is the O.H.A. going to take a hand and prevent this practice of wholesale importation that has been going on in so many of the O.H.A. towns?

Those are the questions that the Hamilton fans want answered. Sarnia placed a team in action last night here that was made up of four or five Peterborough boys, who were brought to Sarnia mainly because of their hockey ability. Joe Dwyer, in the nets, hails from Peterborough; Montgomery, the junior who replaced Grannary on the defence, comes from the same spot, and Jack Adams and Grover Halpin are also natives of the eastern town. Rose, another Peterborough lad, was playing with Sarnia up till Monday, when he was ordered to report for military service in London. Added to this is the information that Bobby Armstrong, the star of the Peterborough Intermediates last year, was imported to Sarnia on 15th May of last year. He had a fist fight with one of the other players shortly after his arrival, and left the town.

In Kitchener the same practice is being carried on, only on not such a large scale. Ernie Parkes, of Toronto Riversides, is now a resident of the Dutch settlement, for the simple reason that he can play hockey, and George Hillier has also done considerable flitting about.

Why shouldn't these clubs show something for their efforts? A member of the Sarnia Club was in Peterborough last year when Hamilton and the 247th Battalion met in the semi-finals for the Intermediate O.H.A. championship, and it's hard to believe that he would go all the way from Sarnia to the east for the sake of seeing a hockey game. Maybe that visit had a lot to do with the importation of some of those Peterborough boys to the west!

BOWLING On Water St. Alleys

HIGH ROLLERS WIN TWO FROM WEST-ENDS.

In the Ten-Pin League match at the Water Street Alleys last night, the High Rollers and the West-Ends were the contesting teams. The former team won the first two games by good margins, while the latter team won the last game. By winning two of the three games, the High Rollers are now tied up with the De Laval for first place. The High Rollers' best spasm was their second game, when they rolled a total of 899. The West-Ends' best spasm was also the second game, with an 815 total. The 500 markers for the High Rollers were: Solomon 545, Heaslip 534, Kelly 529. For the West-Ends, Williams 523 and Thompson 514. Williams had high single of 211.

The scores were as follows:

West-Ends.

Death Of William Stock

Well Known Resident of Peterborough Has Passed Away

One of the pioneer business men of Peterborough passed away this morning at ten o'clock in the person of William Stock, at the family residence, after an illness from bronchial trouble of about two weeks' duration, in his 78th year.

The late Mr. Stock was a man of sterling business reputation. Since coming to the city in 1878 from Lakefield, where he had settled on coming from his birthplace, London, England, he has built up a baking business which is now of considerable standing, and from which he only retired about seven years ago.

During his whole life Mr. Stock was an indefatigable worker in the temperance cause. Of a quiet temperament, his works of charity were many, and perhaps the more effective on account of the unostentatious manner in which they were rendered. In religion Mr. Stock was a member of the Bethany Tabernacle and was a member of the Sons of England, and his wife survives him, also four children, Mrs. J. W. Dawson of Bailieboro, Henry W. of this city, Miss Minnie at home, and Bert of Montreal. Lieut. Percy Stock, of the Royal Naval Flying Corps, is a grandson.

The funeral will be announced later.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements, must, to secure insertion, be signed with the writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Allow me to correct the report that has been circulated stating that I am the man recently arrested for "hen stealing," in East City.

I have worked for respectable farmers in Otonabee and also for G. A. Gillespie on the farm he recently owned in Smith Township, and have only moved into East City about three weeks ago.

ROBT. SIMPSON,
Hazlett Street,
East City.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—I note very carefully your report in Tuesday night's paper what our city fathers have to say regarding delivery of city coal. I note what Chief Thompson says about refusal of coal dealers to accept orders only from "their" own customers. I might say that only last week I spoke to one of our coal merchants and was refused point blank, and told "you are not one of our customers." Then he turned and told one of our city aldermen, "We have lots of coal, and if you want any, better take it." The alderman said "All right," the coal man saying he would send him down a ton next day. Is that justice?

I know another case when I was at a house where another coal merchant delivered a half ton on Monday and another half ton on Thursday of the same week recently. I asked for coal there, and was told "We haven't any" in a tone of voice as if they wanted to eat me up.

I paid for two tons of coal to the city in September and have had one-half ton delivered; and only for Messrs. Taylor & Sons (from whom I never bought coal before) I would not have had any coal lately at all.

Now, I contend that the people who have paid for coal in the summer should be supplied with their coal, if only in half-ton lots, and any others who need it. The coal merchants who have coal should be compelled to accept orders in small quantities and fill them.

As to the town refunding the money to anyone who paid for coal, I do not consider it a fair deal, because the town has had the use of all this money and is drawing interest on it during the time they have held it, and the people have had to lay out more money elsewhere in order to get the coal.

And more than that, the coal merchants are asking $2 a ton more for it now than in the summer. Why this extra charge? I think the people are entitled to know the reason of the extra cost. I understand the increase at the mines is only 35c a long ton. Where does the balance come in?—Yours truly,

A Citizen.

Peterborough, Jan. 11, 1918.

Annual Report Of Parents' Circle Of Queen Mary School

The Parents' Circle of Queen Mary School held their annual meeting for the election of officers on Monday, 7th January. The following ladies were elected to office:

President—Mrs. S. T. Medd.
Vice-President—Mrs. Conelly.
Secretary—Mrs. E. Borbridge.
Treasurer—Mrs. Blade.
Convener of Visiting Com.—Mrs. W. Waugh.
Convener of Programme Com.—Mrs. Morrison.
Convener of Reception Com.—Mrs. Edmison.
Supervisor of Sewing and Knitting Classes—Mrs. C. Clemence.
Pianist—Mrs. C. Adair.

The retiring president, Mrs. Waugh, gave a very sincere and much apperciated speech, in which she heartily thanked the members of the circle and executive for the able way in which they had assisted her in the past, and expressed herself as willing to do anything which lay in her power to help the new executive in the coming year.

The treasurer's report showed a balance on hand of $5.10.

With the passing of 1917 the Parents' Circle of Queen Mary School has closed a very successful year in both a business and social way. The placing of maps of the Ten Commandments in all the class rooms of the school by the members of the Circle was considered one of the essential things accomplished during the year; also the purchase of a piano for use at social meetings, part of the price of which was paid for by voluntary contributions and part by the sum of money collected at a talent tea held in March last for that purpose.

The sewing and knitting classes under the capable supervision of Mrs. Clemence, with a staff of teachers, all members of the Circle, have done splendid work in teaching the girls two very necessary branches of work which will be of great value to them in the future.

On 19th June the Circle held their annual picnic in Jackson Park. As usual this was a very successful and enjoyable affair.

At all business meetings during the year the programme committee, with Mrs. Medd as convener, ably assisted by Mrs. Adair and Mrs. Conelly, endeavoured to have the best speakers procurable address the Circle, and they have been more than successful in their efforts. Canon Cornish, Rev. Dr. Wilson, Mr. Mowat, Adjt. McElhuney, Mrs. Stevenson, Mrs. Morris, and Mrs. Douglas have at different times addressed the Circle in a most instructive and interesting manner.

The Circle has also had the privilege of enjoying some of the best musical talent in the city.

A hearty invitation is extended to all the mothers of the school to join the Circle to help along in the good work which it is accomplishing, spend a social hour once a month, and meet the teachers and instructors of your children.

MINOR ACCIDENT G. T. R. NEAR KEENE

A broken axle inside the boxing on a G.T.R. engine caused a temporary obstruction east of Keene yesterday afternoon. The crew attempted to continue its run to Hastings, but the front wheels swung around parallel with the rails and tied up traffic until the Lindsay auxiliary substituted a new set of wheels and reopened the road last night.

Nominations In East City

Nominations in East City to name candidates to contest the vacancy in the City Council caused by the death of Ald. J. H. Smith, will be held on Friday, 18th January, and in case a poll is required a vote will be taken on Friday, 25th January. This will enable the members-elect to be present at the February meeting of the City Council.

Muffins made of whole wheat or any dark flour should be very thoroughly baked.

THE DEATH OF MRS. E. BRECKENRIDGE

On Sunday, January 6th at the family residence, near Indian River, the death occurred, after a short illness of Mrs. Elizabeth Breckenridge, at the age of eighty-two years.

The late Mrs. Breckenridge was an esteemed resident of Otonabee for the past seventy-six years, having come there as a bride at the age of six years. She was married in 1856 to Mr. Matthew Breckenridge, who predeceased her six years ago.

She is survived by one daughter and five sons, besides two sisters and two brothers.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Mr. McEachern of Keene, assisted by Mr. Robert of Indian River. Interment took place at Westwood.

LAUGH AND GROW FAT.

"Laugh and grow fat," is an old saying laden with value for nervous people in particular. Drop the worry habit and use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and you will soon get the nervous system restored to good condition. Digestion will improve, appetite will return, and you will find such symptoms as headache and sleeplessness fast disappearing.

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Jan. 12.—Report in Berlin says that Chancellor Von Hertling will probably answer President Wilson and Lloyd George in the Reichstag on Monday.

Cornmeal Gems.

Two cups sour cream, one teaspoon soda, one teaspoon salt, one whole egg, beaten lightly, one cup flour, two cups cornmeal, one-half cup granulated sugar. Beat well for five minutes and drop by spoonfuls into well greased gem pans and bake until a golden brown.

Like Being Hit By Rattle Snake

Says that every time you cut or pick at a corn you invite lockjaw

You reckless men and women who are pestered with corns and who have at least once a week invited an awful death from lockjaw or blood poison are now told by a Cincinnati authority to use a drug called freezone, which the moment a few drops are applied to any corn, the soreness is relieved and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts right out with the fingers, without one particle of pain.

This freezone is a sticky substance, which dries the moment it is applied, and just loosens the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. He says a quarter of an ounce will cost very little at any of the drug stores, but this is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You are positively warned that cutting or picking at a corn is a suicidal habit.

ARRESTED AMID PRAYER BOOKS AS FOOD PROFITEER

Pincus Friedman, East Side Figure, Accused of Selling Sugar Too High

WAS RELEASED ON BAIL

NEW YORK, Jan. 12—The Department of Justice took charge of the prosecution of cases of persons accused of profiteering in foodstuffs, when it caused the arrest of Pincus Friedman, of 172 Rivington Street, on a warrant accusing him of selling sugar at a price greater than that allowed by the Food Administration.

Friedman has been a spectacular figure in the ghetto of the east side for many years. He was taken from his Rivington Street shop, where he sells prayer books and other religious articles, such as the Torah, or Jewish Bible. He is patriarchal in appearance, with a long flowing beard. He was taken from among his bibles and prayer books after government agents had found about 20,000 pounds, or ten tons, of sugar in his name aboard steamships in this port. When the prisoner was arraigned before Samuel Hitchcock, United States Commissioner, in the Federal Building last night he was held in $2,500 bail and paroled for a hearing.

Friedman's arrest was made upon complaints filed with the Federal Food Board, which for two weeks had been investigating his alleged dealing in sugar. Before he was arrested government agents traced shipments of approximately 50,000 pounds of sugar from two men in New Orleans.

According to the government investigation, Friedman paid to those from whom he bought his sugar the stipulated government price of $8.60, but his own price to those who bought it from him here, wholesale, was about $9.10 a hundred pounds.

At the moment Friedman was placed under arrest deputy United States marshals reported that they had found on board three steamships approximately 20,000 pounds of sugar. One of these steamships arrived on Wednesday night with twenty barrels of sugar consigned to him. The second steamship had sixty-eight barrels, thirty-three packets, and fourteen sacks of sugar for Friedman, and the third had consigned to him eight barrels and twenty packets.

The arrest of Friedman was the first such move toward criminal prosecution of an alleged sugar profiteer undertaken in the United States, and is declared to mark an epoch in dealing with violations of the Food Administration's regulations. James W. Osborne objected to bail of $1,000 for Friedman, and upon Mr. Osborne's motion the amount was raised to $2,500.

According to Mr. Osborne, the government's information showed that Friedman obtained payment for sugar at the store where he sold religious articles, and gave his customers orders which permitted them to remove it from the steamship piers. Because there was no evidence of hoarding it was impossible for the government to seize the sugar still held in Friedman's name, but a demand will be made upon him to sell the sugar at the government's prescribed rate.

Mr. Baker Defends All Delays In Work Of War Department

Secretary Upholds His Subordinates Despite Senators' Criticism—No Force So Large Ever Raised, Equipped and Trained So Quickly, He Declares.

PERSONNEL OF ARMY NOW IS 1,536,506

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12. — Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War, on the stand, in the face of a hostile cross-fire by members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, investigating the army, entered a vigorous defence of the preparations for war against Germany.

"No army of a similar size in the history of the world has ever been raised, equipped or trained so quickly," he declared.

For more than five hours Mr. Baker withstood the examination. He puffed continually at long black cigars while a group of Senators pounded him with questions regarding the conduct of the War Department. The main drive of the committee's questioning was about delay in the equipment of the American forces, both at home and abroad. In every instance Mr. Baker defended his subordinates.

"There has been delay," said Mr. Baker, "but it has been delay of excellence. When it has come to a question of speed or excellence we have decided always in favor of excellence, even though it entailed some delay.

DEFENDS SUPPLIES COMMITTEE.

"The war wasn't at our doors, it was in Europe, three thousand miles away," he said in reply to pointed questions regarding whether it was not better to accept inferior equipment in order to get the forces in the field.

The Supplies Committee of the National Council of Defence and Charles Eisman, its chairman, were defended strongly by Mr. Baker, despite the fact that long and harsh attacks have been made upon the methods of this committee. He declared that the transfer of the duty of equipping the American forces from the quartermaster's general department to the Supply Committee was entirely proper and in his judgment good practice.

"I don't think it was the best way but it was the only way," he said, explaining that with the country thrust suddenly into war quick action was necessary and the quickest action could be gained by enlisting the services of men expert in their respective lines.

TROOPS NOW FULLY EQUIPPED

Even the base sorting plant which hitherto has been the storm centre of the investigation, received a clean record from the Secretary. When he was questioned regarding the operations of this corporation by Senator MacKellar, of Tennessee, and asked if he did not believe that this concern had been the object of favoritism and perhaps more than favoritism, he replied:

"You can either regard the base sorting plant as an attempt to make a lot of money out of the government or you can regard it as an effort to serve the government. That was certainly Mr. Eisenman's purpose when he originated the idea that led to this corporation and the granting of a contract to it."

American troops are now fully equipped, Mr. Baker testified, declaring that the manufacture of reserve equipment for the forces both at home and abroad will begin very soon.

EXPLAINS DELAY ON RIFLES.

Senator Chamberlain, chairman of the Senate Committee, questioned the Secretary about the delay in the selection of rifles for the American armies. He charged that there had been a change from Springfield to Enfield rifles, which had caused delay, and that troops in training had been

BILLY SUNDAY'S PRAYER FOR VICTORY CHEERED IN HOUSE

Evangelist Invokes Aid of Divine Providence to Help President and Nation Defeat Most Infamous Country in the World's History

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 12.—Billy Sunday prayed in the House yesterday and was applauded at the close of his appeal. Champ Clark, Speaker of the House, extended the invitation to Mr. Sunday to take the place of the regular House chaplain. Mr Sunday, in his prayer, verbally assailed the Germans, and invoked the aid of Divine Providence to help the President, the Secretary of War and Congress to defeat Prussianism.

"We thank Thee that we are Americans," prayed the evangelist, "and live beneath the protecting folds of the Stars and Stripes. We thank Thee that Thou canst look over the battlements of glory on our land and see that there is not one stain on any star or stripe. We thank Thee for our happy homes. We thank Thee for our wives and little ones. We thank Thee for the fruitful trees and bountiful harvests. We thank Thee that as a nation we have never gone hungry, or scraped the bottom of our flour barrel, and we pray for Thy continued mercy and blessing.

Most Infamous Nation in History.

"We pray that Thou wilt forgive our transgressions and blot out our iniquities. Thou knowest, O Lord, that we are in a life and death struggle with one of the most vile, infamous, greedy, avaricious, bloodthirsty, sensual, and vicious nations that ever had disgraced the pages of history.

"Thou knowest that Germany from the eyes of mankind has wrung enough tears to make another sea; that she has drawn blood to redden every wave upon that sea; that she has drawn enough shrieks and groans from the breasts of men, women, and children to make another mountain.

"We pray Thee that Thou wilt bare Thy mighty arm and strike that great neck of hungry, wolfish Hun, whose fingers drip with blood and gore. We pray Thee that the stars in their courses and the winds and waves may fight against them.

"We pray Thee that Thou wilt bless our beloved President and give him strength of mind and body and courage of heart for his arduous duties in these sorrow-laden, staggering days. We pray Thee to bless the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy, and bless, we pray Thee, the Naval Strategy Board. Bless, we pray Thee, the generals at the head of our army and the boys across the sea, somewhere in France, and bless those protecting our transports, loaded to the waters' edge with men and provisions.

PRAYS FOR ALLIED VICTORY.

"Bless our boys at home who are in cantonments. Bless, we pray Thee, the Senate and House, and give them wisdom and strength, for they seem to have come into the kingdom for such a time as this.

"And, Lord, may every man, woman and child from Maine to California, from Minnesota to Louisiana, stand up to the last ditch and be glad and willing to suffer and endure until final victory shall come. Bless our allies, and may victory be ours. And in Thy own time, and in Thy own way, we pray Thee that Thou will release the white winged dove of peace until it shall dispell the storm and clouds that hang lowering over this sin-cursed, blood-soaked and sorrowing world, and when it is all over we will uncover our heads and lift our faces to the heavens and sing with a new meaning:—

"My country, 'tis of thee, sweet land of Liberty, Of thee I sing.

"And the praise shall come to Thee for ever more, through Jesus Christ. Amen."

The House broke into instant applause at the ending of the words of prayer. Many members crowded around the evangelist and shook hands with him, and an informal reception was held in the lobby.

YOUNGEST GENERAL IN THE WORLD

General Freyberg is the youngest general in the British army, if not in the entire world. He is but 27 years old, and is considered a military prodigy. He compares favourably with any of the famous youthful heroes of the French revolution.

Freyberg had enlisted in General Villa's army in Mexico, when the world war broke out. He had no money for his passage to Great Britain, but earned it as a professional sportsman in the United States. Upon his arrival at the other side he was commissioned as a subaltern. Without losing a day he went to Antwerp, afterward being sent to Gallipoli. From the very first day he rendered himself famous for his intrepid exploits. Together with a comrade he landed in the Bay of Buisir one night. By lighting fires and firing rockets and imitating the sounds of an army preparing to attack he kept part of the Turks at bay, while at another point the British army approached the coast. When the success of his ruse was assured he jumped into the sea and swam about for six hours before being picked up.

Some time afterward he was fighting on the Somme, always in the thick of the fray. In the dreadful hours of Beaumont-Hamel (he was a lieutenant-colonel then) he inspired his men to such incredible deeds of daring that the astonished officers asserted that he had taken Beaucourt-sur-l'Ancre practically single-handed. This unparalleled gallantry is coupled with astonishing intelligence and activity. He learned strategy and tactics as if they were mere child's play. He was seriously wounded five times, and each of these mishaps inspired him with fresh courage. Tall, of fine, athletic build, with flashing eyes and face and neck covered with cicatrices, General Freyberg impresses his troops and has perfect command said: "He is one of those generals who come out of Nature's hands perfectly moulded."

Skin On Fire With Eczema

The Most Torturing of Skin Diseases —Few Doctors Have Satisfactory Treatment to Offer, But This Ointment Cures.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Jan. 12. — Eczema's itch is torture, the skin seems on fire with the burning, stinging humour; at times it becomes almost unbearable, and in desperation you could tear the skin to pieces. You dare not exercise for fear of aggravating the itching, neither can you sleep, for no sooner does the body become warm than the trouble begins, and instead of restful, refreshing sleep, it is scratch, scratch, scratch all night long. There is scarcely a moment's respite from this maddening malady at any time. Of course you have tried nearly all the washes, salves, lotions and medicated soaps, but, like thousands of others, have been disappointed and disgusted.

Mrs. Alex. Perry, 18 Ross St., St. Thomas, Ont., writes: "I cannot recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment too highly, as it cured me of a very bad case of eczema. For six years I was ashamed to go near my door when anybody called, my face was so affected with this terrible disease. I consulted several doctors, but they could not help me at all. When I heard of Dr. Chase's Ointment being good for eczema, I tried it, and before I had used two boxes I could see it was helping me. Now, since my face is entirely healed, they want to know how I was cured, and I certainly recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment. I cannot speak too strongly in its favour, as I paid out many dollars for doctors' medicines, but did not get any relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment."

You may be skeptical regarding the ability of Dr. Chase's Ointment to cure you. Most people are, after trying in vain to get relief from a host of remedies, but Dr. Chase's Ointment will not disappoint you. You will be surprised at the marvellous control which it has over all itching, burning inflammation of the skin, and the wonderful healing powers which it possesses. It takes time to thoroughly cure eczema, but Dr. Chase's Ointment will do it. You will find relief after a few applications, and gradually and naturally the cure will follow. Besides being a positive cure for eczema, Dr. Chase's Ointment comes useful in a hundred ways in every home for every form of skin irritation and eruption, chapped skin and chilblains.

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

BAKER'S COCOA HAS GREAT FOOD VALUE

THE food value of cocoa has been proven by centuries of use, and dietitians and physicians the world over are enthusiastic in their endorsements of it. It is said to contain more nourishment than beef, in a more readily assimilated form. The choice, however, should be a high-grade cocoa,—"Baker's" of course.

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY

Isabel Ostrander

CHAPTER I.

"OUT OF THE NIGHT."

The heat wave, almost unprecedented in intensity even for mid-July, had held the city in its relentless grip for more than a week, and the night, sultry and overcast, brought no relief. Although it lacked an hour until midnight, the streets were practically deserted, and the subdued, sparsely scattered lights in the towering, cliff-like apartment houses on either side shone through a haze, as if the very pavements steamed.

A solitary figure strolled slowly down the Drive. Heavy-set, without being bulky, broad of shoulders, and with a rhythmic, measured tread, the glow of his cigar revealing a square-jawed face, the long upper lip adorned with a stubby, sandy mustache, and keen, twinkling blue eyes, which mechanically roved over entrance ways and areas as he passed.

A second figure had halted beneath the street lamp on the corner and catching sight of the familiar blue-coat and brass buttons, he quickened his pace, but still retaining the swinging stride which was a relic of the years when he, too, had followed his beat.

Timothy McCarthy's promotion on the force, from policeman to roundsman, had been rapid, and the stripes of a sergeant were within reach when the death of a prosperous, saloon-keeping uncle had made him financially independent. In the first flush of opulence he resigned from the department, but the life of elegant leisure looked forward to with such satisfaction had proved empty and monotonous, and time dragged. Although a private citizen for several years now, he still yearned for the old excitement and glory of the chase, and treasured the long-past associations.

"A hot night, Cunliffe."

"It is that, Mac!" the policeman responded as he took off his helmet to wipe his glistening forehead. "The heat that has been after soaking into the street all day comes up now like the blast of a furnace, and there is not a breath stirring. We'll have a storm, though, before morning, I'm thinking."

McCarthy's huge shoulders moved with a gesture of impatience, as if this atmospheric dissertation was beside the point at issue.

"Anyone doing?" His question was casually put, but behind it was a note of wistful eagerness lost on the other.

"Divil a thing!" Cunliffe eased a forefinger between his collar and perspiring throat. "There was a drunk down the block there, but he moved on peaceable. Even the cats in the back yards are too wilted to put up a scrap. Besides this is a quiet district, all flats, and half of them closed now for the summer. Nothing ever happens around here."

"Then look out. When it does come it will come big," remarked McCarthy sagely. "I mind when I was on the force all the brawls in the tough wards put together didn't give us half the trouble of one crime pulled off in a residential section."

"Oh, aurel" the younger man acquiesced indifferently. "Nobody cares when one dago knifes another, but if some guy scraggs a high-roller and we don't pinch him on the job, the papers let out a holler, and we're liable for a shake-up."

"It's not alone that." McCarthy tilted his cigar at an argumentative angle. "If two men have a run-in on a Bowery street corner and one of them falls, it's a matter of wind, not brains, to nab the other one. But the more educated a fellow is, like the class around here, the more careful he is to plan his get-away and cover his tracks, and the department has got its work cut out for it to land him."

Cunliffe laughed.

"I've been on this beat for six months and I've seen nothing more desperate than a lost kid and a scrap between janitors. Drop in at the station and have a look at the blotter, and you'll find it as clean as the palm of your hand. Sure, a cripple could keep order in the whole ward." A pause. "Well, Conners is waiting to relieve me; I'll be after moving on."

He saluted and tramped off, and McCarthy sauntered on around the corner in the direction from which the other had come. The side street was brighter than the Drive, for glowing lamps shone out from the entrances of the apartment houses which flanked it. Cunliffe's "drunk" had disappeared, but the street was not quite deserted. In the shadows, on the opposite side, toward the farther corner, two distinct figures loitered, and near them at the curb stood a huge, tightly closed limousine.

"Is it the air they are afraid of, on a night like this?" mused McCarthy.

He walked on leisurely, his eyes upon the enigmatic vehicle until he had all but reached the end of the block, when that happened which drove all idle speculation from his mind.

There was a sharp, shocking cry from somewhere over head, and a swift rush of air as something hurtled down and fell with a hideous crashing impact on the pavement at his feet.

"Glory be to God!" The exclamation burst from McCarthy's lips as he involuntarily recoiled, then recovering himself, sprang forward. A widening stain was creeping out on all sides from the quivering heap, but unmindful of it, he knelt and felt about the sodden, silken mass out, his hands touched a long strand of hair.

Gently, pityingly, he raised the mangled head, and as he did so a hissing sigh escaped from the tortured lips.

"The—flying—man!"

McCarty glanced up at the murky blankness of the sky. Could he have heard aright? His eyes travelled swiftly to the apartment house beside him, from which the woman must have fallen. There were lights only in the third and fourth floor windows directly overhead. The upper one was closed and the shade drawn down. He was aware, too, that a piano was playing riotously somewhere above, and even as he looked, the shade flew violently up on the third floor, the window opened, and a woman appeared, screaming.

In really scarce a full minute had passed since the catastrophe, but the shock of it had dulled McCarty's usually hair-triggered presence of mind. The shrill cry overhead aroused him, and he beat a rapid tattoo upon the pavement with his cane in lieu of a nightstick, then glanced about for assistance.

The two figures lounging across the way had disappeared, and the tail lights of the limousine blinked as it rounded the corner with almost stealthy speed, but hurried steps sounded from behind McCarty, and a young man with dropped jaw and protruding eyes bent over him.

"Gawd!" he muttered. "Jumped, did she?"

"Or was thrown," McCarty returned. "Help me lift her."

The young man shuddered but obeyed, and between them they raised the limp form.

"Where'll we take her?"

"In here," McCarty indicated the apartment-house entrance. "There's a little sign in that window. I guess maybe it's a doctor's office."

A negro hall boy met him at the door, and at sight of their burden his dusky skin paled and his knees shook visibly beneath him.

"Is there a doctor in there," demanded McCarty bruskly. "One of your tenants has got hurt."

The boy stared, tongue tied and quaking, but at that moment the door of the office was flung open and the doctor himself appeared on the threshold. He was a slim, dapper individual, wearing huge rimmed glasses on the broadest of black ribbons, and he appeared to take in the situation at a glance.

"Accident?" he asked briskly. "Bring her right in here. That's it, ease her down on the couch. Um-m, is she—gone?" The young man who had helped carry the girl in voiced his question in a hushed tone, but no one replied. The doctor was bused over the poor crumpled heap on the couch, and McCarty had turned to the frightened hall-boy.

"You'd better let her folks know, whoever they are," he directed. "She fell from the window of one of the apartments up-stairs."

The boy shook his head and gulped.

"She—she don't belong hyar!" he gasped, through stiffened lips. "I ain't seen her befo', leastways not this evenin'! I don't know how she got in, or when. She moughtn't have fall from next door——"

"Well, anyway, you go up and stop that woman on the third floor from yelling her head off!" McCarty interrupted shortly. "If she don't put the soft pedal on we'll have to call out the reserves. And look here, boy, don't you sneak off anywhere. I want to talk to you later."

Swift-running feet pounded heavily past the window, and in another moment Cunliffe burst into the hall.

"What's up?" he demanded, his breath rasping in his throat. "Somebody rapped for help, and there's blood on the sidewalk out there!—Oh, you're here, Mac! Say, what happened?"

"Have a look," McCarty invited grimly, moving aside to make room for him. "One of the things that don't ever happen in this quiet neighborhood of yours, that a cripple could keep order in! It's a little matter of murder, I'm thinking."

"Holy saints!" Cunliffe muttered. "It's smashed, entirely, she is! How did she——"

"Out of some windows in this house and landed right at my feet," McCarty added in asperity, forgetting his own moments of shock. "You'd better not be standing there staring like a lunkhead, Cunliffe, but send in a hurry call for the ambulance, and notify headquarters."

"True for you, Mac!"

Cunliffe pushed his way through the hastily gathered group of people who stood anxiously about in the main hall and went to the switchboard telephone. They eddied around him, listening in frank eagerness, and as the purport of his message was conveyed to them, a shocked, excited murmur arose, and faint, hysterical screams from one or two women in the crowd.

"That'll be about enough of that!" admonished Cunliffe gruffly. "Clear out, now, every last one of you! Clear this hall!"

But the policeman found it an impossible task to attempt single handed. The group was augmented with every passing instant by occupants of the building, who sketchily attired, flocked down the stairway, and by passers-by who had seemed to spring up from nowhere in that semi-deserted street at the first note of alarm.

Cunliffe was obliged to content himself by making a determined stand at the door of the doctor's apartment and from that vantage point repulsing the more venturesome of the morbidly excited throng.

Within the office, the doctor still bent over the couch. McCarty mounted guard at its head, and a little way off, by the desk, the young man who had helped to bear the ghastly burden stood as if waiting for dismissal, his head bowed, his fingers mechanically turning his hat around and around.

No sound has escaped the woman's lips, no slightest moan or whisper since that first incredible gasp, when McCarty had raised her head. The flying man! What could she have meant? What vital thought had remained in that poor battered brain, even after the overwhelming shock of her fall, which she had tried so desperately to convey in those few cryptic words?

Hardened as he was, McCarty could not force himself to regard without a shudder the broken thing which lay upon the couch. It was crushed beyond recognition, almost beyond semblance of human form. He would not have believed that life still lingered were it not for the convulsive gasps which tore their way from her throat. Would she die with that urgent message undelivered?

(To be continued.)

The Crown of Womanhood

"Uncared for hair cannot be beautiful. There is no part of the human makeup so revengeful as the hair. It cries out: Look at me, care for me, or I will disgrace you! Treat me with consideration and I will be a glory to you."

With the above words, Lillian Russell, an unquestioned authority on feminine attractiveness, places no uncertain value on nice hair as a beauty asset. Unkempt, uncared for hair not only cannot be attractive but is actually a disgrace.

But why have ill-kept, untidy hair? By devoting a few moments regularly to brushing and intelligent application of NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE, the hair may be made to yield wonderful returns in increased personal charm.

Dandruff is the direct cause of more hair trouble than anything else. The hair becomes thin, harsh, uneven and falls out in quantities. It looks dead and lifeless; there is no luster. The scalp itches.

HERPICIDE will remove the dandruff which is causing all the trouble, clean the scalp, give the hair life, snap and luxuriance. The hair stops coming out, the itching ceases almost at once and withal there is a most gratifying sense of cleanliness.

To the woman who wishes to make the most of nature's gifts by having fluffy, beautiful hair, NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE is a toilet necessity. It is exquisitely perfumed and is a delightful hair dressing.

In 50c and $1.00 sizes. At drug stores and toilet goods counters everywhere. Guaranteed by The Herpicide Co.

Applications at the better Barber Shops and Hair-Dressing Parlors.

Send 10 cents for sample bottle and booklet to The Herpicide Co., Dept. S, Detroit, Mich.

To Stop a Persistent Hacking Cough

The best remedy is one you can easily make at home. Cheap, but very effective.

Thousands of people normally healthy in every other respect, are annoyed with a persistent hanging-on bronchial cough year after year, disturbing their sleep and making life disagreeable. It's so needless—there's an old home-made remedy that will end such a cough easily and quickly.

Get from any druggist "2½ ounces of Pinex" (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Begin taking it at once. Gradually but surely you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether, thus ending a cough that you never thought would end. It also promptly loosens a dry or tight cough, stops the troublesome throat tickle, soothes the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes, and relief comes almost immediately. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma there is nothing better. It tastes pleasant and keeps perfectly.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and is used by millions of people every year for throat and chest colds with splendid results.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Professor's Experiment

By M. QUAD

Copyright, "" by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Professor Brixton Longbody was a born philosopher and a logician. At fifteen years old he had read more philosophy than forty average men combined.

At the age of twenty-five young Longbody was appointed professor of logic and philosophy at a state university.

One afternoon the professor was crossing the campus when he picked up a book that some one had dropped or thrown away. It was entitled "The Life of Vidocq." Never in all his days had he read a criminal or a detective story. He had never let his profound mind dwell for three seconds on such literature. Behold, the time had come! That night he sat up until past midnight reading that book. It was a new revelation to him, a new world of thought.

He analyzed Vidocq's logic and philosophy and found fault with them.

He counted up the number of blunders that the average criminal made in a case and was amazed that the fellow had not been overhauled in half a day. After reading the book twice over he laid it aside with a sigh of:

"Dear me, what a pack of idiots! And how easy to have been sensible! As a detective I would have made a great success. As a criminal I fear that I should have been more successful."

Do what he would, Professor Longbody could not drive away these thoughts. In a couple of weeks, as he walked out, he imagined himself either a criminal or a detective. Sometimes he was ashamed and indignant at himself, and at other times he was rather pleased. In passing down a certain street the professor noticed that a parlor window in a certain house was half raised. A night or two later he passed the same house an hour before midnight and noticed that the same window was still up.

"Careless people—very careless," he whispered to himself. "That's a plain invitation for a robber to enter and plunder the house."

It made him angry with the owner of the place. Was it his duty to teach the man a lesson? Would you believe that the great philosopher argued that it was?

The professor would enter that house by night. By the open window? No sir; he was too sharp for that. That would be the road of the common criminal, and it would be a fearful blunder. The owner of the house was inviting a would be robber to climb in that window to get caught in a bear trap or lose his life by a spring gun.

The professor bought a dark lantern. He put a few tools in his pockets and set out one night to commit a philosophical and logical burglary. He was expected at the front. Therefore he appeared at the back and attacked what he judged was the pantry window.

Professor Longbody went into that window like a monkey. He was not mistaken about its being the pantry. The door leading into the dining room was shut, and it was time for that dark lantern. It was flashed—that is, there was no flash. A dark lantern had been bought all right, but the professor had not bought any oil to fill it. He must hunt for matches in a strange house at midnight. He had forgotten to post himself as to whether the house was lighted by electricity, gas or lamps, but he softly opened the door and found himself in a room almost as dark. Where was the match safe, if there was one? In the kitchen probably. He went feeling his way for about ten feet. Then he bumped up against a table and involuntarily put out his hands, and they struck a pile of dishes and tumbled them to the floor.

The professor crouched on the floor and waited with beating heart, and he had only a few seconds to wait. The room was suddenly flooded with an electric light, and a man came running downstairs, revolver in hand. No move was made to get away. On the contrary, the teacher of philosophy and logic got to his feet and sat down on a chair.

"Well?" queried the man with the gun as he sat down on another.

"Is it of any use to say anything?" replied Professor Longbody.

"Oh, yes," replied the householder. "You see, I knew you. You teach philosophy and logic at the school, but you don't practice what you teach."

"I was making an experiment," was the rather weak reply.

"Yes; I have expected you since you first saw that open window. I happened to be watching you that day. You had convinced yourself that you were smarter than the smartest criminal."

"Y-e-s."

"What are you going to do with me?" asked the professor.

"Why, nothing, professor, nothing at all. You are free to go. You have made your little experiment, and it has been a stupendous blunder and a dire failure."

"I thank you, sir, for understanding it that way," replied the erudite man.

"Oh, no thanks, my dear man. Before you go, however, let me tell you that a robber came around here while you were at work in the back and effected an entrance to the house next door, which is taking care of itself while the family are away. I presume his plunder will be valued at $500 at least. Good night, Professor Longbody. Keep it up and stick to your text books."

A Born Speculator

By EUNICE BLAKE

"Jim," said Mrs. Martin, "the jig's up. We have nothing in the house for dinner, no money to buy anything, and our credit has been exhausted. I have begged you again and again to get a position, and you have not even tried to do so. I'm afraid I'll have to give up trying to live with you."

James Martin looked very lugubrious. Unfitted for any kind of drudgery, he had not found a way of making a living without it. He had been a soldier and conspicuous for bravery, but it is notorious that a man especially built for war is not likely to be fitted for anything else. When Jim had married he had just made $10,000 on a real estate deal which he had put through on paper—that is, without any cash. Before he could strike another such bit of luck his profit was all gone.

"Well, Betsy," he said, "you married a man unfitted for the ordinary humdrum of life, and you must take your medicine. I'll go out and hunt for something to do, but if I find anything it won't last very long. I'll probably be discharged within a few weeks."

"Not if you attend to business, keep a close mouth and don't try to advise your employer."

"I won't if I don't see him making mistakes, in which case I'll probably throw your advice to the winds."

Jim Martin found a position with a man named Summers doing a conservative business on a small capital. Jim had been with him but a month when he told him how he could make a lot of money by the investment of a very little capital.

"I didn't hire you to tell me how to run my business," said Summers and, drawing a check for his salary due, discharged him.

Jim was walking home cursing himself for a fool when he encountered a red flag at the door of a warehouse. Having a fellow feeling with red flags, which usually denote forced sales, he went in and learned that a stock of copper was to be sold for a man who had gone under financially. The bidding was just beginning. A man sidled up to Jim and, slipping a ten dollar bill into his hand, whispered to him to raise the last bid. Jim did as requested and was relieved by hearing the man who had paid him raise his bid.

But the rise in the bids was very slow. The great European war had just broken out, and it occurred to Jim, who was familiar with a soldier's requirements, that copper entered into the composition of ammunition and if the war lasted long enough the stock of the world's copper would be used up. He had no idea of buying this stock, for he had nothing to buy it with, but somehow he could not resist the temptation to go on bidding. But the excitement of the contest got the better of him, and he suddenly awoke to the fact that $100,000 worth of copper had been knocked down to him. He had reached the price copper was selling at in the open market, and no one had any use for this lot at any higher figure. The buyer was at once called upon for 10 per cent of the price to be paid.

Jim was equal to the occasion. Taking one of his principal competitors by the sleeve, he said: "You wanted this copper; so did I. I don't know why you wanted it, but I have been a soldier, and, knowing the necessity for copper in the manufacture of ammunition and considering the amount of ammunition that will be required by the contestants, I believe copper is going up. Within a few weeks or a few months this stock will be worth a great deal more than it is today. If you'll pay the 10 per cent required to carry it I'll take you in for 20 per cent of the profits."

"Wait a minute till I get the last quotation," said the man, "and I'll let you know."

The last quotation was a quarter of a cent higher than the price Jim was to pay. "Make it half the profits," said the capitalist, "and I'll go you." Jim assented. The man paid the margin on the copper, and before the balance was to be paid copper had risen half a cent a pound.

Meanwhile Jim had gathered statistics as to the copper on hand and the amount likely to be required. Orders for ammunition were beginning to come from abroad, and copper kept going up. Jim convinced his partner that the price must continue to rise, and the latter consented to hold on.

One day after the war had been going on for nearly a year the copper was sold, and Jim pocketed what was for him a small fortune. He and his wife had, on the strength of Jim's copper holdings, been able to borrow enough to keep them, and now they were in fine fettle.

"My dear," said Jim, "as I told you a year ago, you married a man unfitted for the ordinary humdrum of life. They say you can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear, but in this case a speculator has been made out of a fool."

"I expect you're right, Jim," was the reply. "You were not born for a drudge. A drudge may always be able to make a living, but he is not likely to get rich. A genius is pretty sure to get a good many dollars, but if he finds his vocation and an opportunity at the same time he will surely lift himself far beyond his fellows."

Jim Martin met his old employer, Summers, on the street the other day, and Summers asked him if he knew of a good thing in which to invest some money for a friend.

Suffering Terribly.

"My wife got a cold the other day, and she is suffering terribly," said the fat man.

"That so?" inquired the thin man. "What is it—pneumonia?"

"No, it is nothing serious."

"Then why is she suffering so much?"

"She is so hoarse that she can't talk."

The Rialto.

The architect of the famous Rialto bridge, in Venice, was Antonio da Ponte. The bridge is a single arch, ninety feet in length, and is exceedingly strong and graceful. It is crossed by means of ascending and descending steps, while on the top are two ranges of shops, dividing the structure into three parallel streets.

Treating Maniacs With Water.

The modern physician is soothing lunatics with nothing more or less than water, according to an article by John E. Lind, M. D., in Popular Science Monthly. There are three ways of giving the water treatment—by the pack, by the "Scotch douche" and by the continuous bath. All three methods are meeting with notable success.

TO SEND 90,000 BUSHELS OF WHEAT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.— The food situation in Europe is regarded here as so critical that the food administration is planning to release an additional 90,000,000 bushels of wheat, despite the fact that the normal export surplus had been shipped by the middle of December. The American people will be asked to save to make up the deficiency.

The demand from the allies is so insistent that the food administration has decided to take a chance on a shortage in the spring to meet in part their needs. If consumption is not reduced officials see a possible shortage of flour in the U. S. in May before the new wheat crop comes in in June.

BRITISH SHIPPING LOSSES.

London. — The following shipping figures have been obtained from a reliable source:

Tonnage of sea-going ships, over 1,600 tons, in August, 1914, 16,941,519; lost by enemy action and otherwise, less new construction, purchases and captures, 2,750,000; remaining January 1, 1918, 14,091,519.

These important figures tell the story accurately of the results of the submarine campaign against British shipping.

SAYS RUSSIA WILL REPUDIATE HER DEBT.

All Obligations to be Cancelled, Says British Correspondent.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—The Bolsheviki Government intends to publish a decree within a few days cancelling the Russian national debt, telegraphs the correspondent at Petrograd of The Manchester Guardian. The correspondent understands that the decree will contain these provisions:

First, all loans and treasury bonds held by foreign subjects abroad or in Russia are repudiated.

Second, loans and treasury bonds held by Russian subjects possessing more than 10,000 roubles in capital are repudiated.

Third, loans and treasury bonds held by Russian subjects possessing capital in loan scrip or deposits not exceeding 1,000 roubles are to receive five per cent. interest on the nominal value of the loan, and those possessing 10,000 roubles are to receive three per cent.

Fourth, workmen and peasants holding 100 roubles worth of loans or bonds may sell their holdings to the state at 75 per cent. of its nominal value. Those holding 600 roubles worth may sell it at 70 per cent. of its nominal value.

Children Had Whooping Cough

Whooping cough, although specially a disease of childhood, is by no means confined to that period, but may occur at any time of life. It is one of the most dangerous diseases of infancy, and yearly causes more deaths than scarlet fever, typhoid or diphtheria, and is more common in female than male children.

Whooping cough starts with sneezing, watering of the eyes, irritation of the throat, feverishness and cough. The coughing attacks occur frequently, but are generally more severe at night.

On the first sign of a "whoop" Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup should be administered, as it helps to clear the bronchial tubes of the collected mucous and phlegm.

Mrs. George Cooper, Bloomfield, Ont., writes: "It is with pleasure I can write and tell you that there never was a better cough medicine made than Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Our children had whooping cough last winter, and that is the only thing that seemed to help them. It loosens up the phlegm so that they could raise it easily. I will never be without it."

"Dr. Wood's" is 25c. and 50c. a bottle; put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

HANNA MEANS TO ACT

Merely Waiting for Name of Person Who Asks $2.50 a Bag for Potatoes.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 10. — Hon. W. J. Hanna, Food Controller, does not intend to allow potatoes to go up in price. Recently when they were quoted at $2.25 per bag he announced that that would be the limit. A report came from Hamilton to-day that $2.50 is being asked there. Mr. Hanna authorized the announcement that when specific details are given as to the name of the party demanding or selling at that figure, he will take action.

THERE IS NOTHING FOR THE LIVER

SO GOOD AS MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

They will regulate the flow of bile to act properly on the bowels and will tone, renovate, and purify the liver, removing every result of liver trouble from the temporary, but disagreeable bilious and sick headaches, to the severest forms of liver complaint.

They are small and easy-acting, do not gripe, sicken or weaken like the old-fashioned, nauseating, griping purgatives.

Mrs. A. Kirk, 53 Yorkville Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have tried and tested Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and have received good results for which I am very thankful. I took them for liver trouble. I came out of the hospital on May 3rd, last, after having had a serious operation which might have been saved had I taken your remedy sooner. I have given some to my sister for biliousness and sick headache, and she has found great relief. A lady who lives in my house has started to take them. I will do my best to recommend them to all my friends."

Price 25c at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

without rifles for a long period.

"In view of the fact that the supply is now nearly adequate, I believe the delay was entirely justified," Mr. Baker said. "It isn't inefficient to change one's mind and get something better than you had first determined. That I should call efficient."

"With the war on us, wasn't it essential to get guns in the hands of these men?" asked Senator Chamberlain.

"The war wasn't on us; it was in Europe, and we had rifles enough for all the men we could get to France within a year," was Mr. Baker's reply.

"To my mind it doesn't make a bit of difference if the battlefield was three thousand miles away or one mile!" said Senator Weeks.

"I cannot agree," Mr. Baker said. "I insist it was not right to arm our troops inadequately faster than we could use them."

816 ABSENTEES FROM MONTREAL UNITS.

Of These, 377 are English and 439 French.

MONTREAL, Jan. 10.—There are to date 816 absentees from the two depot battalions organised in this district under the Military Service Act, according to figures given out by Major-General E. W. Wilson today. These are liable to be classed as deserters if they do not turn up soon. Of the 816, a total of 377 are absent from the English battalion and 439 from the French one.

The official returns for yesterday show that 38 officers and 1,470 men of other ranks have been enrolled with the 1st depot English-speaking battalion, and 30 officers and 1,052 men of other ranks with the 2nd depot French-Canadian battalion. It was not stated how many of these are men called out under the Act, as quite a few were in khaki previous to 3rd January.

MILLERS WANT GRAIN.

Protest Again Shipments to Head of Lakes.

OTTAWA, Jan. 11.—The Board of Grain Supervisors and representatives of the milling interests are in conference to-day upon various questoins in which the millers are vitally interested.

Among other questions discussed is supply of the grain to the mill. The western millers claim that practically all of the grain now in the West is required for milling purposes and desire that it remain in the West instead of being shipped to the head of the lakes. The general questions of traffic and prices, etc., are being discussed.

SUNDAY SERMON

For Those Who Do Not Go to Church

Nehemiah, 1 chap., 11th verse, O Lord, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayer of thy servants.

Nehemiah was in Sushan, the palace or royal city of the King of Persia; he was the king's cup bearer. When God has work to do he will never want instruments to do it with. Nehemiah lived at ease and in honor himself, but cannot forget that he is an Israelite nor shake off the thoughts of his brethren in distress.

He was ready to do them all the good offices he could, and that he might know the right way to do him a kindness, he made enuiries concerning them. We should enquire concerning the people of God and the state of religion; not like the Athenians that we might have something to talk about, but that we may know how to direct our prayers and praises. A sad and melancholy account was given him of the present state of the Jews and Jerusalem.

Every Jerusalem on this side the heavenly one will have some defect, for making up of which it will require the help and service of its friends.

Nehemiah was greatly afflicted when he heard the sad tidings. His first application was to God that he might have the fuller confidence in his application to the king. In his prayer he had respect to the greatness of God, his terribleness to his enemies, his mercies to his people, and covenant relation to them. He confessed that the people and himself and his father's house had sinned and come short of the glory of God, and that they were unworthy of the mercy of God, because of their many sins and transgressions, yet he expressed confidence in God and in his mercy.

The Israelites alone professed to be the servants of the God of heaven. God had forewarned them that if they transgressed they would be scattered abroad but if they returned to him, he would gather them again to their own land. If God were not more mindful of his promises than we are of his precepts, we would be undone. Our best pleas in prayer are taken from the promises of God, the word on which he has caused us to hope.

When worldly men would solicit any favor from the great they seek to obtain the interest of all that have influence with them; but the children of God has seek the things that they need from their Father in Heaven, who is able to secure them the help and favour of all the kings and princes of the earth. Favor with men is desirable when we can see it springing from the mercy of God; other means must be used but the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.

Our intercourse with God will best prepare us for our dealings with men. When we have commended our affairs to God the mind is at liberty, and feels satisfaction and peace. The apostle says: Be careful for nothing, but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. When we have thus addressed ourselves to God difficulties vanish. None so love or serve God as to be entitled to favor by the covenant of works. If by his grace we are true believers still we are not perfect, so that he is righteous in our sufferings and merciful in our comforts. We must still come before him pleading his gracious promises. May we have a spirit of simple, humble dependence on his mercy and grace, with zeal for his glory and affection for his people, and may many be stirred up to serve his cause in the spirit of faith and prayer. When Nehemiah had prayed for the relief of his people he set himself to consider what he could do toward it. Our prayers must be seconded by our serious endeavors to answer them.

Nearly four months had passed from Chislen to Nisan, from November to March, before Nehemiah made his application, probably it was so long before his month of waiting came, and there was no coming into the king's presence uncalled. Esth. 2. We are not thus limited in our address to the King of Kings but have liberty of access to him at all times, to the throne of grace. We never come unwelcome. Good men should by their cheerfulness convince the world that wisdom's way's are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace. But there is a time for all things. Eccl. 3:1. Nehemiah now saw cause to be sad, and to appear so. The affliction of his people and the loss of religion are causes of sorrow to the children of God under which no earthly delights can comfort them. These arbitrary monarchs were suspicious. His sad countenance attracted the king's notice. Upon his urgent inquiry Nehemiah seems to have feared lest the king should impute it to some criminal design. Had such a suspicion been formed it might have been instantly fatal. He assigns the ruins of Jerusalem as the true cause of his grief. Ps. 102:14. All nations, even those who have had no expectation of the resurrection of the dead, have looked upon the graves of their ancestors as in some degree sacred.

Nehemiah in his supplic tion to the King does not speak of it as the city of the God of Israel, but as the place of his father's sepulchres. The king could understand the interest his cupbearer would take in the place of his father's sepulchre but he knew nothing or the delight good men take in the habitation of God's house — the place where his honour dwelleth. The king encouraged Nehemiah to tell his mind. This gave him boldness to speak. Nehemiah immediately prayed to the God of Heaven that he would give him wisdom to ask properly and incline the king's heart to grant him his request.

They that would find favor with kings must first secure favor from the King of Kings. He prayed to the God of Heaven, as infinitely above this mighty monarch. It was a secret, sudden ejaculation. He lifted up his heart to that God who understands. Wherever we are we have a way open heavenward; this will hinder no business, but rather advance it. Nehemiah had prayed very solemnly with reference to this very occasion. We should never engage in any pursuit in which it would be improper thus to seek and expect the Divine blessing. The king intimated that he would spare him a while, and let him have what classes he pleased inserted in his commission. Here was an immediate answer to his prayer; for the seed of Jacob never sought the God of Jacob in Xair. He takes notice, 1st, of the presence of the Queen; she sat by. Probably this was Queen Esther, who seconded Nehemiah's request. 2nd, of the power and grace of God. He gained his point, not according to his merit, his interest, or his good management but according to the good hand of God upon him. This is the Lord's doing and acceptable to him. Nehemiah used every precaution to prevent the adversaries of the Jews from discovering his intentions to rebuild the walls till the work was actually begun. The moonlight enabled him to make his observations.

This account shows us the ruinous and defenceless state of the city nearly one hundred years after the return of the Jews from captivity; and Nehemiah's personal survey enabled him to meet objections or misrepresentations. When he unfolded his designs to the people they cheerfully concurred. He did not tell them at first what he came about, but when he had viewed and considered the matter he told them what God had put into his heart, even to build up the walls of Jerusalem.

The Silver Tongued Orator of Minnesota, Charles A. Towne, Former United States Senator

Late Member of Congress from New York—Nominated for Vice-President

Recommends Nuxated Iron to All Who Feel the Need of Renewed Energy

Says That Henceforth He Shall Not Be Without It

Probably no remedy has ever met with such phenomenal success as has Nuxated Iron—Over three million people annually are taking it in this country alone, to say nothing of the vast number who are using it in France, England, South America and other countries. It has been highly endorsed and used by Former United States senators and Members of Congress, physicians who have been connected with well-known hospitals have prescribed and recommended it. Monsignor Nuvolini, a prominent Catholic Clergyman, recommends it to all members of the Catholic Church. Former Health Commissioner, Wm. R. Kerr, of Chicago, says it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician; Dr. H. B. Vail, formerly Physician in the Baltimore Hospital and a Medical Examiner, says that time and again he has prescribed Nuxated Iron and surprised patients as the rapidity with which the weakness and general debility were replaced by a renewed feeling of strength and vitality; Former First Assistant Postmaster General of the United States, C. P. Grandfield, of the 14th United States Cavalry, says the use of thousands of civil service employees who knew his name and signature, Sarah Bernhardt—"the little Sarah," the world's most noted actress, has ordered a large quantity sent to the French soldiers to help give them strength, power and endurance.

The famous "Cyclone" Davis, Member of the 54th United States Congress, says the effect of Nuxated Iron on him was almost magical, that after taking it, nothing seemed to tire him out, no matter how strenuous it might be. Dr. A. J. Newman, late Police Surgeon of the City of Chicago, and former House Surgeon of Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago, says Nuxated Iron has proven through his own tests of it to stand any comparison he has ever used for creating red blood, building up the nerve, strengthening the muscles and correcting digestive disorders.

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York, says he has never before known any remedy ready to the public that in the case of Nuxated Iron he would feel he were remiss in his duty not to mention it. Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author, says: "Organic Iron (Nuxated Iron) is absolutely necessary to the life of the red blood corpuscles, and without it the blood turns pale, watery and impoverished, resulting in pallor, anaemia, nervousness, indigestion and general debility. Nuxated Iron is the greatest remedy I have ever found for these conditions. It is the most powerful blood builder we have, and I have seen it restore health and strength to many people who had been pronounced hopeless cases by their physicians."

Dr. Geo. H. Kress, Physician to the Throat Department of the Post-Graduate Hospital, New York, says: "Nuxated Iron is a remarkable remedy for those conditions where there is a lack of iron in the blood. Thousands of people suffer from iron deficiency and do not know it."

If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two 5-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which has been used by Former United States Senator Towne with such surprising results, and which he prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well-known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron are so confident that it will enrich the blood and increase the strength of any man or woman under sixty who takes iron and increase their strength 100 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble, that they offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

What Senator Townes Says:

"As a member of Congress from New York, as a member of Congress and Senator from Minnesota, as participant in political campaigns and candidate for Vice-President, my nervous energy and reserve force were tremendously drawn upon. That I survived these rigid and came into advanced middle life with the elasticity and strength of a boy is unquestionably due to the rigorous attention I have paid to the proper care of my body. Recently I have been taking Nuxated Iron and have found it of the greatest benefit as a tonic and regulative. Henceforth I shall not be without it. I am in a position to testify for the advantages of others to the remarkable and immediate helpfulness of this remedy, and I unhesitatingly recommend Nuxated Iron to all who feel the need of renewed energy and the regularity of bodily functions.

Former United States Senator, Charles A. Towne, graduated from the University of Michigan, twice elected member of the United States Congress, served in the United States Senate, nominated for Vice-President, takes Nuxated Iron, now recommends it to all who feel the need of renewed energy.

Spanking Doesn't Cure

Don't think children can be cured of bed-wetting by spanking them. The trouble is constitutional, the child cannot help it. I will send to any mother my successful home treatment, with full instructions. If your children trouble you in this way, send no money, but write me to-day. My treatment is highly recommended to adults troubled with urine difficulties by day or night. Address.

READY!

In the newspapers there recently appeared articles telling of the arrival of the American fleet at Queenstown—telling how the Officers of the English Navy had gone to Vice-Admiral Sims and asked him when he would be ready for action. Every American thrilled with pride at his answer—

"WE CAN START AT ONCE."

"READY TO START AT ONCE"—What a wonderful motto for every man, and yet how many of us realize that at any moment we may suddenly be called away from Business, from Home and Friends, from this world of ours to pass in to the Great Beyond.

Are you Mr. Reader, "READY TO START AT ONCE?" Have you made provision for those dependent on you should the call come?

"READY TO START AT ONCE." No man can do more—we cannot afford to do less.

If your loved ones are not already protected against such an emergency you had better act while you have the opportunity. To-morrow may be too late.

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will protect your Dependents providing you do your duty while the opportunity is yours.

Armistice For Another Month

BRITISH DESTROYER GOES TO BOTTOM

NO SENSATIONAL CHANGES IN NEW ADMIRALTY BOARD

Behind the Board is a Re-organized War Staff for Which Some of the Most Brilliant Younger Men Have Been Chosen--Admiral Wemyss Will Be Responsible For Larger Questions of Naval Policy---Successful British Raid Near Loos.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 12.—The new Admiralty Board is announced. There is nothing sensational or dramatic about the list of names, and only one naval member of the Board was not serving at the Admiralty when Admiral Sir John Jellicoe was the head. He is Rear-Admiral Sydney R. F. Remantle, who becomes Deputy Chief of Staff to Vice-Admiral Sir Rosslyn Wemyss, the new First Sea Lord. Archibald S. Hurd, the naval critic, in commenting on the new Board says it is apparent that no revolutionary disturbance of the main lines of naval policy is indicated. He adds that behind the new Board is the reorganized war staff for which some of the most brilliant younger officers have been chosen.

The new Admiralty Board, a despatch to London on January 9 said, will be divided into three departments, operations in home waters, operations overseas, and trade protection operations. Admiral Wemyss will be chief of naval staff, and responsible for large questions of naval policy.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, January 12. — Early this morning our troops successfully raided the enemy's trenches east of Loos capturing a few prisoners, the War Office announces. There is nothing further to report.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, January 12.—Artillery fighting on the Verdun front is reported by the War Office. The announcement follows: The night was marked by the violent activity of artillery in the sector between Beaumont and Bezonvaux, Verdun front. South east of Bezonvaux the French made a raid and brought back prisoners.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, January 12. — The Bolsheviki newspaper Pravda, in commenting on President Wilson's address to Congress, describes the President as head of the rapacious American imperialism and as the greatest hypocrite history has ever known.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, January 12.—General Charters, now of Field Marshal Haig's staff, has been appointed transport post general, according to the Manchester Guardian. General Sir Herbert Lawrence will succeed him. The newspaper hinted that "a more important change" is shortly to be announced.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, January 12.—The acceptance by the Central Powers of Foreign Minister Trotsky's proposal to continue the Russo-German armistice on all front for an additional month, was formerly announced to-day. The armistice heretofore agreed upon expired to-day.

House Near Crawford's Grove Destroyed By Fire Last Night

The house and driving sheds at the corner of Cameron street and Monaghan Road, belonging to Mr. John Clancy, were burned to the ground last night shortly after eleven o'clock. Mr. Clancy lives at the corner of King and Rubidge sctreets, but has worked a market garden several blocks north of Crawford's Grove. He has been keeping poultry during this weather and visited the place daily. It is not known how the fire originated, but it left nothing of the house and driving sheds. The poultry shed escaped, it was stated, but Mr. Clancy lost the waggons and garden implements in the shed.

Court Chemong Held Meeting And Banquet

The regular meeting of Court Chemong, 539, I.O.F., was held on Thursday evening, Chief Ranger Bro. McKee presiding. In addition to the usual business, a number of applications for membership were presented, having been secured by Bro. S. B. Lynde, D. S.C.R. The following officers were duly installed by Bro. S. B. Lynde, D.S.C. R., of Toronto:

Companions Mrs. A. Bradshaw, Miss E. Rhodehouse, Brothers Dr. Carmichael, Messrs. W. G. McKee, G. Metcalfe, O. E. Grose, J. W. Buyers, G. W. Powell, W. Madill, H. A. Webb, W. Brown, F. Clark, H. E. Counley and H. J. Jones.

The members then assembled around the banquet table, where the refreshments supplied by Coleman Bros. were all that could be desired. Mrs. A. Bradshaw presided over the banquet table, which was very tastefully decorated with flowers from the Peterborough Floral Co. The after-dinner speeches were features of the evening, and the following officers gave their reports: Bro. Madill, treasurer's reports outlined the income and expenditure of the local Court, which showed a substantial balance in the bank, being the best in all the 14 years that Bro. Madill has held office.

Bro. G. W. Powell, financial secretary's report, showed that he had held the membership well as there had been few lapses or suspensions during the past year.

Bro. J. W. Buyers, recording secretary, stated that the social department of the Court had been well maintained, although this had been limited owing to the war conditions and out of respect and honour for the members defending the Empire in France, two of whom had made the supreme sacrifice. Bro. S. B. Lynde, D.S.C.R., addressed the Court in the interests of the Order, which was now over 100 per cent. sound. He also stated having got 90 new members in an eastern Court during the past year.

Miss Eva Rhodehouse presided at the piano, which added greatly to the evening's enjoyment.

MR. RYERSON RITCHIE,
Well-known Peterborough citizen, who has been appointed to an important position on the staff of the United States' Fuel Administrator.

PETERBOROUGH MAN ON STAFF OF U. S. FUEL ADMINISTRATOR

Mr. Ryerson Ritchie, Prominent as a Chamber of Commerce Specialist Has Enlisted in the United States Civil Service For Period of War

AN IMPORTANT POSITION

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 12.—Ryerson Ritchie, a native and summer resident of Peterborough, Ont., has been appointed a member of the personal staff of Dr. H. A. Garfield, United States Fuel Administrator. Mr. Ritchie has enlisted in the Civil Service for the period of the war. His selection for this important post is due to his high standing in the United States, as a Chamber of Commerce and institutional specialist, and his task will be advisory and executive, touching the organization of the United States Fuel Administration Headquarters.

Mr. Ritchie has done much for, and served at the head of, important institutions throughout the United States. In Cincinnati he was secretary of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association there 1892-5, secretary of the Commercial Club, Kansas City 1895-99, secretary of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce 1902-8, president of the American Trust Co. 1908, president of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, 1910, secretary of the McKinley National Memorial Association 1901, secretary of the Detroit Board of Commerce 1903-8, executive director of the Boston Merchants' Association 1908. He conducted the merger of several commercial bodies in Boston in 1909, and has since been executive director of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. In 1913-14 he organized the New Jersey State Chamber of Commerce, an institution with State-wide influence, well known throughout the U. S. for its public, educational and legislative service.

BRITISH DESTROYER FOUNDERS

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Jan. 12.—The British destroyer Racoon struck the rocks off the Irish coast on Wednesday and foundered, it is announced officially.

The Racoon was built in 1910. She was 265 feet long and displaced 915 tons. She was armed with one four-inch and three three-inch guns and two torpedoe tubes. Her normal complement was 105 men.

The Admiralty announces that Lieut. Georgs Napier and all the crew were lost when the Racoon foundered at 2 a.m. Wednesday in a blinding snow storm.

Grand Trunk Conductor and Two Brakemen Are Burned to Death in the Caboose in the Mimico Yards This Morning

REAR-END COLLISION

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Jan. 12.— Grand Trunk Conductor Meise and Brakemen E. Battman and H. Barnham, all of Belleville, Ont., were burned to death in their caboose following a rear-end collision at the Mimico yards during a blinding snow storm this morning.

May Last Several Days

Cold Weather Will Follow To-day's Blizzard

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 12.— All of Ontario and most of the east of Canada is to-day in the grip of heavy westerly gales with more or less snowfall, leaving very cold weather in their trail. The weatherman predicts that winds may moderate to-night and the weather become clear and steady. All Ontario is warned to fill up the wood bins and coal box if possible, as this cold dip may last several days. In some parts of the province snow storms have completely tied up the telegraphic and rail communication.

SWITCHMAN IS KILLED

Canadian Press Despatch:

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Jan. 12.— Orville Dawson, Michigan Central switchman, while coupling cars in a blinding snow storm to-day, slipped and fell under his train and was cut to pieces.

Was A Cold December

The monthly weather report of the Toronto Observatory for December came out to-day, and as being the official pronouncement of weather conditions over the whole Dominion, is worthy of reproduction. It says in part:

Over the far northwestern portions of the Dominion, in Yukon and Northern Alberta, the past month was the coldest December ever recorded since regular observations have been taken, and from Saskatchewan eastward over Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec, and into the western parts of the Maritime Provinces, there have been but some two or three colder. In Dawson, Yukon, the mean temperature for the month was 52 degrees below zero, about 42 degrees below average. In Alberta the negative departure ranged from 15 degrees below average at Calgary, to 25 degrees below at Edmonton. In Saskatchewan the negative departure was about 18 degrees, in Manitoba from 11 to 16 degrees, in Ontario and Quebec from 7 degrees to 13 degrees below in Cape Breton. Westward from western districts to only 1 degree below in Cape Breton. Westward from Southern Alberta to Vancouver Island the negative departure gradually lessened, until at the coast the mean was but 1 degree below normal. The great cold set in over Yukon during the first few days of the month, and soon spread into the Western Provinces, and then eastward, lasting with few intermissions throughout the month. In Ontario and Quebec there were not over six days when the daily mean was average or above.

A CHEERING OUTLOOK.

If Germany is beaten and Russia breaks up into a number of weak states, it would seem that the dangers which once threatened the British Empire had been laid at rest until such time as the strength of Canada and Australia had been greatly increased. Complete defeat of Germany would leave the United States, a friendly power, the only country really in a class with the British Empire. It was supposed prior to the war, that the binding of Canada, Australia and South Africa to Great Britain was weak, but events have proved its remarkable strength. — Rochester Times.

MILLING PERCENTAGE OF WHEAT MAY BE INCREASED

Such a Step is Contemplated at Ottawa With a View to Increasing the Exportable Surplus of Canadian Wheat.

WAR BREAD NOT LIKELY

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Jan. 12. — While Canadians in future may have to eat bread made from flour in which there is a greater milling percentage of wheat retained than in the very fine flour at present milled, it is a mistake to predict that "war bread" will be consumed for the present at least. War bread contains 25 per cent. of coarse grain flour. That is, there is mixed with the wheat flour one quarter of barley and rye flour. The scarcity of coarse grains in Canada and the great need of all available supplies for purposes of cattle and hog food precludes the possibility of their use for flour.

What is contemplated and what is actually being discussed is the question of increasing the exportable surplus of Canadian wheat by increasing the milling percentage of wheat retained in the flour used for Canadian consumption. Canada manufactures the finest and purest flour in the world. In no country is there a greater percentage of wheat utilized for food purposes. The maximum percentage of wheat retained in the flour is 72. In Great Britain that percentage went as high as 93, but it is stated that flour with such a high percentage was found to be injurious to the digestion, especially of small children, and the percentage has been decreased. It is believed that as a result of the conferences held here the milling percentage of wheat retained in flour to be manufactured here will be increased from 72 to 76.

WHOLE CONTINENT IN GRASP OF BLIZZARD

CHICAGO, January 12.—A blizzard extending from the Arctic to the Gulf of Mexico, and from the Rocky Mountains to the Alleghenies, and accompanied by low temperatures ranging from forty below zero up, paralyzed steam railroads and street car traffic at many points to-day. Over practically the entire territory covered by the blizzard to-day train schedules have been upset and at all large terminals many trains have been annulled. The heavy snow fall in the winter wheat districts was said to have greatly benefitted the crop outlook.

POPE BENEDICT MAY TRY AGAIN TO WEAVE PEACE FABRIC

It is Stated in Rome That He Has Called Attention of Emperor Karl of Austria to the War Aims Message of President Wilson

DEPENDS ON AMERICA

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By John Hearly.)

ROME, Jan. 12.— Intimations that Pope Benedict had diplomatically called the attention of Emperor Karl, of Austria, to President Wilson's war aims message and suggested that he seek to influence the Kaiser's consideration of these peace terms, was made in influential Vatican circles to-day. Official comment on the matter was refused at the Vatican.

The report, however, declared the Pope had called the attention of the Catholic monarch of Austria-Hungary to the correspondence which had been exchanged relative to the Pope's own peace terms as bearing on the consideration now of the President's terms. There were persistent although unofficial rumours to-day that the Holy Father would eventually gather up the threads of Allied terms and these stated by the Central Powers, and from these try to weave a fabric which would serve as ground work for peace.

The Pope regards America as a most democratic element which would be a party to a peace conference—the party which would be the least likely to insist on rigorous terms. Therefore, although the Holy Father was "horrified at the constant widening of the sea of blood," as one Vatican official put it, the fact was hinted that the Pope welcomed America's entrance into the war as likely in the end to result in a more democratic peace agreement.

PRESENTATION TO REV. MR. McKEE

Pastor of Selwyn Methodist Church Receives Fur-lined Coat

A pleasant evening was spent by the members and friends of Selwyn Methodist Church, Bridgenorth Circuit, on Tuesday, January 8th, when they gathered to present to their pastor, Rev. J. Gladstone McKee, B.A., a beautiful fur-lined coat with Persian lamb collar. Together with the gift was the following address:

Dear Mr. McKee,—We, your friends of Selwyn Appointment have gathered together on this, the threshold of another year, to extend to you our good wishes. During the time that you have been our pastor, you have won our esteem. You have always been sympathetic and kind, always interested in our welfare, and especially in the younger members of our community, and those who have been sick and afflicted, for which we feel deeply grateful. We have learned to look upon you as a true friend who is willing at all times to lend a helping hand, and to minister to our spiritual needs.

We feel that you are worthy of some recognition, and we ask you to accept this gift, not for its value, but because it is donated as a token of our everlasting friendship; and our earnest prayer is that Me who rules the Universe may spare you to enjoy its comforts.

And now as you are entering upon another year's work, we hope that you will be cheered and encouraged, and that God will grant you a happy and prosperous year.

WOMEN'S FIRST RESOLVE SHOULD BE WIN-THE-WAR EFFORT

Mrs. Pankhurst Jubilant Over the Granting of Suffrage to Women in Britain and United States Says Votes Are Useless Unless War is Won

MAKE COUNTRY SAFE

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Lowell Mellett.)

LONDON, Jan. 12.— "The old quarrel of men with women is over now. We can work together for the good of humanity."

Trembling with excitement and joy, this was Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst's exclamation to-day when she learned of the action of the United States' representatives in approving equal suffrage in America.

"I wish—I wish—well," she remarked, "words do not go far enough to tell how deeply I feel. It was perfectly splendid of them and President Wilson supported the cause. The fact that the women of Britain and America got enfranchisement on the same day, is a happy augury. It forecast the common success of their countries in future.

Our first thought following the action of our own House of Lords in approving suffrage was our solemn responsibility on receiving the vote. At a time when the country is endangered and so much is at stake, the women's party's first resolve should be to increase their win-the-war efforts. If we lost the war, votes will be useless. Women's first duty is to make the country safe. No doubt the women of America feel the same. I am glad to offer congratulation to our American sisters. We rejoice in their success as much as our own."

EXPLANATION TO R. C. BRAUND'S PATRONS

In the important wholesale grocery list published by R. C. Braund, a typographical error occurred in the price of Prunes. Mr. Braund is offering a 10-lb. box of 20c Prunes for $1.95, not $1.75 as incorrectly printed. This explanation is due to those customers who have been demanding the $1.75 price. See the advertisement in another column.

MR. ELLIOT SETTLES WITH FIRE INSURANCE ADJUSTERS

Big Claim For Damages Satisfactorily and Promptly Settled

The adjustment of the fire and water loss sustained by Mr. T. C. Elliott in the fire of Wednesday morning has been adjusted speedily and satisfactorily to all concerned. When it is considered that the enormous stock carried by the Elliot stores and the possibility of damage in many of the departments, both the adjusters and Mr. Elliot were evidently of the same opinion as to the extent of the loss ustained. Mr. Elliot speaks highly of the treatment he received and fairness of the manner of negotiations of the adjusters who met him, representing the Companies with whom he carried insurance.

TORNADOES TAKE HEAVY TOLL OF LIFE

Canadian Press Despatch:

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 12.—With the entire south in the grip of its worst snow and sleet storm of the winter to-day, early reports showed that the tornadoes which swept through Eastern Alabama and Central Georgia had taken a toll of sixteen lives and injured more than 100 persons. Wire communication over a great area was paralyzed.

RESPECT THE NEW ARMY.

We are to have a considerable body of soldiers quartered in Peterborough this winter. In a sense, they are our guests, and they should receive the treatment that civilized convention decrees as due. We have had a great deal of talk and invective against the "slacker" in the days of voluntary recruiting. Such talk even used sometimes by injudicious recruiting officials has done a great deal of harm; and there may yet be a disposition to regard the soldiers enrolled under compulsory service as still "slackers" since they have not voluntarily entered the service, and to govern our attitude towards them accordingly. This will be wrong and serve no good purpose. We should not reproach them, but welcome and acclaim them as soldiers of the King, as patriotic and loyal to the cause, and, as good fighters as those who have expressed their patriotism and loyalty by voluntary enlistment.

All those who being physically fit for service who did not volunteer were not "slackers" in the offensive sense of the word. Many, if not the majority, had good and sufficient reasons in their domestic and business relations, in their relations to the war work necessary to be done at home and needing somebody to do it. There was not the same urgency for soldiers; it was thought that the large contingents would be sufficient to help win the war, which nobody dreamed would last so long as it has done.

While the majority, perhaps, of volunteers that went to the colours were animated by enthusiasm for service and patriotic desire to do their part, thousands were animated by no such desires. Love of adventure, lust for new sentiments in life, new experiences, the novelty of military life, becoming uniform, influenced thousands to join the ranks who had no thought of patriotism in taking the step for that sake.

It is to be remembered that when the voluntary recruiting wave was at its flow that times were hard and employment scarce. The cry of unemployment was loud, considering that its bed and board were assured at least. It was better than no pay at all, and thousands were drawn into the ranks by the certainty of employment which was not otherwise obtainable. In this very city a young man with a small family dependent upon him, enlisted. Asked why, under the circumstances, he voluntarily assumed the risks and hardships of military service, he replied: "I had to enlist or starve."

When times grew better and war conditions brought plentiful and well-paid employment, there was a lull in voluntary recruiting, and, owing to many causes it was almost at an end.

Then it was considered necessary to employ compulsory measures for obtaining soldiers, as we employ others forms of compulsion in civil administration. If the payment of taxes, customs dues, etc., were left to voluntary action alone shouldn't we, in these respects, have a rather plentiful crop of "slackers"? And some of them would be the very men who talked most about "slackers" in the matter of enlistment, and might be the first to jeer at the soldiers of our new army as "slackers brought to time."

But we must not do anything of the kind. We must regard the soldiers enrolled under the Military Service Act as just as truly soldiers of Canada and the Empire as those that have "gone over the top" before them; and they deserve our applause and approval and encouragement. They are as obviously fit as any Canadian soldier of the past, and when they shall have settled into harness, got into the work, they will show as much enthusiasm, and when it comes to the fighting test they will do their shars in maintaining the credit of Canadian soldiers as the best fighting men in the war.

President Wilson is taking a chance of having to tighten the belt a little by releasing for export to the Allies 90 million bushels of wheat of the reserve held for home consumption.

WASTE AND THRIFT.

A correspondent calls attention to a local failure to neutralize waste by thrift or salvage. He is surprised that there is no collection of waste papers, formerly used to supplement funds for patriotic purpose. A lady interested in such work explained that collection of waste paper was abandoned because the drop in price did not make collection profitable.

Though this is an instance of one thing that has dropped in price, it does not help impress one of the most valuable lessons this war has taught— one of the most important compensations. The war has brought the people and governments of the warring nations a new sense of responsibility and service, has revolutionized the attitude of workers and capitalists, of autocrats and producers, and it has introduced a new constructive spirit, the spirit of substituting salvage for waste— the welding of destruction and conservation.

Great Britain in the short space of a few months has organized the most gigantic war machinery ever known; but it has done more. The cost of all this has been staggering, but it is not all loss; there is profit. In other wars, and at the beginning in this war, every implement and equipment of war, from howitzers to harness, when damaged, was dore and that was "and end on."

Now the salvage of articles, the utilization of war waste, constitutes a war office department fully developed and wonderfully organized. Now all the debris of battle, the wreckage of war that was formerly heaped and buried, is well utilized. Almost before the smoke of battle is dispersed, organized squads are gathering abandoned steel helmets, rifles, belts, blankets, haversacks, bayonets, shell cases, bombs, grenades, leggings, boots and uniforms, which are shipped to a central depot to be restored.

In the matter of uniforms, as one instance among scores, there has been tremendous saving. Formerly the wreckage of uniforms was sold for rags at $250 per ton, only the buttons being saved. Now, under the new system, adopted since 1915, only the actual rags are sold; the near-rags of uniforms are sent to the great Ordnance Depot, Paris, to be restored. Here nearly four thousand women are employed in salvage of uniforms, etc., and the British government thereby saves twelve million dollars a year—from salvaged equipment, made usable, that formerly went to waste.

This is only one example of the immense aggregate. In 1916 4 million pairs of shoes were salvaged, a saving of millions of dollars. Nowhere is the saving more marked and even picturesque than in the former greatest source of waste—food—with millions of men to feed. There is not only organized practice of thrift in the preparation of food and distribution of food that represents a saving of twenty million dollars a year, but the scraps are saved and utilized. Even the bones are boiled to extract the fat and this is sent to England for soap-making and the productions of glycerine to be used in high explosives. The result of the salvage operations in the matter of food scraps alone, was that enough glycerine was obtained from "waste" army fat to provide the propellant for eighteen million eighteen-pound shells. This means that about 1,800 tons of glycerine was obtained in one year from the refuse, the waste, of war camp kitchens. The aggregate of astonishing results, of systematic war salvage, is an object lesson that will not only have lasting effects upon the government, but the people of great Britain, and be a perpetual national benefit. If we in Canada take the lesson to heart, we shall avoid, or turn to good use, the waste that takes place in nearly every household and industry in the land.

When the war needs, for food, especially, are remembered, the duty of saving food, so that we shall have more—of an edertable kind—to send overseas, will appeal to us with new force.

Among the costly lessons taught by this war, not the least valuable will be, the lessons of thrift and saving, which in addition to the new impulse of initiative and cooperation, and capacity for doing great things, will make the war and our share in it, grievous as the burden has been, a blessing, not in disguise, but in plain, palpable benefits in the way of strengthening the national character, and the capacity for achievement, and giving us a spirit we did not before possess.

Journal—"Out There" makes a tremendous appeal to the better side of humanity."

Times—"There is more that is good and true and appealing in "Out There" than in any other play the great war has brought to our stage."

American—"Out There" is one of the most genuinely effective plays that New York has ever seen."

Globe—"In "Out There" Manners has done the best work of his life. Nothing happens but reality."

World—"Out There" grips its audience and holds it in its spell."

Sun—"There has not been any first-night audience this season which has been so moved to tears and laughter and back again to tears and then such spontaneous and vociferous expressions of pleasure."

ADMINISTERING THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—During the progress of the Victory Loan, in conversation with a prominent citizen, the conversation turned on the war being the cause of bringing into existence a large number of societies the object of which is to assist soldiers and their families; and the opinion was expressed that the feeling was growing that the management of some was more expensive than might be in this connection. The Patriotic Fund was mentioned, and the party said, "You bring it up and I will back you up."

The contributions to this fund have been largely voluntary, and it would be expected that the management would be with the strictest economy.

At a meeting some time past, Alderman Dobbin was reported to have said that "it was economically managed, costing 1½ per cent." Last year's fund was, I believe, reported as $60,000, costing $900, for administration of a fund that would seem to lend itself to easy distribution.

I would suggest that the management in future be given to some returned soldier and assist some one who has been disabled in the defense of our country and world liberty.

The annual report might contain the number of cheques issued monthly, also the name of all taking part in distribution of the fund with the amount paid each, with audit statement.

JOHN RIDDELL.
Homewood Avenue, Jan. 12th.

Peterborough, Jan. 11, 1918.

The Editor, Examiner:

Sir,—A great number of farmers have been inquiring of me as to the question of exemption from military service of farmers, their sons and hired help, who have failed to get exemption from the Tribunals, and there seems to be much misunderstanding in the matter.

In particular, some have been in to me who had interviewed the Warden, who was appointed Agricultural Representative, and thought because they had stated their cases to him there was nothing else to do and as a result the applications for exemption have been turned down. In all these cases, the proper course to be followed is to at once send in another appeal to the higher Tribunal. The office of the Agricultural Representative is not to override the Tribunals, but to advise those Tribunals, and press the farmers' claims.

The Department of Agriculture have decided that the following help is necessary on the farms:

100 acres—2 men, or 1 man and 2 boys over 14 years.

150 acres—2 men and one boy over 14 years.

200 acres—3 men.

Farmers will be able by this schedule to see whether the claims that have been turned down have a chance to succeed or not, and wherever they feel they have not got justice an appeal should be put in in proper form, and if the time has expired leave to appeal can be obtained, and of course, the assistance of the Agricultural Representative should also be invoked in the proper manner.

Yours, etc.,
Jas. Guise-Bagley,
440 Water street,
Peterborough.

PARTY OR NO PARTY.

Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Some few days ago I read in your valuable paper a word of prophecy or warning from a correspondent. He said, as I understood him, that the next struggle in the Provincial arena would be Rum-Dry Prohibition versus The Present State of Affairs. Now, I consider from what I hear on the street that that is about right. The representation will be settled, moreover, before the electors get to the polls, provided the right men or the wrong men are chosen on both sides, unless the women electors come forward with some candidate belonging to no party and having no party or following, which is the same thing, behind him or her.

"Which party do you belong to?" says I to an elector one fine morning on my way to the shop. "No party," says he proudly. "Have ye no friends?" says I. "Divil the friend," says he. "I am independent and will have neither policy, principle, party nor friends." "How many parties are there in the world?" says I. "I think there are four thousand. Wherever two or three are gathered together that is party, whether for good or ill. You can call it a congregation if you like, or an assembly, or a battalion, but where a number of people band themselves together they are a party—unless they have no common principles uniting them, when they are a mob. First of all, you begin by hanging to the tail of some superior intellect's skirt or shirt, according as it is a woman or man. By and by you and the rest of the queue get thinking for yourselves and form a great party with great principles for the permanent government of the country. Then parasites arise and some mistake them for the party and condemn the party system. As well might one condemn commerce and trading because of crooks and sharks."

Just ask yourself, dear reader, what would really happen if there were no parties? Would the average elector not be at the mercy of some designing individual? Don't run away with the idea that the name of a dog indicates the breed of the dog. His name might be Measles or Smallpox, and yet he might be a dear little chicken-spaniel, or his name might be Fido, and he might be well qualified by nature and temper to tear the seat out of your pants. Principles, not names or individuals, are the things to follow, and then you will be sure of what you are doing and of your associates. What party do you belong to? The party that thinks and acts right. Let that be your motto. To be quite independent of all parties is often to be merely lazy or designing or balky, or all combined. All great movements are carried out by that form of union called "party."—Yours, etc., Politicus.

As the old saying goes---it is an ill wind that blows no one any good. So in this instance it is our loss and your gain. We don't like it but it is one of those things over which we have no control. If ever the people in Peterboro had an opportunity to buy good merchandise at a mere trifle of its true worth it will be at this sale. Every Dollars worth must be sold right to the bare walls in order to permit us to re-model the store. Prices and costs are forgotten. Everything Must Go. Nothing Reserved.

Regular Prices Shattered Like Dynamite

To the careful and shrewd buyer, to the thrifty, to the careless and the poor, here is your chance. Our government in this great world crisis tells us to save. Just one word to you now. When this sale opens you will see men and women slipping and gliding out of our store with glee because of the big purchases they have made for little money. Far be it from us to exaggerate or make any statement that is not going to be a credit to our store. So when we give you our word there is no use hesitating. So don't delay. Put in your supply for years to come. The bargains are here. The Values are real. It will pay you to borrow the money. Such a colossal event never before known in Peterboro.

BLUE BANDS FOR CONVALESCENT HEROES

The "Blue Badge of Honour" familiar to everyone in England as the mark of a man suffering from disabilities incurred in his country's service, will appear in Canada shortly when the 11,938 men on the strength of the Military Hospitals Commission Command will be issued blue arm bands.

The blue band will distinguish the man who has done his bit from the men of the new reinforcement units, and will be worn by all soldiers who are patients of the military convalescent hospitals in Canada.

Of the 11,938 men who are eligible for this honour to-day, 9,836 are patients enrolled for treatment in the convalescent hospitals, 1,368 are patients in sanatoria, and 734 patients in various other hospitals.

With the opening of 1917 there were only 2,620 men on the strength of the command, but as the transports have been taking the newly troops across, the hospital ships have been bringing the invalids back, and the increase in the population of the convalescent hospitals has been steady.

It has now become advisable here, as in England, to issue to the men who are patients in the hospitals and at present disqualified for further service, some mark which makes them distinguishable from fresh forces.

The "Blue Badge of Honour" will hereafter enable the public to identify those men who have sacrificed so much for their country's cause and who have not as yet recovered sufficiently to be discharged.

REPAIRS COMPLETED AT RECEIVING DEPOT

The Receiving Depot of the Military Hospitals Commission on Pier 2 at Halifax, which was badly damaged in the great explosion, has been repaired and is now ready to receive the ships from overseas bearing the invalids and disabled men back to Canada.

Immediately on receipt of the news of the disaster Lt.-Col. J. J. Sharples, C.O. of the Military Hospitals Commission Command, left Ottawa for the scene to offer all the aid which the military hospitals could afford in the care of the injured. On his arrival arrangements were immediately made to restore the big depot which has received thousands of men in the past year, and the work has been completed.

In the interim the men returning were landed in New York and train service, handicapped by lack of coal, delayed their homecoming considerably. The value of the Military Hospitals Commission in the splendid facilities and organization of Halifax for the care of returning soldiers, has gained a new appreciation in this one experience.

THE ONLY MEDICINE THE BABY NEEDS

Baby's Own Tablets is the only medicine a mother needs for her little ones. They are a gentle but thorough laxative which instantly relieve all stomach and bowel disorders thus banishing all the minor ills of little ones. Concerning them Mrs. Jos. Levesque, St. Simon, Que., says: "Baby's Own Tablets are a marvelous medicine for little ones. They never fail to cure stomach and bowel troubles and neither my sister-in-law or myself would use any other medicine for our little ones." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The trouble with most true stories is that it is customary to add a few lies to make them interesting.

BREADLINES VANISH WITH WAR.

War has done what peace in many a long year did not accomplish—it has cut down to nothing the Bowery breadlines. This it must have effected by providing work at a living wage, or better, for all the men who used to stand in those lugubrious lines every Winter and all Winter.

Therein lies a special interest, because of the fact that in the past we were so often told by some that the breadliners would not work if they had the chance, and by others that they, or many of them, wouldn't work if they would. Both contentions, seemingly, were false. At any rate, the present situation throws doubt upon them both, and the doubt may lead to a new investigation of breadlines, if they reappear with the return of peace.—New York Times.

BATTLE STORIES FROM THE WEST FRONT

Cavalry Talk By "Z"

The regular soldier one can pick out at once. He does his hair in a distinctive fashion, and there is an air of trimness, a dapper alertness, even when he is in bed wounded, which marks his admirable type. The regular soldier of the old "Contemptibles" is a type, but the cavalry man of the old army is type within the type, something the same as the general run in disciplined smartness, yet, in addition, distinctly a cavalary soldier. He has more swagger than the "footslogger." Heavy dragoon or light hussar, there is an added swing to his walk which may be a legacy from the days when his kind wore the dolman.

One saw at once that one man sitting up in bed in a London hospital bore all the marks of the regular horse soldier. He looked clean and alert, his red tie was neatly knotted, his hair was carefully soaped into a dashing "quiff"—his own word for it. His talk was interesting.

"Cavalary soldier?" one asked.

"Yessir," with a flash of white teeth under the trim moustache.

"Regular?"

"Yessir, six years' service—three years of this do."

"Where do you come from now?"

"This Cambrai do," said the soldier, "machine-gun bullet in the leg—smashed the thigh bone—expect my leg will be a bit shorter after this. Still the doctors say I shall be able to ride again and that's something. This is my third 'Blighty'."

"How did they happen, this one particularly?"

"I got the lot about the same place—I mean in the same bit of country. I was with General Allenby in the retreat and we had a pretty thick time. It was just this side of Cambrai when I got my first packet. We were covering the retreat of the infantry and I was shot at from a distance. I got it in the right arm and after a bit I was sent home.

"I went out again and had a long spell in the trenches. Was in the trenches in front of Cambrai after the Germans retreated back on St. Quentin. A pip-squeak got me between the knees and this was another 'Blighty.' I was at home for five months and went out to the regiment again, back to the same bit of the front.

"If anyone that saw the preparation behind the lines before this Cambrai 'do' couldn't spot that there was something on, he must have been blind. You can feel a push, sniff it in the air almost, long before it comes off. Everybody goes about sort of excited, not jumpy or that, but just like kids feel two or three days before the Sunday school beano—eager.

"Of course, the great question for the cavalry was, 'Are we going to be used as cavalry?' We got the word to stand by all right, and then the fun began. Along goes the Tanks and lays the wire flat. The next word is, 'Mount!' and off we went. It was a surprise to me to see how steady the youngsters was. Full of ginger and laughin' like mad, of course—most of the youngsters are like that. But you know we reckon it takes a bit longer trainin' than the most of these lads to make a cavalry soldier. Anyhow, these boys was all right, proper soldiers, sat well and kept their dressin'.

Like the Good Old Days.

"It was like the good old days to feel yourself mounted again, to hear the drummin' of the horses' hoofs as the troop trots on good grassy land. By the time we got into action our infantry was in the second line of German trenches. It was marvellously good goin' after we passed the second line, and the infantry gave us a cheer as we passed them. It was open country after that, and we hadn't gone far before we came to a packet of Germans trying to stop us with a machine-gun or so. We were too near them to get down to it and we nipped into a charge. Fine! The Germans started to run too late, and there was something doing for our lances. It was the first time in the war for me to use my lance. I got one Boche as neat as a wild pig, and one youngster I saw get two, one after the other. It was neat little toss-up though it only lasted a couple of minutes.

Taking a Farm House.

"The next thing that happens was when we got up against a farm-house. It was down a little hollow an' naturally the troop was a good target against the sky-line. The Germans were putting it into us with machine-guns pretty good, so the officer gives the order for dismounted action. There was a bit of trench outside the house and it looked as "if the trench more than the house itself was givin' the trouble. We dismounts a machine-gun and planked it behind the crest of the little hill that fronted the hollow where the farm house was. The gunners put up the nobbiest little barrage you ever saw and we lay down and peppered the trench for a while. There was a sunken road leading up to the house, and our officer detached a party to go round that way and take the Fritzes in the flank, while the rest of us kidded the Germans we were going to attack in force.

"In a very little time we heard the other shape open fire at close range on the Germans' right flank and with that the officer nips on to his feet and we went in with the bayonet. All the time our Emma Gees puts over the nobby little barrage. When we got down ot the trench the Fritzes were clambering out of it, and retiring behind the house, but we were there in time to get in amongst them with the bayonet. There was three machine guns in the house, and they kept up a fire into the mix-up; it seemed as if they didn't care whom they hit as long as they kept up firing.

"Some of the Germans didn't get into the house. They were running like mad away from us and we just naturally made the most of the target. I was standing firing after the Germans running away, when I got mine in the leg; it crumpled under me and I dropped. It must have been almost the last shot from the house, for the German fire stopped when I hit the ground. Our fellows were in the house, and the next thing I saw was the Fritzes doin' the 'Kamerad' business. I was pretty sick with the shock of the bullet—it hits you a fair wallop when it gets a bone—but I couldn't help laughin' at the German officer. He was a fat man an' he came out of the house with his hands up, tryin' to keep his dignity. It was a funny thing, as funny a thing as I've ever seen. This fat officer almost doin' the goose-step, head up, but pop-eyed and holdin' up his hands wit, the rest of them.

"Some infantry and a Tank came along soon after, and not long after that I was taken back by a couple of Fritz prisoners. The queer thing about that fight was how all the time it seemed to me that I had done it all before. I've been lookin' at a map an' I could almost bet we defended that farm house in August, '14, on the retreat. I know we had a tidy fight somewhere there with the Uhlans. Anyway, the country was sort of familiar—like you see in a dream."

Cabinless Uncle Tom's Cabin Mr. McAdoo As Simon Legree

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 10.—Simon Legree has beaten poor old Uncle Tom most to death with that "blake-snake" whip. And shame on Simon, Legree!

All these years in which Uncle Tom's Cabin has been playing to the American public, it has been felt by everybody concerned that the villain part, which has to do with the thrashing of the good old negro, Tom, was a bit overdrawn. Chief among those protesters was Uncle Tom himself.

Consider now the action of William G. McAdoo, Director General of the Railroads, declaring that all travel not essential must be reduced to a minimum, and that theatrical troupes must eliminate all baggage, freight and passenger space possible— under penalty of law.

Uncle Tom, it is understood, has made a personal trop to Washington, has hobbled up the Capitol steps and into the office of the director general, has feebly but fervently placed before Mr. McAdoo his case, and has won.

Which is to say that Eliza and her floating ice shall remain, and little Eva and Uncle Tom and Topsy and all the rest. But Simon Legree, the villain, must go.

And every other road show which plays "one night stand" engagements must reduce its belongings. Excess curtains and scenery, animals and the like are to be done away with.

Burlesque shows, it is said, will not be affected. They carry only clothing as baggage.

Emphatic protests already have arrived in Washington from managers of road shows and booking agents of big productions now on the road.

Since most large theatrical companies on the road constantly have in the last few years engaged their own private cars in preference to taking chances on betting hotel accommodation in the smaller towns, the order is doubly disastrous.

"Ten Nights in a Bar Room" that used to travel from Hicksville to Pineview by wagon and horse now slips along the double tracked systems in parlour cars.

Another angle of the ruling affects the circus. One of the three rings is likely to be severed.

HAS CLIMBED MANY GREAT CANADIAN PEAKS

MONTREAL, Jan. 12.—Miss Mary L. Jobe, F.R.G.S., of New York city, a prominent woman alpinist, has just returned from a winter holiday among the peaks of Mount Robson Park in the Canadian Rockies. Her trip was taken for a dual purpose—to gain health and collect information for special contributions to the leading magazines and metropolitan newspapers of the United States.

Miss Jobe has scaled some of the greatest peaks in the Rockies, and on this latest trip, which occupied 55 days, had the opportunity of visiting new territory, her journey taking her two hundred miles north of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, and into a wilderness that few have explored. The territory reached via the Grand Trunk Pacific through Jasper and Mount Robson stations offers probably the most attractive territory in Canad to the mountain climber and lover of scenic beauty. Many of the leading alpinists of America are now planning trips to these re-

SUNDAY AT ST. JOHN'S

There will be deviations from the ordinary form of service at St. John's Church both morning and evening to-morrow. At 11 a.m. the Rector will deliver an important address to the members of the congregation, especially to the men, in regard to future lines of action. In the evening there will be a special musical service in connection with the Epiphany season. There will be no sermon, but instead an illustrated service, entitled "The Epiphany in Scene, Song and Story."

PETERBOROUGH BOY TELLS OF STUNTS IN THE AIR

Lieut. George Logan of Royal Flying Corps Gives Interesting Description of the Advanced Training—Looping-the-Loop in a New Machine

Writing from Ayr, Scotland, Lieut. George Logan, a well-known Peterborough boy with the Royal Flying Corps, and son of Mr. W. A. Logan, Murray Street, gives some interesting impressions of the advanced training in the Flying Corps. His letter is as follows:

Ayr, Scotland, Dec. 16, 1917.

I began the end of my training at C.F.S. the last Friday in November, when after a cross-country chase I made what is called a "posch" landing, which the O.C. called useful, and sent me "to talk to Capt. Windsor," who put me on S.E.5's. They're a wonderful machine—a big long nose in front of you, and that big engine just tears you along space, and how it does roar and talk to you up there in the air! They are exceedingly warm—no draught at all, and the long exhaust manifolds running down each side of "the office" help to keep things warm. They do a beautiful loop—fly the whole loop and you have absolute rudder control all the time—unlike the Moranes, unlike them, too, in that there's no sensation of being suspended in mid-air by your belt when you turn over. You nose her down to a little over normal flying speed, your engine off, or nearly so, and then as you pull back your stick to loop, push the throttle full open, and that wonderful engine just pulls you around in a big perfect loop, and centrifugal force gives you to your seat, and you don't in the least feel like faling. They also do vertical turns beautifully. We put in 15 hours on the S.E.'s. On Friday, the 7th inst., we all prepared to go to Salisbury-a-voting! Before I left I was informed that there was a train leaving Pewsey that night for London, which I was to try to get. (Loud applause from the cheap seats in the gallery as this meant Scotland, which I was hoping for!) In Salisbury it sure was fine to see so many Canadians. First off the bat we began meeting fellows we knew from Borden, etc., but I could hardly believe my eyes when I spotted Wilf. Stratton. It did seem good to see a Peterborough boy. We got back too late to catch the train for Pewsey, so the camp Adjutant said he'd send me to Andover, about 30 miles west, and I'd make same time into London. So at 8.15 one of the Ford tenders called for me and another chap. The girl who drove didn't know the road very well, and there was a heavy fog, so we managed to lose our way a couple of times, once finding ourselves at the end of the road we were following, and right out in a pasture. Well, in flying, you manage to develop a fair sense of direction, and there was little time to spare, so I asked our driver if she would mind hearing a few strains of rush music, as ground out of the Henry Ford by yours truly. She didn't, so little Georgie Porgie had a wallop at it, and, believe me, we made some speedy little tour to Andover! Net result — Train due 9.04, our arrival 9.03, time of departure 9.05. Just slung my luggage aboard and away we went, and arrived in London (Waterloo Station) 10.57. Next morning left St. Pancras Station at 9.10, two special coaches being reserved for the Turnberry crew. It was a beautiful trip, the scenery changing in character frequently, especially on getting into Scotland. Our aerial gunnery course at Turnberry lasted till the 13th, and included ground and aereial practices, also lectures on synchronized fire controls (apparatus for timing gun to shoot through propellor), sights (deflection, etc.), while the air work consisted in firing on rafts in the sea, diving on them with synchronized gun, camera gun practice; towed target (silhouette of enemy machine on a flag towed by another bus, and at which we shot from cars). Then stoppages in the air, i.e., we were sent up with a belt of cartridges with specially prepared stoppages set for us, such as mis-fires, thick rims, cross-feeds and double-feeds, which we had to clear in the air, using but one hand, and being down with the 50 rounds all fired in 15 minutes. Well it takes some humping, as it takes some time to get up and land again, but I managed to squeeze high marks. Friday evening we came over here to Ayr to take the stunting course, after a farewell lecture by Lt.-Col. R. Bell-Irving, brother of the O.C. of 82nd Squadron who was at Borden. It is a fine course, and Ayr is a very nice place of about 25,000. Our quarters are two big residences about a quarter of a mile apart, viz., Carleton House, where I am, and Middleton House. My room-mate is Humbers, of New Zealand. We are only about 15 miles from Kilmarnock. It is nice to be quartered in a town, and very pretty from the air here to see Ayr and the broad beach and the blue sea. Our work here is stunting, formation flying and aerial fighting. These busses are extra strongly rigged to stand the constant strain of stunting. It's great sport to go up and do a few loops, rolls, etc., and then go roof-chasing, banking around big buildings, diving at people on the beach, etc. I used my stunts to pretty good advantage yesterday when I had a scrap with Capt. Maxwell, the success of the manoeuvres being to get on the tail of your opponent's bus. He had a passenger up with him, who said, as also did the Captain, that I put up a good fight. I couldn't have told what I did because really when at that work you merely think of what your opponent is doing, and do something to get you on his tail. When I'd get in a good position I'd dive on him and give my engine bursts to sound like a machine gun. He thought a couple of times I didn't see him, and was going to crash through him, so dived or else did a climbing turn to get out of my way, and found I was still there when he finished up. It's the best sport imaginable, and not exactly slow. Re active service, I expect to go back to my squadron after finishing here, but will then be ready for duty. I'll do my very level best when I get over to the great war, and will not forget to rely not on my own strength or skill, though I'll use these to the best advantage I can, but will look to the God of Battles, as well as of Peace, to give me the necessary strength, firmness of resolve and superiority over my adversaries. In case of my being taken prisoner, which is quite possible, we hear from those who have returned that there is a fine spirit between the rival airmen, and the account of Guynemer's funeral, of which you have doubtless read, is true. This afternoon Halliday and I went to the Pavilion to hear the Newfoundland Band, who were giving a concert in aid of Prisoners of War Fund. It was fine. They are great favourites over here, doing fine work. Their mascot is a beautiful big Newfoundland dog, who sits on the stage throughout the performance with the most bored look imaginable.

Will cable when I leave for France.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat less meat, if you feel Backachy or have Bladder trouble

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless, and makes a delightful effervescent lithiawater drink which millions of men and women use now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

Listless, Peevish Girls

When a girl in her teens becomes peevish, listless and dull; when nothing seems to interest her and dainties do not tempt her appetite, you may be certain that she needs more good blood than her system is provided with. Before long her pallid cheeks, frequent headaches, and breathlessness and heart palpitation will confirm that she is anaemic. Many mothers as the result of their own girlhood experience can promptly detect the early signs of anaemia, and the wise mother does not wait for the trouble to develop further, but at once gives her daughter a course with Dr. Williams Pink Pills, which renew the blood supply and banish anaemia before it has obtained a hold upon the system.

Out of their own experience thousands of mothers know that anaemia is the sure road to worse ills. They know the difference that good red blood makes in the development of womanly health. Every headache, every gasp for breath that follows the slightest exertion by the anaemic girl, every pain she suffers in her back and limbs are reproaches if you have not taken the best steps to give your weak girl new blood, and the only sure way to do so is through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

New, rich, red blood is infused into the system by every dose of these pills. From this new rich blood springs good health, an increased appetite, new energy, high spirits and perfect womanly development. Give your daughter Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and take them yourself and note how promptly their influence is felt in better health.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail post-paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Then there are 30 points given for general neatness, handwriting, spelling, punctuation, etc., and when you comply with the other conditions and rules as below 50 points additional can be gained. 130 points is the maximum number.

Take plenty of time to decipher your answer. Be neat and careful and your entry will compete for the $500.00 reward. the first prize, and the other cash competitive prizes.

"Canada Weekly" (formerly Canada Monthly, established 1906), has created a great reputation for its excellent fiction, its great national articles about Canadians and things Canadian, its broad editorials as well as for its artistic covers and illustrations and its high grade printing and general appearance.

It is the desire of the publishers to put a copy in the hands of every Canadian who has never seen this magazine, and thus introduce it to new readers. "Canada Weekly" is a vigorous magazine with a purely Canadian editorial point of view, as you will see after examining it, and you will probably want to buy it yourself at 5 cents a copy weekly from one of our thousands of boy-salesmen.

You can help us advertise this magazine should you like it, and when you enter the contest you will be asked to write and tell if you are willing to do so. If so, without cost, a sample copy of the latest issue will be sent to you in order that you can do us the small favor of showing it to five or six of your friends or your business acquaintances or in your home neighbourhood.

We frankly tell you of these simple rules in advance. There is no obligation on your part to subscribe or take the magazine or spend any money in order to compete in this contest.

1 Write your solution of the mysterious message on one side of the paper only. Put your address in the upper right hand corner.

2 Boys and Girls under fourteen years of age are not allowed to compete, nor are employees of "Canada Weekly."

3 The judging of the entries in this contest will be done by three well known business men who have no connection with this firm. Prizes will be awarded according to the number of points gained on each entry. Contest will close on 31st day of May, 1918.

4 Each competitor will be asked to show a sample copy of "Canada Weekly" to five or six friends, business associates or neighbours, to whom such a magazine will appeal and who will want to take the magazine regularly.

For these services the publishers guarantee to pay each contestant in cash or by a prize selected by him or her in advance. Such guaranteed reward will be entirely in addition to any competitive prize which may be won. State your willingness to examine the copy of "Canada Weekly" which will be sent to you, and address your reply to

Can England's Church Win England's Manhood?

The above is the title—with the sub-title, "A Study, in Camp, Field, and Hospital, of the Spiritual Condition of English Soldiers'"—of a most interesting pamphlet, written by an army chaplain and published by request of Rt. Rev. Bishop Gwynne, head of the Army Chaplain Service. A request from such a source, with special opportunities for sympathetic understanding of the conditions with which the booklet deals, speaks much for its merit.

Its local interest will be increased by the statement that Major Chaplain Davidson, rctor of St. John's, who has had two years of splendid opportunities of gaining a knowledge of the subjects with which his pamphlet deals, is the author.

The writer lays the foundation of an affirmative response to his question by the statement that even "In the most unpromising men there are at bottom religious foundations." Then comes considerate and moderate suggestions as to how to build on these foundations in order that, when these men return to England they may be permanently won as active elements of Church and religious life; and the lessons of war experience not be lost. There must be distinct changes in methods and attitudes to meet the deamnds of an unparalleled situation, including simplification of service such as has been found effective in arousing interest in camp and field; and other adaptations, such as the cultivation of a more real fellowship between clergy and men, and interesting the laity in church activities.

The little booklet contains many other pertinent suggestions that can only be appreciated by reading them. Their practical value comes from the experience of contact in field and hospital of soul with soul, where much has been learned, so "that whatever others may do, we chaplains can never return to the bygone type of parochial life and work."

The pamphlet is instructive and well worth reading by those seriously interested in the Church as a means of making men religious. It is on sale in Peterborough at Trebilcock Brothers' book store.

PROPHETIC CONFERENCE IN ST. PAUL'S

A conference for the deepening of the spiritual life and the study of prophetic themes will be held in St. Paul's Church on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. Dr. Winchester of Toronto will speak at both services to-morrow, Sunday. His evening subject is from the Book of Daniel. The other speakers who are to take part in the conference are, Rev. F. W. Hollinrake, B.A., B.D., of Barton St. Methodist Church, Hamilton; Rev. F. S. Weston, and Rev. J. R. Turnbull, both Baptist ministers in Toronto. Two addresses will be given at each meeting in the afternoon at 3 o'clock, and in the evening at 8 o'clock, one on some subject dealing with the deepening of the spiritual life, and one on a prophetic theme. Some of the subjects are: The Ministry of the Spirit; The Practical value of the Truth of the Second Advent; The Blessing of the Double Portion, This Dispensation and How It Will End; Israel and the Church a Comparison and a Contrast; The Last Message of the Bible. A cordial invitation is extended to any who may wish to attend.

GREATEST RULE OF HEALTH

With all their differences in regard to disease, its cause and treatment, doctors are of one mind in regard to the one greatest rule of health, viz: "Daily movement of the Bowels." Unnumbered thousands of people suffer almost continuously as the result of constipation who could be readily cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

FINE ATTRACTIONS FOR THE GRAND

Owing to the fact that production was unable to reach Peterborough last Saturday in time for a matinee, Mr. W. F. Turner has been endeavouring to have "Which One Shall I Marry?" come to Peterborough for a return engagement, and has been successful in securing this splendid show for Thursday night, 17th January.

There are some fine attractions billed for the Grand in the next few weeks, including the following:

Monday, Jan. 14—Elsa Ryan in "Our There."

Thursday, Jan. 17—"Which One Shall I Marry?"

Saturday, Jan. 19—"Bringing Up Father."

Monday, Jan. 21—"A Daughter of the Sou."

Thursday, Jan. 24—"Seven Days' Leave."

Saturday, Jan. 26—"Nothing But the Truth."

Monday, Jan. 28—Walter Lawrence in "Come Back to Erin."

Friday and Saturday, Feb. 1 and 2—"Robinson Crusoe."

VOLUNTARY CHURCH PARADE FOR E COMPANY

There will be no formal church parade of E Company of the 1st E.O.R. to-morrow. The roll will be called at ten o'clock, and the men will be allowed to attend any church they desire.

There was no draft stated to arrive from Kingston to-day, and the strength remains at 160. This will be increased considerably next week.

The canteen was opened this morning for the first time. Pte. Drummond is in charge.

Lieut. James Bews, of Kingston, was here to-day in connection with the physical training and bayonet fighting course.

"CINDERELLA" DANCED WITH THE PRINCE AS THE FAIRIES PROMISED

Charming Amateur Production at the Grand Last Night A Beautiful Blending of Music, Colour and Graceful Movement—In Aid of Serbian Relief and British Red Cross

A VISION OF DELIGHT

The production of the comic opera "Cinderella" at the Grand Opera House last night was in every detail a delightful success. Rich in colour and music, adequately staged and excellently cast, it unfolded the romance of the little scullery maid who, befriended by the fairies, won the heart of Prince Charming at the royal ball and realised the dearest vision of her fireside dreams. They were all there, the figures of the familiar fairy tale, moving through the charming scenes as though the pages of the long forgotten fantasy were animated as truly as they were in the imaginative days of childhood. It is an appealing story even now when matured perceptions look otherwise in vain for the Biblical promise of rich reward for the meek and humble.

The outstanding quality of last night's performance was the gracefulness, even the daintiness, that marked its movement. Perhaps this element was contributed by its feminine preponderance. The cast was entirely composed of ladies, with the exception of Mr. George Lynch, who found himself "completely surrounded by girls," with the silent Jester, Mr. Ernest Leggon, his sole male support. The light, graceful character of the production was, however, apparently the expression of the influence of the directress, Mrs. A. A. Perrin, who, as Prince Charming, filled the role with all the refinement and delicacy of the fairies' conception of what a prince should be. Mrs. Perrin scored a double success in the appealing note to which the movement was so admirably attuned, and in the direct evidence of the grace with which she invested the role of the charming Prince. She accepted the part perfectly, with confidence and a charming personality that really stamped the whole production. Her singing was altogether pleasing, and to her efforts is largely due the success of the opera.

As "Cinderella," Mrs. Dickson Nichols deserved all the favours of the fairies. She was naturally the centre of the entire action, and her experience and skill carried it through the three acts without a hitch. The part could scarcely have been better cast. Mrs. Nichols was a happy selection in the fact that in addition to her ability she possessed the presence becoming a princess.

Equally well chosen were Mrs. W. Greenslade and Miss Ida Sanderson as the cruel sisters, who consigned Cinderella to the kitchen while they went to the ball to dance with the Prince and his Courtiers, but remained to decorate the vast spaces occupied by waif flowers. They supplied with Mr. Lynch, who fitted in as father of this fairy family, the comedy of the piece, and they missed no opportunities as foils to Mr. Lynch on the one hand and their perfect sister on the other. Their singing was also praiseworthy, especially in the diversion with Mr. Lynch in the opening act.

The price of Mr. Lynch's isolation was his fun-making, and he was no disappointment. That should be sufficient indication of his share of the work in view of his appearance in many other amateur productions.

Miss Keitha Kidd, the Fairy Godmother, and Mrs. A. Knott as Lady Guy ably supported the principals.

Richly Coloured.

The rich costumes worn in the second act were of regal colours. In fact, the company was clad not only in purple and fine linen, but in beautiful shades of scarlet, green, blue, mauve, yellow, presenting an iridescence that dissolved and reformed in splendid effects through the stately movements of the minuet. This dance was of the same quality of the whole production, graceful, dainty, but none the less appealing. Fortunately for the fairy dancers, they knew nothing of Jazz.

The Rose-ring Dance by Miss Edith Price and Miss Esmie Aylmer was a pretty idea executed with beauty of movement and scenic background. Miss Littlefield, of the Y.W.C.A., taught all the dances, which proved an indispensable feature of the programme.

Cast of Characters.

Cinderella ..... Mrs. D. Nichols
Patience ..... Mrs. W. Greenslade
Charity ..... Ida Sanderson
(Her Cruel Sisters)
Father ..... Mr. George Lynch
Fairy Godmother ..... Keitha Kidd
Fairies—Edith Price, Esmie Aylmer, Hattie Pethick, Ethel Pethick, Helen Waterman, Alice Hopwood, Daisy Wood, Greta Lebarr, Florence Emmerson, Agnes Carmichael.

Minuet.
Ladies—Mildred Green, Ada Norris, Mrs. B. Reid, Miss Melton, I. Parker, Rosamond Huycke, Florence Leahy, Lillian Calder, Wilma Nelson, Margaret Rae.
Courtiers — Lila Waterman, Ruby Carr, Miss Warren, Annie Pollard, Olga Kenyon, Clara Pethick, Mabel Cunningham, Olga Haskill, Mrs. O. Steer, Ethel Rae.
Stage Manager ... Mr. Asa Huycke

The song numbers included the exceptionally well rendered "Songs of Minstrelsy," a trio by Mrs. Perrin, Miss Quartermaine, and Miss Kemp, and Mrs. Perrin's "Return to Me," with chorus, closing Act 2. The chorus showed a nice balance of sopranos and altos, and seemed to enhance its tonal beauty by a restraint that avoided volume.

Miss Kidd's performance as the Fairy Godmother is particularly commendable in view of the fact that she had only recently taken the part. Mr. W. R. Macnamara, editor of the Dry Goods Review, Toronto, was so pleased with the production that he complimented Mrs. Perrin and the company, stating that he had greatly enjoyed the work and adding that it was one of the best amateur performances he had ever seen.

ANNUAL MEETING OF WOMEN'S ART ASSOCIATION

The annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Women's Art Association was held on Wednesday, when the following officers were elected,

Hon. president—Mrs. Mercer.
President—Mrs. Eastwood.
1st vice-pres.—Mrs. Stowar.
2nd vice-pres.—Mrs. Aylmer.
Cor. secy.—Mrs. Sherwood.
Associate secy.—Miss F. Collins.
Rec. secy.—Miss Bennet.
Treasurer—Miss Hatton.
Archivist—Miss Rush.
Honorary members' representatives—Mrs. Morris, Mrs. Neill.

Conveners of Committees.

Executive—Mrs. F. C. Neal, Miss Morrow.
Exhibition—Miss Hatton.
Social — Mrs. McDermid, Mrs. Aylmer.
Musical—Mrs. Gliddon.
Public School Medals—Miss Rush.

The 13th annual report of the Peterborough Branch of the Women's Art Association for 1916-1917, was given as follows:

As every member of the local branch of the Women's Art Association is busily working for one, or more than one, of the several Auxiliaries of the Red Cross Society, it was decided at the beginning of the present year not to strive to continue our customary activities, but to be content to maintain our membership.

May the time not be far distant when the terrible pall of the war shall be lifted and we shall feel free once more to pursue the labours and enjoy the pleasures which "Peace on Earth" will warrant.

However, there are certain branches of our work which it was felt must not be dropped. As has been usual for several years, members of the Association acted as judges, and superintended the hanging of the pictures shown at the local Industrial Fair. This year the drawings of the children who competed for the prizes offered by us to the Public Schools were unusually good and made an interesting exhibition. Five medals and several honourable mention cards were awarded.

Once again we must thank Mr. and Mrs. Gliddon of the Conservatory of Music for delightful twilight musicales which they kindly arranged and which gave a great deal of pleasure to the members of the Association and to the citizens generally.

Our Association undertook the distribution of the food conservation cards in one section of the city.

We regret that owing to our Treasurer being out of town her report is not available.—Charlotte A. Sherwood, Cor.-Sec.

THE SANITARY INSPECTOR & PRESENTS ANNUAL REPORT

Work of the Department Includes the Inspection of Dairy Farms and Slaughter Houses—Large Number of Complaints Re Garbage Collection

The following report of Mr. C. S. Stapleton, sanitary inspector, contains detailed information concerning the operation of that particular department:

Peterboro, December 11, 1917.

To Dr. C. H. Amys,
Medical Officer of Health,
City of Peterboro:

Dear Sir: I have the honor to submit my first report for your consideration. I assumed the duties of Sanitary Inspector on the 21st of March, 1917. I find it impossible to give a complete detailed report. A great deal of the work has to be gone over several times.

The following list of complaints will give you some idea of the work of the Sanitary Inspector:

Scavenger complaints	630
Garbage complaints	532
Slaughter houses inspected	22
Dead animals	27
Scarlet Fever cases	17
Diphtheria cases	8
Measles	4
Milk tests	268
Notices served	144
Cow byres inspected	40
Stables inspected	50
Houses disinfected	3
Cesspools found	20
Burying night soil	5

Inspected all laundries.
Inspected all eating houses.
Inspected all bakeries.
Inspected two factories re sanitary conditions.

Milk tests, average for April 3.50; for May, 3.60; for October 4.10; for November 4.00.

The above figures do not rightly convey the amount of work done. Considerable time is taken up in return calls after the first visit. Sometimes I have to go several times before the instructions are carried out.

SCAVENGER COMPLAINTS.

Scavenger complaints 630. I find some of the tenants refuse to pay the scavenger 40c when the work is done, and others refuse to have the work done every month. This takes considerable time to investigate and straighten out.

GARBAGE COMPLAINTS.

Garbage complaints 532. A number of these complaints were justified; others were groundless.

NOTICES SERVED.

Number of notices served 144; to those who refuse to comply with the Health Bylaw. On return visits to the above places I find improvement.

MILK TESTS.

I have submitted the averages of milk tests for April, 3.50; for May, 3.60, for October, 4.10, and for November, 4.00. The milk tests throughout the summer months have been above the standard. I submit these tests to show the difference between the spring and fall tests.

INSPECTION OF DAIRY FARMS.

Dairy Farms. I find the majority in first class condition, and the owners willing to receive suggestions from the Inspector. Others whose farms are rented, were not in as good condition. Landlords will not make repairs and the tenants do not feel disposed.

SLAUGHTER HOUSES.

Slaughter houses inspected 22. Conditions, with few exceptions, were good. I found several with blood running direct from slaughter houses to pig pens, which has been changed, and put in proper condition. Have inspected the fruit stores, fish stores, bakeries, laundries, butcher shops, and restaurants, and find them in good repair and willing to accept any suggestions made by the inspector.

I would like to express here my appreciation of the assistance given me by Mr. F. W. Miller, the Relief Officer, both in the office and in investigating complaints.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

C. S. Stapleton,
Sanitary Inspector,
City of Peterboro.

True Religion And Democracy At Front

"The question of the moment is what shall life to the returned and returning thousands be? Much depends on the land to which they return. If those at home are still divided by petty issues, if they are still in the grip of a selfishness that is paralyzing to good, if the outlook upon life is narrow and dwarfed then, it may be that the pressure will be too great and men will slip back into the grooves of the pre-war days" declared C. Wellesley Whittaker, a lieutenant in the 102nd Battalion, writing to his denominational paper, "The Western Methodist Recorder." His assertions are those found true by every officer, nurse, and instructor associated with the returned men in the convalescent hospitals and vocational training classes established by the Military Hospitals Commission.

"TRENCH" DEMOCRACY.

"If only 'at home' you can catch the vision," writes the officer, "the vision of the 'trench' democracy, the spirit of the 'front line' religion—and, catching it, act—then the future will be glorious.

"They will came back bigger men with larger views. Some ideas have been scrapped but new ones have taken their place. Life has been hard; work has been dirty; temptation has been as never before; but they conquered all difficulties and withstood most of the temptations. They are prepared to go through as much again so long as they are at the front, but for God's sake don't ask them to fight these battles over again at home. As to what life shall be, much depends upon the environment into which these men are thrust.

NO PETTING.

"They will come back bigger men pathy—in fact they hate it. During their soldier life they have not been accustomed to it and it would seem to them like childishness if it were displayed. But to be genuinely welcomed, not for themselves but for the work they have tried to do, will be appreciated by the most modest man amongst them.

"It will take some time before they are able to settle down to every day routine. Nothing will seem, in fact nothing will be, the same. Life out yonder has been so intense, so earnest that things for the most part will be fearfully tame. They will not perhaps attend your churches. Don't criticize them if they fail in this particular. . . . This is the time of flux, and only the Church and people who are prepared to exercise patience and that even to the breaking point, will win the hearts of these men.

SCRAP THE OLD DIFFERENCES

"The religion of the trenchland may not be all that 'orthodoxy' would wish, but it has taught men how to live, nay, fitted them for death. It has enabled men to brave dangers untold with a 'divine' content. And that Religion! So simple but so impressive in its simplicity. Will those at home seize the opportunity to bridge the useless and needless divisions, cease time-wasting discussions on policy, doctrine and non-essentials so that those men will not fall back into the old ruts again or become coldly indifferent

"Platitudes? Sink them for all time. . . . Don't mistake joviality and light-heartedness for levity — it has a purpose and was necessary 'out there'—it is merely a veneer and underneath are the deep soul qualities.

"Adversity made men unselfish, pain found them tender, danger found them brave, and loyalty made them heroic. Shall the boys on their return find the nation in all its best and highest activities ready to receive them?"

Storm Interfered With Coal Delivery

Chief Thompson finds new difficulties every day in directing the deliveries of the coal the city is sending to persons who report through the Police Department. There was the usual bundle of urgent demands this morning, but the patchwork delivery system was shot to pieces by the storm. The Board of Works horses were pulling a snow plow and the Utilities truck was being held in readiness for any breaks the high wind might cause in the lighting system. The Chief was explaining why the usual number of deliveries could not be made. Crown Attorney Hatton, who heard the statement immediately offered the city the use of his team and Chief Thompson worked them all afternoon.

U. S. SENATE WARNED AGAINST HUN TERMS

"A Patched-up Peace Won't Do," Says Senator—"Germany Not Exhausted."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.— Senator Kenyon, of Iowa, who recently returned from a visit to the French front and to England, warned the Senate against Germany's peace offers and thinking that the country was exhausted. "Nothing could assist Germany more," he declared.

"Those who are trying to help in bringing about a patched-up peace and lend their influence in that direction are weakening the American forces, weakening preparation", he said. "And they had best remember that it will cost us more now to lose this war than to win it."

"We must bring to the western front two million men and have a million in reserve," Senator Kenyon declared. "We must do it as quickly as possible, cut the red tape.

"Everyone would want an honorable peace," said Kenyon, "but how can you sit down and work out a peace problem with a mad dog?

"It has been suggested that the Kaiser be turned over to a jury of the civilized world under an indictment for millions of crimes, and let the jury of the civilized world pass on his case before talking about peace. Peace? Yes, but not with the Hohenzollern."

LETTERS CONCERNING PETERBORO' SOLDIER

Late Sergeant Portsmith was a Capable Soldier

Mrs. M. Portsmith, 376 Stewart Street, has received the following letters concerning the death of her son, Sergeant H. Portsmith, who was killed in action on 10th November:

21st November, 1917.

Dear Mrs Portsmith,

You have doubtless been officially informed of the death of your dear son, Sergt. H. Portsmith, of the 5th Battalion.

He was killed in action on the 10th November on Passchendaele Ridge, in Flanders. It will be a consolation to you to know that in all probability his death was painless.

I knew your son very well, becoming closely acquainted with him in the trenches. I found him a very eager and capable soldier in whom I had implicit confidence. I regard his loss as a great personal one, and heartily sympathise with you in your sad bereavement. I pray that God will comfort and sustain you, and that in the midst of your natural sorrow you will feel a pride in being the mother of such a noble son.

I am, yours faithfully,

A. M. Boyd, Capt.

France, 5th December, 1917.

Dear Madam,

I have been requested by the members of the Sergeants' Mess of the 5th Canadian Infantry Battalion to convey to you their sincere sympathy in the loss of your son, the late Sergeant Portsmith, who fell during the recent action.

Whilst a member of this mess, he was held in the highest esteem and commanded the respect of one and all, and his loss is deeply regretted by all the sergeants of the battalion. It was the unanimous decision of the Mess that I should communicate to you their deepest sympathy and express how deeply we regret his loss.

With sincere sympathy,—I am,

Yours very truly,

R. Blair, A.R.S.M.,
President.

WHERE ARE YOUR DEAD?

-x-

Where are your dead? Heaped up they lie;
For God and the right our brave soldiers die.
Those who have loved them cry out in their fear,
"Where are our dead?" and God's answer comes clear,
"Safe in My keeping, your loved ones are here."

No honours adorn them; simply they lie,
Bravely they fight, bravely they die.
But Heaven's gates are wide open,
And our King's voice we hear
Saying, "Enter, ye heroes, your reward waits you here."

Life is a battle we all have to fight;
Let our motto be always, "For God and the Right,"
When life is near finished and the ending we fear,
God's voice we hear calling in tones soft and clear,
"Hasten, ye doubting, your loved ones wait here."

Mrs. Portsmith desires to thank the Rev. A. Thomas and the ladies of George Street Methodist Church also the members of the 57th Chapter of the I.O.D.E. for their sympathy and kindness during her recent bereavement.

AMATEUR POLICEMEN

By VICTOR MacCLURE

In several of the London Clubs the other day, there was a sudden filling of the hat-pegs with steel shrapnel helmets. We were used to seeing steel helmets on the racks, but this sudden growth, almost in a night, like a mushroom crop, was rather different. The helmets we used to see were dented and worn, sometimes covered with a camouflage of dirty cacking; they belonged to officers home on leave from the West Front. This new growth was of grey-painted helmets straight from the factory. No scratch marred their enamelled surfaces; they were brand-new in steel-grey paint;; they belonged to the amateur policemen, of London.

The recent introduction of an aerial barrage as a measure to guard the city from marauding aeroplanes, necessitated the issue of shrapnel helmets to the "Specials". During an air raid the sky is filled with bursting metal and since the bursts occur very wide. Theoretically, the only people who have any need to be in the open are these amateur policemen. Duty calls them into the danger zones; therefore, they wear the casque champignon of the British Army.

For the most part they are men over military age who conduct their businesses during the day and play th Bobby at night, or during spells in the daytime. They receive no payment for their services and for a long time they had no issue of uniform to distinguish them from the common run of civilian. They had brassards, striped in various colours to denote their rank in the Special Constabulary, but after many days they received uniform caps; then came uniforms, to supplement the truncheon and the warrant they carried. Many of these men live far from their businesses and the districts they patrol, and they keep their uniforms in the clubs, which are more central. Some find so much difficulty in combining business with constabulary duty that they have permission to wear their uniform to work. So it is no uncommon thing to see a business man at his desk, wearing the dark blue of the Special.

New things always cause the London crowd a lot of amusement and the inception of this force of amateur policemen was no exception to the rule. The comic journals rioted in jokes and sketches aimed at the Special, and people in the streets derived much amusement from the spectacle of stoutish gentlemen patrolling their beats in stately fashion. Time has quietened the laughter and has reduced the number of jibes in the comic press, for the Specials have justified their existence. Such jokes as are made now-a-days regarding these "half-time Bobbies" are tinged with a warmer regard and a spice of admiration. That is quite as it should be; it is not easy work that these men have to do.

With reduced staffs in offices and factories, everybody has to do a great deal more work than before the war. The Special probably does the work of three men during the day, and patrols his district at night, when, properly, and for the good of his health, he ought to be fast asleep in a comfortable bed. Yet any complaint one hears the Special make is the semi-humorous "grouse" of the self-respecting Briton. He dimly realizes that he is performing a patriotic duty, but lest one should think that he himself thinks so, he complains. His complaint is mere mental camouflage to mask his patriotic emotion.

The Specials relieve the reduced police forces of much work. They patrol the streets, picket public buildings, in fact, do nearly every police duty short of controlling the city traffic. When there have been street troubles the Specials have plunged into the racket with good effect and with fine, though discriminating enthusiasm. Rowdies who thought that the ability of the Special to control a crowd was a negible quantity, have been speedily disillusioned. Behind the Special is all the might of the law and its prestige, and to these the Special adds not a little tact, firmness and personal resource.

In the country districts the Specials guard the public works, such as reservoirs and electric stations. There is no doubt that the small amount of damage done by German agents in Britain is largely due to the vigilance of the amateur policeman. They are very strong in the cities on enforcing the wise light restrictions, and, since the average Londoner or town-dweller is very casual in matters of that sort—thinking them a species of concession to the enemy implying that the Briton personally is afraid of his activities—the work of the Special in teaching common-sense is invaluable.

But where the Special shines more than in anything else is during and after an air-raid. These men, whose helmets hang on the hat-pegs of to the cloak-room and a hurried their clubs, receive warning of an air-raid. There is an immediate rush donning of uniforms and helmets. Then the passers-by are treated to the spectacle of staid gentlemen, of all sorts and conditions in physique and age, tearing along to their stations as fast as their varying legs can carry them. It may chance that the barrage starts before they are halfway, but duty is duty, and they do not turn aside from the path

The men whose regular spell of duty is running at the time of the air-raid, warning, convey that warning to the populace by means of illumined cars, carrying the sign "Take Cover!" This warning is augmented by the blowing of whistles. The people taking cover in the underground railway stations are controlled by the Specials and those in the streets are directed to the nearest shelter by the amateur policemen. The demeanour of these men under the heavy barrage and the prospect of a chance bomb is distinguished by a good-natured calm. From a lofty eminence they seem to regard the individual who may be inclined to run wild, with a fatherly sort of protective instinct. It may be the dignity that comes from the uniform and the shrapnel helmet, but there is no nervousness or fussiness about the Special. His is the proud privilege of being calmer than anyone, of being sauve and helpful at the tick-

If it should happen that a bomb falls with destructive effect, the Special, with his professional comrade, is the first on the scene; and if there is need of first aid and succour for the wounded, he can manage that, too, until the ambulance men come along. The Special is distinctively a war-time figure; at first he appeared humorous to the unthinking, but in recent times, though we welcome any joke against him, there is something heroic about him which, on occasions, may make the laugh bump against a lump in our throats. He takes risks that the war-tried soldier studies to avoid unless duty compels. His contribution to the conduct of the war is not negligible. On the contrary, it is of the utmost value.

Army Bank At U.S. Camp Is Robbed

Canadian Press Despatch:

CAMP FUNSTON, Kansas, Jan. 12.—Four men, including Vice-President Winters of the Kansas bank, were killed and one seriously injured last night when the army bank here was robbed by a man dressed in the uniform of a captain of the United States' army. The bodies of the dead men are said to have been literally hacked to pieces.

The robbery and murders occurred it is believed, shortly after seven-thirty o'clock last night. A half hour later a sentry heard groans and investigated. Winters was still alive. He was removed to Camp Hospital, where he died early today.

Early today it was reported that an army officer with a police dog had followed the trail some distance to an inter-urban car line. That apparently was the only clue.

Yesterday was the coldest day of the year at Camp Funston, the thermometer registering 22 degrees below zero, and it is said that as a result the number of sentries and guards has been reduced to a minimum. The robbers got away with $11,000.

W. C. T. U. TO HOLD CAMPAIGN

At a meeting of the W.C.T.U., held yesterday afternoon in the green room of the Y.W.C.A. and at which the president, Mrs. Shields, presided, ten applications were received for membership. $29 was subscribed towards the silver thimble and trinket fund for the Union.

Arrange For Campaign.

Arrangements were made for the local campaign in connection with the $1500, which is the objective of the club towards the Y.M.C.A. fund. The club now supplies 3 Y.M.C.A. men at the front in their work of supplying hot drinks and comforts to wounded soldiers, and the splendid work will be widened through the effort of the W.C.T.U.

Special Programme.

A splendid programme was given by 14 members of the club, and a solo by Mrs. Dr. Middleton, accompanied by Mrs. Porter.

NEW HAVEN POLICE IGNORE BEATING OF BOLD PRO-GERMAN

Lawyer Who Defied Draft Board Nurses His Injuries in Bed.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 12.—The identity of none of the score of men who attacked Maximilian von Hoegen, a lawyer of this city, has been learned, and the police here have made no effort to cause the arrest of any one, not even starting any formal investigation. Von Hoegen is still confined to his bed as the result of a severe beating which preceded his forced recantation of pro-German utterances.

The chastisement of von Hoegen followed a series of pro-German acts on his part. The culmination came when it was announced that he had written on the ton of the questionnaire recently sent to him the phrase, "Deutschland uber alles," and had written in it that he had the doubtful honour of being an American citizen," and had expressed the sentiment that America was putting up a big "bluff." He further wrote into the document his wish that Germany might win the war.

Forced to Kiss Flag.

Wearing masks and armed with revolvers, a posse of men went to his home Saturday night and forced him to go into the street, where he was made to sing "The Star Bangled Banner," kiss the American flag and shout "America, first, last and all the time!" These demonstrations by him were punctuated with blows in the face, administered by the posse, resulting in a broken nose and severe bruises.

After the party had allowed him to go home, on his promise to write a public letter recanting his pro-German sentiments, he made complaints to a police station and related the facts of the attack. He knew none of his assailants, and it is said that some of them, at least, were not of New Haven.

His Prosecution Considered.

The Von Hoegen home has been watched night and day by guards from a munitions plant here, it was stated, and although he asked for special protection by the police none has yet been afforded him.

It was learned to-night that the questionnaire he turned in covered with pro-German sentiment has proved a puzzle to Federal officials. Attorney General Gregory has been appealed to to determine if an American citizen can express such ideas on a formal war paper and escape punishment.

It is hinted here that the one solution of the matter might be to put Von Hoegen in class 1, the earliest to be called when new quotas are sought next month.

A WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Harwood Couple Married Sixty-five Years Ago

Mr. and Mrs. George Parr of Harwood, Rice Lake, celebrated the sixty-fifth anniversary of their marriage on Dec. 29th, 1917. About eighty years ago Mr. Parr's parents came to Canada from near London, England, taking up clergy reserve land in the township of Alnwick, county of Northumberland. They toiled, worked hard and with a few other settlers helped to clear the primeval forest.

Mr. George Parr was born in England in 1833, now being ninety years of age. He enjoys fairly good health and laughs when he says: "Just the other day I helped my son crosscut saw two big cords of wood". He is possessed of an excellent memory and manifests lively interest in the war, and everything pertaining to social and commercial life. He tells an amusing incident which happened away back in the fifties, namely, the visit to Harwood of the late King Edward VII. then the Prince of Wales. The young prince was travelling over a new railroad then extending from Cobourg to Peterborough. As the train approached the little station, some very thoughtful person, graciously laid down a pretty carpet for the prince to walk on. He came first followed by his suite, when suddenly a big, good-natured countryman, not knowing he was addressing the future King of England, stepped up, tapped the royal shoulder, saying, "Get off that carpet don't you know that carpet is for the prince to walk on?" The prince smiled and bowed to his loyal, but mistaken subject.

In 1852, at Cold Springs, by the Rev Mr. Hawden, Mr. Parr married Miss Mary Ann Wellwood of Cobourg. Their family consisted of thirteen children, of whom two are deceased. Mrs. Parr is in good health and spirits, and takes a great interest in sewing for the soldiers, knitting socks, etc. She is an intelligent reader and the possessor of a fine memory. She is now eighty-two years of age, always busy with little interests of outdoor life and this, coupled with her fine Christian character, makes her a most interesting and charming old lady.

ADMISSION: AFTERNOON 10c EVENING 15c

Peterboro' Juniors Beat Lindsay In A Snappy Game

Final Score in Junior O. H. A. Fixture Was 3 to 1—Petes Should Have Won by a Wider Margin But Fell Down Around the Nets.

WAS FINE EXHIBITION

LAST NIGHT'S SCORE.

Peterborough 3.
Lindsay 1.

SCORE ON THE ROUND.

Lindsay 9.
Peterborough 8.

Next game Peterborough vs. Lindsay, Friday, Jan. 18. Total goals on four games to decide group winner.

The Lindsay Midgets have a one-goal lead with which to start the second series of home and home games. The blue and white crew were beaten at Brock St. Rink by 3 goals to 1 last night, but the net result of the first two battles leaves Peterborough behind by one counter. The local youngsters are confident of the chances of accomplishing the needful in the next two games, the first of which will be played next Friday night in Lindsay.

The Petes should have won last night's game by a bigger margin. Any time a team works clean inside a defence fifteen times, and only scores three goals, they are travelling in pretty hard luck, and that is just what happened last night. Oliver, the Lindsay goaler either is a wonderful net guardian or he has horse shoes all over him, for he mussed up the Peterborough attack a dozen times when the man with the puck had only him to beat. At that, with any kind of system around the nets the local kids should have tallied a bunch of counters. At least three times they had Oliver out of his citadel and missed the open nets. They had not much trouble in breaking inside but once there something went wrong with the attack.

On the other hand, although they showed plenty of speed and aggressiveness, the Lindsay gang were rarely dangerous. They had no combination and the local defence soon had them shooting from outside. These tactics were useless as Murray was in great form in the Peterborough nets, and handled their drives as coolly as a veteran.

The Petes led by 2 to 1 at the end of the first period, and by 3 to 1 at the end of the second. Neither team scored in the last session. The pace was hard and fast all the way and the 700 fans were delighted with the exhibition, rooting vigorously for the local youngsters.

The Peterborough defence carried off the honours of the night. Murray was practically invincible between the posts, the only counter registered against him being scored on a rebound by a Lindsay wing lofting ten feet off side. In front of him Hagerman and Girard waded into the Lindsay attack in fine style and rushed spendidly as well, the two showing plenty of speed and stick-handling ability.

The forward line, although all good individually, failed to work together as they should. Cherrett tired badly and in the last period dropped back to the defence. Bartley had all kinds of hard luck when in close and should have had three or four goals to his credit. The two bantams, Williams and Park, who alternated at night wing, both gave a fine account of themselves.

The Petes tried hard in the last period to tie up the score on the round, but couldn't find the nets, although they had opportunities enough to score three or four goals.

The summary:

First Period.

1—Lindsay, Rogers, 6 minutes.
2—Peterborough, Bartley, 12 mins.
3—Peterborough, Cherrett, 1 min.

Second Period.

4—Peterborough, Park, 8 minutes.

Third Period.

No score.

The lineup:

Lindsay.		Peterborough
	Goal
Oliver		Murray
	Right Defence
Garnett		Girard
	Left Defence
Oliver		Hagerman
	Centre
Lyons		Cherrett
	Right Wing
Rogers		Park
	Left Wing
Conley		Bartley
	Sub.
Greene		Williams

The game opened out at a furious clip with up and down the ice rushes that kept both goal keepers on their toes. The Petes got right inside the defence several times in succession, Bartley missing two golden chances when he only had Oliver to beat. The visitors were not getting in very close, but they kept Murray busy with shots from outside the defence. Bartley drew the first penalty. Shortly after Lindsay scored their only goal of the night, when after Murray had blocked a long shot from the side of the south of the nets, batted in the rebound.

The Petes let out another link and gave Oliver a few busy minutes. He was lucky enough, however, to turn everything aside. Bartley and Hagerman were benched almost together, and the balance of the Petes had their hands full. Murray saved the situation when after two Lindsay forwards had broken inside, he sallied out and checked the puck carrier averting what looked like a sure goal. The two Petes came back to the ice a little later and Bartley worked right through the defence, only to lose the rubber to Oliver who came out to meet and got a bad face. Soon after Green was benched for hooking Cherrett. Almost from the face-off Bartley tore off a pretty rush and beat Oliver from close in, tying the score.

The Petes went ahead in the next minutes when Cherrett got the puck at centre and out-skating the Lindsay forwards went around the defence and took Oliver's measure with a swift shot from the side.

The pace was not quite as fast in the second period. The Petes led in the attack, but threw away their chances by too great anxiety when they got inside. Hagerman and Bartley almost scored on two or three occasions, but something went wrong. It was the bantams Park and Williams who finally found the nets. Williams got away for a nice rush and centred neatly to Park, whose quick shot completely fooled Oliver. That was the only score of the period and the last counter of the evening.

The Petes tried hard in the last round, but couldn't find the nets, although they had opportunities enough to score three or four goals.

The summary:

First Period.

1—Lindsay, Rogers, 6 minutes.
2—Peterborough, Bartley, 12 mins.
3—Peterborough, Cherrett, 1 min.

Second Period.

4—Peterborough, Park, 8 minutes.

Third Period.

No score.

CENTRALS WON THREE FROM THE MACS

Last night in the Ten-Pin League, at the Water St. Alleys, the Centrals annexed all three games from the Macs.

For the three games the Centrals rolled a total of 2388 pins, which is a League record, against 2295 for the Macs.

Phillips and Dawson, for the Centrals, were the only 500 markers, with 568 and 548 totals.

A. Ross was high for the Macs with a total count of 462.

The scores were as follows:

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The Y.M.C.A. High School Club enjoyed a social time in company with their lady friends last evening. Twenty couples met at the Y.M.C.A. building at 7.30 and snow-shoed out to Jackson Park and returned to the building by way of the Chemong road. Lunch was served at 10 o'clock, followed by a programme of games in the gymnasium, and billiard and bowling contests in which the young ladies showed considerable skill. The party broke up at 12.30, agreeing that it was one of the most pleasant evenings ever conducted by the Club. The Club adjourned to meet on Friday evening, January 18th, on which occasion Mr. J. E. Smith of the Farm & Dairy will be the speaker.

Sunday afternoon at 4.15 o'clock a meeting will be held of delegates and other young men who are considering attending the Old Boys' Work Conference at Belleville, January 17th to 20th. It is expected that twenty-five or thirty young men will represent Peterborough at Belleville and the plans will be fully discussed at the Sunday meeting.

On Tuesday evening Mr. W. H. Vaughan, Assistant National Secretary for Boys' Work, will be in Peterborough to address the mentors, teachers and other workers for boys at a supper to be served in the Y.M.C.A. building at 6.15 o'clock. Every man who is interested in boys' work is invited to hear Mr. Vaughan, but if he is going to attend, he should hand in his name at the Y.M.C.A. office Monday evening.

A gymnasium entertainment will be held at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening, January 15th, the receipts from which will be applied to the expenses of delegates to the Older Boys' Conference at Belleville, January 17th to 20th.

Busses To Take De Laval Girls To Their Homes

The De Laval Company very thoughtfully had busses at their office at noon to-day to take the young ladies of the different departments to their homes.

Storm Concentrated Between Burketon And Myrtle On C.P.R.

The Street Railway officials were advised early last night from Toronto to hold the snow plough and its crew in readiness for a severe storm, and the big blow arrived on schedule. About eleven o'clock last night its advance winds were swirling around the corners and strumming on the telegraph wires. It drove directly from the east, but by six o'clock the weather man was running around in a circle, finally settling down with a furious blast from the west.

About seven o'clock the snow dust was so dense that it was difficult to see objects within arm's length. By ten o'clock the force of the storm seemed to be expended, but at noon it seemed to have renewed its vigour and was again whooping it up at a great rate.

G. T. R. Trains.

The early G.T.R. train from Peterborough fared better than was expected, but the train from Toronto was stuck in a drift near Agincourt. A section of it was made up at Lindsay and at three o'clock this afternoon had reached Omemee with a plough ahead of it.

The Belleville train left at 1.30 p.m. with high hopes of struggling through; the Port Hope train due here at 12.02 had not commenced its trip. It was waiting for the plough and special from Lindsay.

C. P. R. Report.

The noon C.P.R. express was reported at Myrtle station at 2 o'clock. A snow plough running ahead of it was buried in a drift east of Myrtle, but was expected to break through shortly. The express would probably be delayed until 4 o'clock.

In the C.P.R. report the brunt of the storm was sweeping between Havelock and Toronto, concentrated between Burketon and Myrtle.

The afternoon train from Montreal was only 50 minutes late, according to the three o'clock report.

City Streets Drifted.

Not only did the railway cut fill in quickly, but throughout the city the sidewalk paths were levelled almost as soon as the ploughs had passed. In the south end the huge drifts piled in the streets, and at one stage the street railway sweeper was bagged in a drift on the Monaghan Road below Byersville. It brushed a way out, and was kept busy all day.

THE WEATHER

Yesterday was the first real fine winter day we have had for some time. The air was spring-like and the thermometer rose to 30 degrees. But this morning, what a change! Sleet, snow, drifting, and a howling wind gave a combination that we fortunately do not often see. While the cold was not especially severe, it is on its way. The barometer last night and this morning was about as low as we have ever seen it. It has begun to rise, and as it rises, the thermometer will fall. Much colder weather is altogether likely, when the present storm passes on its way eastward.—W. P.

ANNUAL S. S. ENTERTAINMENT AT ALL SAINTS'

The annual Sunday school entertainment of All Saints' church was held last night in the school room. A tea for the scholars was held at 6 o'clock, after which a splendid musical programme, which was well enjoyed by pupils and parents, was held, Mr. Stanton being in the chair. The presentation of prizes was made by the rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb.

Lance-Corp. Russell Is Suffering From Gas Poisoning

Russell went overseas as a member of the machine gun section of the 93rd. Three other brothers are overseas.

THE DEATH OF EDDIE MOWRY

Mr. George Carpenter, 533 Concession street, has received a letter from his son, Corporal B. C. Carpenter, in which the writer refers to the death at the front of his friend, Eddie Mowry. Corporal Carpenter helped to place Mowry in the ambulance after he was wounded. "It was a hard blow" says Carpenter.

Rev. Mr. Rowand Unable To Reach Millbrook

The exchange of pulpits arranged by Rev. Mr. Rowand of St. Andrew's, and Rev. Dr. Lee of Millbrook, had to be cancelled to-day owing to the snow blockade. Dr. Rowand had been secured to preach anniversary services in Millbrook.

Bridgenorth Paragraphs

BRIDGENORTH, Jan. 10.—The storm of last night has blocked up some of the roads, especially the roads running east and west. Quite a few started to the city but had to turn and go home. Two loads of hay were unable to get through, but they disposed of it in the village.

Albert White and Lem Forsythe have commenced operations at the ice cutting. They have two large contracts on now and the farmers will be supplied later on. The ice is 18 inches thick.

There has been a good number of cords of wood cut, but owing to the scarcity of men the amount cut there will not be as large as usual.

Mr. John Bradley intends to commence running his saw will next week. It will be a great convenience for the farmers to get some lumber cut.

Jim Jopling had a nice drove of fat cattle brought in to-day for the shop in the city. He always keep a good supply on hand.

THE WANTS WILL HELP

What do you want most? Would you be glad of the chance to rent a room or two to congenial people? Would you like to secure a more profitable position where the chances for advancement are more certain? Would you like to dispose of household property or realty at a fair price? Would you like to locate a business partner?

These are but a few of the more or more questions that may be asked and answered through the Want Columns of the Examiner.

Those who wish to rent rooms are put in touch with those who have rooms to rent. Business partners are wanted, realty is bought and sold, employes and employers are brought together, buyers and sellers meet each day as a result of the little Want Ads that have come to play such an important part in modern business.

Are you taking full advantage of the Wants in the Examiner?

Miss Benson was born in Peterborough and had resided many years in Winnipeg. She leaves two sisters, Mrs. Brock, 571 Weller street, at whose home she died, and Mrs. Warsnop, of Vancouver, also one brother, James of Winnipeg.

The funeral from 571 Weller street, will take place on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

WILLIAM McMASTER.

William McMaster, son of the late Thomas and Margaret McMaster, died to-day.

Deceased was born in Lockport 72 years ago. Since coming to the city 40 years ago, he has been employed for a great part of his time with the A. MacDonald Estate. By trade he was a carpenter and contractor. Mrs. McMaster pre-deceased him three and a half years ago. He leaves to mourn his death one son, William Lloyd, of the city, and two daughters, Mrs. William Foster, of Parry Sound, and Mrs. Lee Cobb, of Detroit.

The funeral from from the family residence, 1 Stewart street, will take place on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30. Service at the house at 2 o'clock before leaving for the Little Lake cemetery.

IN MEMORIAM.

BLAKE.—In loving memory of James Charles Blake, who was suddenly taken from our midst on 13th January, 1917.

No more we see him in our midst,
No more his voice we hear,
For death has been and bore away
The one we loved so dear.

Yet again we hope to meet thee
When the day of life is fled;
Then in heaven we hope to greet thee
Where no farewell tears are shed.
—Inserted by his Mother and Family.

Bringing in the Spoils by "Tank" - The New Sea Lord and Other War Scenes

REMARKABLE PHOTOGRAPH OF A BRITISH TANK BRINGING A CAMOUFLAGED GERMAN FIELD PIECE CAPTURED BY IT ON THE CAMBRAI FRONT.

"Muggins," of Victoria, B.C., who has collected more than $5,000 for the Canadian Red Cross. For months he has stood daily on the walkway from the steamer docks to the business centre of Victoria, barking at all pedestrians and rattling his Red Cross box for funds.

General Anthoine, in the presence of the standards of France, relieves by committing to Captain Heurtaux and Sub-Lieutenant Fonck, of the French Aviation Corps, the unfinished work of the late Captain Georges Guynemer, premier flier of France.

A striking photo of Vice Admiral Sueslyn Wemyss, who has been appointed First Sea Lord of the British Admiralty in succession to Sir John R. Jellicoe.

Special Chinese military mission visits the ruins of Bapaume, Cambrai sector of the British front in France. In the group are: Major Gen. Kouan Hang Chang, K.C.B., Major Tsing Whang, D.S.O., Major He Sue, D.S.O., Captain Ting Chia Chur, M.C., Captain Wei Tsang Ki, M.C., and Captain Tegurkia Gen, M.C.

First American soldiers to be captured by the Germans are cross-examined by German officers. The German raid which resulted in the capture of these Americans, with three others slain, occurred on Nov. 3, a few days after the Americans took over a certain sector of the first line trenches.

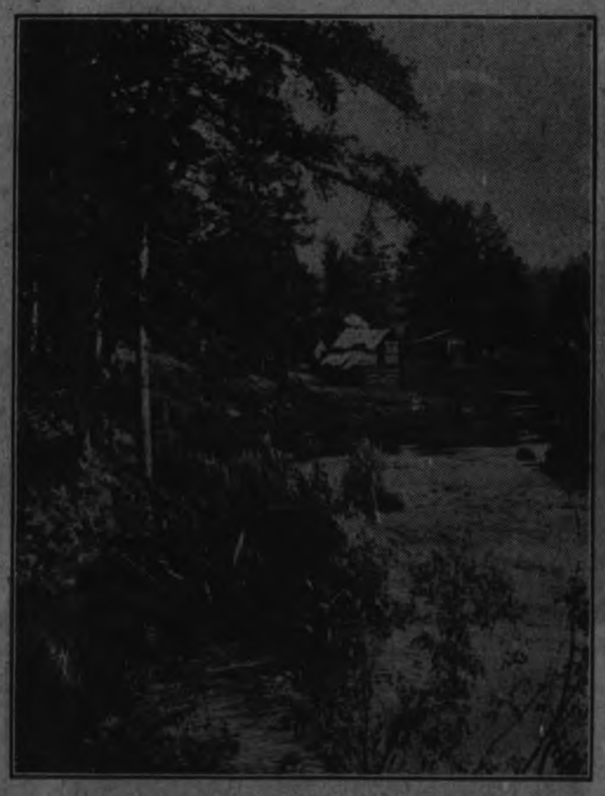
Striking War Pictures - Russia Holds Promise of Development when Peace Returns

New type of air-driven motor cycle, now seen on the streets of London.

All that is left of a German munitions train bombed by Allied airmen back of Laon. This interesting photograph was found on a Hun captured in the recent drive.

Scene in a Canadian sawmill in the Vosges Mountains in France. The Canadian engineers are engaged in turning out ties for the network of railroads behind the French lines.

The harbor of Funchal, capital of Madiera, which was bombarded by a german submarine. Forty shells were fired and considerable damage done.



This bit of Eastern Siberia looks very much like the country one sees in Western Canada, and is equally fertile.

Homes of the Red Cross stretcher bearers, built by them in the woods of Haute Batis.

Krasnoy-Arsk, an important trading centre and the fourth largest town in Siberia.

A typical peasant's home in the heart of Russia. The log cabin is reminiscent of Colonial days in America, as are also the methods of farming, which are only now beginning to be discarded for more modern ways.

Kieff, the chief city of Little Russia, an important manufacturing town, and a leading religious centre.

- Wild Animals may Fill Great War Need - Kennels for Red Cross Dogs -

The Cambrai Battle. The first prisoners are brought in while the British are still moving forward. In batches of several hundreds the boche captives are herded to the rear by cavalry. More than 10,000 were taken in this Battle.

Pte. Luther H. Furrs, son of Thos. E. Furrs, Colebrooke, Ont., who went overseas with the 146th Batt., but was transferred to the 20th Batt., was wounded by shell at Passchendaele, and is now in hospital in England.

Lance-Corp. Kenneth Merriam left Kingston with the 8th C.M.R. in November, 1914. Taken prisoner 24th October, 1915. Escaped from German prison camp on Nov. 13th, 1917, and arrived in England. He expects to return to Kingston in the near future.

Dr. Shibley A. Furrs, son of Thos. E. Furrs, Colebrooke, Ont., with the 73rd Battery at Halifax and shortly to leave for overseas.

Alaskan seal rookery. Hundreds of tons of meat may be conserved annually by the pelt hunters if it be found that seal may be canned. This meat, smoked and salted, is popular with natives and whites resident in the far north.

Squabs, but far from Broadway. Scene on a California pigeon ranch where 16,000 birds are kept as breeders alone. Much of the output finds its way East at prices double those obtained before the war.

WILD ANIMAL LIFE MAY BECOME GREAT WAR AID.

Great rabbit drive in eastern Oregon. This serves a triple purpose; the country is rid of a farmer's pest; immense quantities of fine meat are secured, and thousands of pelts invaluable to hatmakers are obtained. California, Utah and Kansas stage similar bunny roundups.

A TYPICAL DAILY WINTER SCENE ON THE AUSTRALIAN FRONT IN FLANDERS.

KENNELS OF THE FRENCH DOGS OF WAR, MILITARY AND RED CROSS, IN THE OISE SECTOR.

"Molly Wellington," the world's champion egg layer, with a record of 326 eggs in 365 days, and the Silver Cup won by her at the Twenty-ninth Annual Show of New York Poultry and Pigeon Association at Madison Square Garden.

French soldiers in force dragging into position one of their heavy field pieces, military critics attributing the Frenc hvictory in the Battle of Chemin der Dames to the rapidity with which guns of this and even larger calibre were brought into action.

Uniform adopted for American military observers when tree climbing. A camouflage study in black and white.

Driver Edward O'Brien, P.A.S.C., stationed at Ottawa. A son of Timothy O'Brien, 65 Markland Street, Kingston.

Corporal Edward Lambert, Contingent 256, Construction Gang, son of Ezra and Deliah Lambert, of 146 Victoria Ave., Niagara Falls, Canada. He formerly served in the Welland Division of the Home Guard. Corporal Lambert left Niagara Falls in March, 1917, and is now on active service overseas. He was gassed in the battle of Passchendaele, Nov. 10th, 1917.

Private Robert O'Brien, 13th Mounted Rifles, transferred to 102nd British Columbia Battalion, wounded Dec. 23, 1917, gunshot wound in arm. He i sa son of Timothy O'Brien, 65 Markland Street, Kingston.

Sapper Jack O'Brien, 13th Mounted Rifles, now in France. A son of Timothy O'Brien, 65 Markland St., Kingston.

This Great Contest Is Absolutely Free of Expense. Send Your Answers To-Day!

This great contest is being conducted by the Continental Publishing Co., Limited, one of the largest and best known publishing houses in Canada. That is your guarantee that the prizes will be awarded with absolute fairness and squareness to you and every other contestant. Frankly it is intended to further introduce EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD, Canada's Greatest Magazine. You may enter and win the best of the prizes whether you are a subscriber to EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD or not, and, moreover, you will neither be asked nor expected to take the magazine or spend a single penny of your money in order to compete. Here's the idea:

EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD is so popular everywhere that it now has the vast circulation of over 125,000 copies a month; but our motto is: "EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD in Every Woman's Home." We want every Canadian magazine reader to become acquainted with this famous publication. Therefore, when we acknowledge your entry to this contest and you know your standing for the prizes, we shall send you without cost a copy of the very latest issue and a review of many of the fine features soon to appear. Then, in order to qualify your entry to be sent on for the judging and awarding of the grand prizes, you will be asked to assist us in carrying on this big introduction plan by showing your copy to just four friends or neighbours who will appreciate this really worthwhile All-Canadian magazine and want it to come to them every month. You will easily fulfill this simple condition in a few minutes of your spare time and we will even send copies for each of your friends if you wish.

How to send your Solution.—Use one side of the paper only and put your name and address (stating Mr., Mrs., or Miss) in the upper right-hand corner. If you wish to write anything but your answers, use a separate sheet of paper.

Three independent judges, having no connection whatever with this firm, will award the prizes, and the answer gaining 100 points will take first prize. You will get 10 points for every name solved correctly (No. 10 being engaged as it is practically given); 20 points will be awarded for general neatness, style, spelling, punctuation, etc.; 10 for hand writing, and 40 for fulfilling the condition of the contest. Contestants must agree to abide by the decision of the judges. The contest will close at 5 p.m., May 30th, immediately after which the answers will be judged and the prizes awarded. Address your answers to-day to

SENT FREE TO MEN!
ALL ABOUT STRENGTH AND VIGOR

MR. READER:

Here is something we have to offer you absolutely for nothing—a little private book of special information about the legitimate uses and unnatural abuses of manly strength; about the preservation and its possible self-restoration, an illustrated pocket compendium of 5,000 words, 72 pages and 80 half-tone photograph reproductions—which I am very pleased to send by mail, absolutely free of charge, in a plain sealed envelope, to any man, young or elderly, single or married, who writes for it.

Over a million of these books have been thus sent to applicants all over the world since my free offer first appeared. Publishers are charging as much as $2 for books on sex subjects, while my book is free. Therefore, reader, if you would like a great fund of inside information relating directly to the subject of manly strength, all put in perfectly plain, easy-to-read language, with many hints that you can surely apply to your own self, no matter how strong you may be, or how nervous or rundown you may be—if you want to know the facts about this particular subject, given to you without a single score, then fill in the coupon below, send to me, and receive my book sealed, by return mail. In one part of the publication I describe a mechanical invention of my own, which I call the SANDEN vitaliser, something you wear at night as an aid to the restoration of waning strength. You are not expected to get one of these appliances unless you decide for yourself that you want one. The book is complete, and there is absolutely nothing you are required to buy or pay. Therefore, please send your name and address to-day. SANDEN, Author.

MANHOOD WINS IN ALL WALKS OF LIFE.

MANHOOD! The quality which rules the world to-day. My friend, there never was a time in the history of the human race when real, manly manhood, manly vigor and manly courage counted for as much as they do now, this very minute. No matter what your years, whether you are 20 or 60, you want to either entirely in the race or entirely out of it. It is invariably the fellow who proves up strongest in this human strength that forges to the front, while weaklings stand aside; it is he also who is in most demand, and most sought after by all classes of his community, simply because he radiates that marvellous magnetic influence which only an abundant vigor and rugged manly health can radiate. I believe any man can hope to completely develop or mature this same vigorous strength, no matter what his past may have been, provided he is willing to REALLY MAKE THE EFFORT, and provided, of course, he is not weighed down by extreme old age or is not incurably diseased. To my mind, the young of the one who wonders more vitality is perfectly

Nearly All Men In The United States Armies To Be Unmarried

General Crowder Announces Scheme of Selection in Report to Congress---Those Unskilled in Industrial and Agricultural Work Are Also To Be Called.

TO ENROLL MEN WHO RECENTLY BECAME 21

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 14. — The fighting armies of the Untied States will be supplied hereafter exclusively by unmarried men between twenty-one and thirty-one years of age and men unskilled in industrial and agricultural work necessary for the conduct of the war.

Added to the 1,000,000 physically and otherwise qualified men under the present registration who will be found in Class 1 when all the questionnaries have been returned on February 15 will be 700,000 men who have become twenty-one years old since June 5.

Under the new selective service arrangement all the fighting forces will come from Class 1 ,according to the report of Provost Marshal General Crowder, made public to-night and which will b sent to Congress. But to make the new scheme operative Congress is urged to enact an amendment providing that all men who have become twenty-one years old since June 5 shall be required to register for classification.

URGES NEW APPOINTMENT.

General Crowder also urges that the quotas of States or districts be determined hereafter on the basis of the number of men in Class 1, and not upon population.

Class 1 comprises:

Single men without dependent relatives, married men who have habitually failed to support their families, who are dependent upon wives for support or not usefully engaged, and whose families are supported by incomes independent of their labour; unskilled farm labourers, unskilled industrial labourers, registrants by or in respect of whom no deferred classification is sought or made, registrants who fail to submit questionnaire and in respect of whom no deferred classification is sought or made and all registrants not included in any other division of the schedule.

Narrowed down under the analysis of the first draft made in the report, the scheme places upon unattached single men and married men with independent incomes most of the weight of miltary duty, for the aggregate number of men in the other divisions of Class 1 is very small.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO PEOPLE.

General Crowder finds that the first draft surpassed the highest expectations of the friends of the selective service idea. He pays high tribute not only to the thousands of civilians who gave ungrudging service to making the draft a success, but also to the high patriotism of the American people as a whole.

"At the President's call," he says, "all ranks of the nation, reluctantly entering the war, nevertheless instantly responded to the first call with a vigorous and unselfish co-operation that submerged all individual interest. I take it that no great national project was ever attempted with so complete a reliance upon the voluntary co-operation of citizens for its execution. Certainly no such burdensome and sacrificial statute had ever before been executed without a great hierarchy of officials.

"The vaunted efficiency of absolutism, of which the German Empire stands as the avatar, can offer nothing to compare with it. It remains the ultimate test and proof of the intrinsic political idea upon which American institutions of democracy and self-government have been based."

CALL ANSWERED BY 9,586,508.

Analysing the first draft, General Crowder shows that 9,586,508 men between the ages of twenty-one and thirty-one years registered themselves. Up to late in December only 5,870 arrests had been made of those who had sought to evade registration, and of that number 2,263 were released after having registered, and there remain only 2,095 cases to be prosecuted.

A rough figure of 8.2 per cent. is given as the number of registrants who failed to appear when called by their local boards for examination, but General Crowder hastens to explain that most of these men already are in Europe in the American, British and French armies.

Of the total registration of 9,586,508 the number called and examined was 3,089,949, and of these 1,057,363 were certified by the boards for military service. Since the first call was for only 687,000 men, there now remain 370,363 men awaiting summons to the mobilization camps.

Of all men examined 730,756, or 23.7 per cent, were rejected for physical reasons. That, it is pointed out, shows an encouraging improvement in the physical condition of the young men of the nation since the civil war days, for at that time the draft authorities rejected 32 per cent of all men called on physical grounds.

HALF SOUGHT EXEMPTION.

About one-half of all men called, or 1,560,570, sought exemption. The requests of 78 per cent. of these were granted. Of those exempted 74 per cent. were released because of dependent relatives. Less than 1 per cent of the exemptions were granted to religious objectors.

The total cost of the first draft, exclusive of the cost of the Provost Marshal General's office here, was $6,211,966. This amount has been refunded to the States by the federal governments. It represents an average cost of $.93 a man accepted for military service, and with the Provost Marshal General's expenses included, $5 per man, against a cost of $24.48 voluntary recruit in 1914; $19.14 in 1915, and $28.95 in the first nine months of 1917. Prior to the draft act, during the civil war, the cost per man was about $34 and after the draft was enforced about $9.84.

ADEQUATE ARMY IS FIRST DUTY

In discusing the future of the draft, General Crowder said the first duty is to provide an adequate army. Economic considerations must be regarded in selecting the men, he says, but not at the expense of an efficient fighting force.

Viewed beside the efforts Germany and Austria have put forth to place man power in the field, he adds, "it little becomes us to emphasize above a whisper as a substantial national problem anything we have yet been called upon to do."

NOTHING CAN COMPARE WITH IT

Mr. Fred Adams, New Rose N.S., writes—"I have tried many medicines for coughs and colds but never found anything to compare to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We have had the greatest never fails to relieve a cough and loosen satisfaction with this medicine for it it up."

GLIMPSE OF THE TURMOIL THAT IS NOW PARALYZING RUSSIA

Petrograd Faces Starvation, Coal is Failing, Trade Languishes Without Goods and Money—Country is Torn By Civil War—Army Making Trouble

PETROGRAD, Jan. 12 —The idea that Russia can fight may be abandoned. There are wild schemes in the Smolny Institute for recruiting an army of volunteers, but all such schemes are mere sound and fury. Russia as an organized State has for the time being ceased to exist. This is not a country that can make either war or peace. It is the biggest problem with which the belligerent powers have to deal. Russia is in a state of almost inconceivable and daily increasing anarchy. This is not socialism. Looked at coldly, apart from all views and persons, it is simply rapid disintegration. Russia has gone to pieces. The country is fast slipping back into the Middle Ages.

Take the case of Petrograd, which is in a fair way to fulfilling the prophecy of the old believers persecuted by Peter." The food supplies are giving out. All reports from the provinces say no food is being loaded for the capital and unless a miracle happens starvation is certain. Already in the factory towns near Moscow there is rioting because of the complete disappearance of bread from the market. Coal is failing, the electric light companies are cutting off energy for an increased number of hours every week. There is danger of the stoppage of trains and it is a question of whether even the water works can be kept going. Want of fuel, labour control and transport difficulties have led in the closing of a number of factories and the army of unemployed is growing daily. This with starvation at the door and the bitterest Winter known here for years.

The large official class is still on strike. Trade is languishing for want of goods and ready money. The closing of the banks is much more serious than was expected ;no one can get at his banking account, and there is a general scramble for money tokens of every kind. Yesterday in several banks strong boxes were opened in the presence of their holders and gold and silver confiscated. All financial operations are completely blocked, and when this state of affairs will end no one knows. The rouble has gone up because people are selling all kinds of valuables now to get roubles for current expenses, while those who have large supplies are hoarding in view of further possible emergencies.

There is little actual violence yet, apart from frequent street robberies and the fact that from time to time soldiers loot the few refaining wine shops. The masses are sullen and the purely anarchist propaganda is making headway among them at the expense of the Bolsheviki. But in any case the question is not one of theoretical socialism or anarchism; it is simply a question of what the starving, bitterly disillusioned masses will do when driven to the wall by the inexorable facts.

It is not surprising that while the Bolsheviki plunge on recklessly with their Social experiments, the partisans of autocracy and military dictatorship look on with cynical approval, and directly and indirectly assist in the process.

Out side of Petrograd the country is torn by civil war and harassed by bands of marauding soldiery. The army is in state of disorderly mobilization and neither the committees nor the commissaries have any control over the elemental instincts of those seven millions who were armed to fight the Germans and are now making their own country desolate. The officers are persecuted. They are stripped of all marks of distinction and compelled to live on soldiers' pay while their families are deprived of their maintenance allowance. They are subjected to daily insults and indignities and are lucky if their lives are spared. Those who can have fled to the Don while many resort to physical labour to keep their families alive.

Travelling is a peril. The trains are packed with wandering soldiers who rush all the carriages without distinction of class. Unprotected station employes are terrorized and the rolling stock is gradually breaking down under the strain. Trains come into Petrograd with windows smashed, the lining torn off seats, mirrors broken and metal fittings wrenched out. In the zone of civil war rails are torn up and communication perpetually interrupted. The railways are the arteries of Russia and all this tremendous machinery of transport and supply is slowly but surley collapsing.

Russia cannot make peace and cannot make war, and it is not surprising that the Soviet Government defiance that the peace negotiations will be protracted and that in any case peace will hardly be concluded before March.

EVERY WOMAN
EVERY MOTHER
EVERY DAUGHTER
NEEDS IRON
AT TIMES

To put strength into her nerves and color into her cheeks.

There can be no beautiful, healthy, rosy-cheeked women without iron. The trouble in the past has been that when we put needed iron they generally took ordinary ... which often contained ... did far more harm than good. Today doctors prescribe organic iron—Nuxated Iron. This particular form of iron is easily assimilated, does not blacken nor injure the teeth nor upset the stomach. It will increase the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, irritable, careworn, haggard looking women 100 per cent in two weeks time in many instances. I have seen it in my own practice time and time again.—Ferdinand King, M. D.

NOTE: NUXATED IRON recommended by Dr. Ferdinand King can be obtained from any good druggist who will guarantee success or return your money. It is dispensed in tablet form by all good druggists.

German Leaders Hold Conference Over Week-end

Canadian Press Despatch:

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 14. —Most important conferences were held in Berlin at the week end, according to German newspapers. They were inaugurated by the Emperor's reception to the Crown Prince on Saturday, when Field Marshal Von Hindenburg and Gen. Von Ludendorff also conferred with a number of leading personages. On Sunday there were important discussions between the Higher Army Command and Chancellor Von Hertling, after which the Emperor had an audience with the Chancellor and Hindenburg.

THE MARKETS AT A GLANCE

The following comment on the market situation as regards foodstuffs appeared in Canadian Grocer last week:

Interest in the sugar market during the week centred around a further decline and the increasing of the differentials between the 100-pound bag basis and the smaller bags and cartons. Stocks of granulated sugar are not heavy as yet but demand has been correspondingly light. In some quarters there are fairly heavy stocks of yellow sugar.

In produce and provisions interest was manifested over the fact that margarine continues to be in good sale. There was some doubt at first as to whether or not the consumer would continue to use this commodity after having tried it once. Repeat orders give assurance that the commodity is meeting with favour and that it will continue to do so. Storage creamery butter and dairy butter were in weaker market as a result of the evident popularity of margarine. Storage eggs were in firmer market with advances recorded. Bacon shows a higher tendency in some centres

Ontario flour has been advanced in price owing to the additional cost of bags It is expected the matter of an additional tax on wheat will be settled this week by a conference at Ottawa There was an upward tendency in bulk rolled oats and oatmeal during the week. The British Government is again in the market to purchase rolled oats and this is causing activity with the mills.

Revision in the upward direction on the prices of soaps has now been made qute general Lines to show increases in price during the week include mustard, bird seed, brooms, tobacco, carbonate of soda, salt, oyster shells, baking powders, ammonia, yeast, lye, caustic soda, marmalade, jams, cotton, clothes lines, cream of tartar in packages Nuts showed an easier tendency in some quarters owing to the desire to clear out existing stocks now that the holiday trade has passed. Trade in grocery lines has opened up well during the first few days of the new year.

DO NOT WASTE

An American paper declares that waste is a form of treason. So far as practical results are concerned it may be so regarded. Whoever wastes or destroys any of the things that are needed for the winning of the war is doing the work of the enemy. — Woodstock Sentinel Review.

Graham Bread—

2 cups scalded milk
1-2 cup molasses
2 teaspoons salt
1-4 yeast cake
1-4 cup lukewarm water
2 cups white flour
4 cups graham flour

Mix milk, molasses and salt. When lukewarm add dissolved yeast cake, and both white and graham flour sifted. Beat well. Let rise until double its bulk, beat again, place in greased pans or shape as biscuits. Let rise until nearly double in bulk and bake in an oven which is a little cooler than for white bread. "THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY

Isabel Ostrander

"Doctor," McCarty's tones were low, "if we could rouse her for just a minute; if we could get a word from her as to how it happened—"

The doctor shook his head, and as if in answer a faint breath fluttered from her parted lips, her closed lids lifted wide, and the soft brown eyes stared straight before her and beyond, with a curious fixity in their depths.

"It's all over," the doctor said quietly, and folding a cloth, he laid it over the still face.

The young man's hat dropped from his nerveless fingers and rolled to the feet of Cunliffe, who had turned and was coming swiftly forward. The policeman picked it up and laid it on the table, noting as he did so the cheap, gilt-paper initials, "W.D.," winking up from within the inverted crown. McCarty, too, had turned, and the young man took a step toward him.

"She's—dead?" he asked haltingly.

McCarty nodded without speaking, his eyes searching the face of the man who had sprung so opportunely to his call. It was long and cadaverous, deeply lined for so young a man, and of a pasty, unhealthy hue. The huge ears stood out grotesquely from his conically shaped head, and his every gesture and movement produced a curiously loose jointed effect, as if he was strung on wires.

"Her—her blood is on me."

McCarty started. Obviously the man had spoken literally, for he was glancing down in shuddering repulsion at the sodden blotches which had stained his light-gray summer suit, and yet an undercurrent in his tone, even more the possible significance of the words themselves, suggested an emotion apart from the shock of the affair to a mere bystander.

"You know this woman? Ever see her before?" McCarty rapped out.

The young man made a gesture of denial and leaned suddenly against the desk, his pallid face gray.

"Here, better let me give you a brace." The doctor came forward.

"No, thank you, doc. This gave me a bit of a jolt, but I'll be all right when I get out into the air."

He pulled himself together and then reached for his hat, but Cunliffe whipped out a note book.

"Just a minute. What's your name and address?"

"What for?" the young man countered swiftly.

"The inquest. Coroner'll want to see you about finding her and bringing her in."

"Oh, that!" He paused. "Jerry—Jerome Bowker, eight-twelve, West Twenty-fifth street. Say, it'll be soon—won't it? I was expectin' to leave town."

"Sure, in a day or two." Cunliffe snapped his note book shut and turned again to the door as the murmur of voices rose higher and higher outside, and the harsh, insistent clang of an ambulance bell smote upon the discord.

The white coated surgeon and his orderly had barely pushed their way through the crowd when a deeper-toned gong sounded and a patrol wagon filled with policemen dashed up to the door.

There was little left for the surgeon to do but confirm the resident doctor's conclusion that the woman must have fallen from at least the third floor, and probably higher, to have received the concussion which the condition of the body proved, and he and his orderly had stepped aside when a tall, gray-haired man with keen alert eyes and a sharp, clean-shaven chin appeared on the scene.

"Well, Mac! What are you doing here?" Then, without waiting for a reply, he went on: "This is a bad business."

"Had it is, inspector," responded McCarty. "I was walking along the street, and the poor thing all but fell on me. Cunliffe had passed not five minutes before. I met him at the corner."

He repeated his experience in detail, and Chief Inspector Druce listened, together with two of his detectives, Cunliffe and the resident doctor.

"The flying man!" repeated the inspector, when he had finished. "Now what do you make of that?"

"Delirium, maybe," McCarty hazarded. "And yet I don't know. She seemed wise to what she was saying all right, and trying as hard as she could to make me get it. I couldn't help it, though there was no sound of an engine except that limousine slipping away. Somebody was thumping a pianola to beat the band, and then a woman upstairs screamed."

"I've given orders to clear the crowd away and allow no one who be—"

"I've given orders to clear the premises. Doctor——" the inspector turned with a peremptory note of inquiry.

"Elmsford—Ralph Elmsford." The doctor bowed slightly.

"Dr. Elmsford, can you add anything to what McCarty here has just stated? Can you identify the woman?"

"No. I have never seen her before to my knowledge. Indeed, unless I were well acquainted with her, identification would not be easy." He glanced significantly toward the couch.

"I understand. I'm going to have that bell-boy in now. No objection to our using your office awhile longer?"

The doctor bowed again, and taking the hint, withdrew.

At a word from the inspector a policeman at the door pushed the young negro forward. The first stupefying effect of his fright had given place to a frenzy of excitement. His big eyes rolled until little more than their whites were visible and he stammered uncontrollably in his effort to unburden himself.

"I don't know how c-come it happened, boss. I don't know nothin' 'tall about it. I run m-my elevator up from the basement and I heard somebody yell out—seems l-like it c-come from the street. I went to the entrance, and I seen this gen'leman hyar and another one carrying the lady in. That's all I knows about it, boss, 'deed it is!"

"What's your name?"

"Alfred Griggs."

"How long have you been here?"

"Ev' since I came north, boss, a year and a half."

"You said that this lady wasn't a tenant of the house?"

"No, sir, she ain't. She don't live hyar."

"Ever seen her before?"

The boy hesitated, beads of perspiration standing out on his forehead. Finally he blurted:

"Yes! Leastways I knew her from that striped dress she done gone on. I seen her once befo', I think. Three days ago."

"She was here? Who did she come to see?"

"Nobody—that is, she wasn't payin' no call. She come to look at the apartments."

"Who showed them, you or the superintendent?"

"Me. The Superintendent was busy."

"Did she give any name?"

"No, sir. She said she'd call again."

"What apartments did you show her on this side of the house?"

"Not a one. There ain't none goin' to be vacant. I showed her two on the fifth floor, on the other side, but she didn't say much; just looked around."

"How long did she stay?" The inspector was firing the questions icily at the boy and the latter's slow, moving brain groped to keep pace with him.

"I don't know, boss."

"Don't know? What do you mean?"

"I was called away—I had to run my elevator. I left her 'xaminin' the kitchen of 5-D, and when I came back she'd done gone. She must have walked down the stairs; and I thought it was kind of funny — four flights."

"How was it you didn't see her? Your elevator has open grillwork."

"'Cause I was up on the top floor, 'quntin' with the purse girl of the Fentons. She was bound and determined to get the baby carriage in my elevator, and the superintendent done give orders that it was to go down in the freight one——"

"What time of day was this?"

"Near noon. I went off for my lunch pretty soon after."

"And what time did this lady call to-night?"

"I don't know. I didn't see her. The telephone girl ain't on at night, and I has to 'tend the switchboard as well as my elevator. Lots of people pass me in the hall when I'm busy gettin' numbers and I ain't got no time to take notice of them, 'lessen they use the elevator. Telephone was powerful busy to-night, too."

"Got a record of those calls?"

"Outgoin' ones? Yes, sir."

"You say none of the apartments on this side of the house are vacant?"

"No sir; but a lot of them are closed, just for the summer, while the folks is away in the country. There's two apartments on each floor, facin' on this street, and two at the back, and seven floors above this one. The plan is the same from the next floor right on up."

Toronto, Ont.—"I found 'Favorite Prescription' a splendid tonic for women. Some time ago I became all run-down, weak, nervous and could not eat or sleep. Had severe backaches, pains in my right side. I took Favorite Prescription and it completely built me up in health and relieved me of all the annoying pains and aches."—Mrs. THOMAS GRAYTHAM, 425 Front St.

Niagara Falls, Ont.—"During middle age, I began to go down in health. I would become dizzy, black spots would appear before my eyes. I also suffered with severe pains in the back of my head and my back would ache continually. I was most miserable when I began taking Favorite Prescription, but by its use I came through this critical period in a good healthy condition. It is a splendid medicine for women at this time of life."—Mrs. W. F. TARRANT, 187 Bridge St.

THIS WOMAN ESCAPED AN OPERATION

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Many Others Have Done the Same.

Troy, N. Y.—"I suffered for more than seven months from a displacement and three doctors told me I would have to have an operation. I had dragging down pains, backache and headaches and could not do my housework. My sister who had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound asked me to try it. I have taken several bottles and am now entirely well—so I do all my work—and not a trace of my old trouble. I have told many of my friends what wonderful results they will get from its use."—Mrs. S. J. SEMLER, 1650 5th Ave., Troy, N. Y.

Women who are in Mrs. Semler's condition should not give up hope or submit to such an ordeal until they have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Genuine bears Signature

Colorless faces often show the absence of iron in the blood.

Carter's Iron Pills will help this condition.

"The one I told you about when I first met you on the corner. I recognized the ears of him, and the funny, long face, as soon as I got a good look at him under the light in here. He was hanging around outside there, and as soon as he saw me he began staggering and reeling and I passed him the word to be getting on home.

"Mac, he must have been as sober as we are this minute. 'Twas a blind!"

Taking the Poison Out of Salt.

As far as the supply of salt goes there is enough available to last us forever. Michigan alone, according to the Popular Science Monthly, claims to be able to supply the whole world for 2,000 years with all the salt it needs. But no matter how plentiful salt may be it has the disadvantage of being a poison, for no salt is wholly pure. Thus if the poison in salt can be eliminated vast additional sources will be available.

Scientists have come to the front and have tackled the problem successfully. By adding a solution of just the right amount of sulphate of soda the barium or poison in the salt is changed to sulphate, and with it is removed the pink or greenish color due to lime salts. Thus is made available an unlimited supply of salt, which means more raw material for our chemical industries, because the barium-bearing salt is used for salting hides, for glazing pottery and for making ice.

Milliukoff of Russia.

Professor Paul Milliukoff was widely known in Russia as a historian before the uprising in 1905. During that revolution he sprang into prominence as the founder of the Constitutional Democratic party, which numbered in its ranks some of the noblest and best men in Russia. Before that time Professor Milliukoff had lived in America, where he lectured at Harvard and at the University of Chicago. He studied America's life and familiarized himself with American institutions and the American form of government. During the revolution of 1905 Count Witte, then premier of Russia, offered him a portfolio in the cabinet. Professor Milliukoff declined it because Count Witte would not outline to him the new program of the government. Professor Milliukoff insisted upon a definite policy of reconstruction and return before he would accept the post.

SUFFERED WITH NERVES COULD NOT KEEP QUIET

Diseases of the nervous system are very common.

All the organs of the body may be sound while the nerve centres may be affected.

Many women become run down and worn out by household duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with their nerves shattered, and the heart action weakened.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, flagging energy, or physical breakdown, do not wait until your case becomes hopeless.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will at once quieten the shaking nerves, strengthen the weak heart and build up the entire system.

Mrs. F. Bailey, 221 Earl St., Kingston, Ont., writes: "I was suffering very much with my nerves, so much so that I could not keep myself quiet at all. I was recommended to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I bought three boxes, and I must say I have derived much benefit from them, so much so that my friends have all noticed the change in me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FASHIONS AND CHARITY

New Colours and Colour Combinations to Wear in the Sunny South

New York, January 10, 1918.

The big bazaar held at the Grand Central Palace was full of inspiration for everyone for more reasons than one. Of course purse strings were untied and pennies scattered broadcast, for who can resist the appeal of a bottle of milk for babies, or comforts for our own soldiers? Then, too, from the more worldly point of view of the woman interested in fashions, there was much to see. Aside from the costumes of the represented countries, picturesque to the extreme, there were modern frocks and coats that deserved more than passing note. The thing that impressed one more than anything else was the simplicity of everything. Not a bit of trimming on the smart tailored suits, dresses or coats, except for the liberal use of fur on the more dressy coats and the wool trimmings that are considered so smart.

The whole thing was on so gigantic a scale that it required many visits to really appreciate it. The blaze of light, the quaintly colored booths, and the costumes of the "attendants" presented a dazzling effect. Scattered everywhere, enjoying the fun with almost childish glee, were the soldiers and sailors, our own and those of our Allies. Scotch kilties rubbed shoulders with gay Bohemian girls and conservatively garbed America applauded.

THE QUESTION OF WOOL.

With this very cold weather comes the pressing question of wool. Of course we need winter coats, and the knitted scarfs and collars and cuffs fill long-felt wants. Whether we set aside all the wool for the use of the government or limit ourselves, remains to be seen. At any rate we are all willing to cooperate with the government and only use what we really need. The day of a sweater for every costume is a thing of the past, and we will use what we have.

now in news of thin clothes, spring coats and suits, and sports costumes. Illustrated here is a suit of exceeding smartness. The loose straight lines are particularly appropriate for the soft, loose weaves of the spring materials. The vest, with its deep rolling collar, is of chamois cloth, and the suit itself of a Copenhagen blue. The skirt has wide overlapping seams, which can be left open at the bottom for more freedom in walking. The suit is equally smart, made without the vest, with a belt and deep patch pockets.

COLOR NEWS AND NOTES.

If you would be considered modishly subdue your favorite reds and greens. Not to the point of fadedness, however, far from it! Simply soften them into bewildering beautiful shades. Soft gray-blue lavenders, ashes of roses, that old time favorite, wistaria, and silver grays and lichen grays; of these are the color cards of Fashion. If you desire a spice, add a dash of rosy orange or peacock blue, but the smartest costumes are usually of one tone, with the exception, perhaps, of the lining, which may be gorgeous as

DOCTOR GAVE THIS RUN-DOWN WOMAN VINOL

And She Got Well—Her Nervousness Disappeared

Flint, Mich.—"I keep house for my family of six and got into a generally run-down condition. I was weak, nervous and could not sleep, and had headache a good deal of the time. My doctor prescribed Vinol and it made me well and strong. I am a good deal less nervous and can sleep nights."—Clara Smith, 1213 W. 4th Ave., Flint, Mich.

We sell Vinol on a positive guarantee to make nervous, weak, run-down women well and strong or return their money. Try it anyway.

you please. Wool embroideries and stitchings are used with effect, either in the same shade of the costume or in contrasting colors. The Chinese, Japanese and East Indian influence is plainly felt in the newest designs and colorings. Sometimes they are fairly riots of colors, almost breath-taking in their beauty.

EXTEND THE GOOD WORK.

And while the governments, both Federal and Provincial, are at it, why not bolster up the laws that would require a government O.K. on the flotation of any concern that seeks to draw its capital from the pockets of the people, and at the same time seeks to keep them from knowing that they are likely to lose all that they put into it. Steps have been taken to check this evil but there is still too large a margin on which protectors can work.—Guelph Mercury.

A Fad May Be Made Worth While

HAVE you a fad? If you have not you are missing a great deal of the fun of living. Many people carry their fads to extremes and so make them not only a burden to themselves but to other people, but the girl who has a fad which she takes lightly and pursues for diversion will find that there is nothing which brings more zest into her life.

Arouses Interest.

The collection of stamps may seem a foolish thing to those who are not interested in such a hobby, but there are many things to be said in its favor. The small boy who collects stamps is very likely, if he is not hopelessly stupid, to have his interest aroused not only in the stamps, but in the countries which they represent. Just so is it with the girl who has the photographic album containing views of places and people without becoming more vitally interested in both. And the girl who is interested in the world she lives in is the girl who has her vision broadened.

Amateur photography is not an expensive fad if properly followed, and it has the great advantage of becoming profitable should it become more than a fad. Many a man or woman who began to take vacation pictures for the fun of it has been able to place many interesting views with publishers.
